The boy has become so expert in the puffing of the weed that two cigars a day can now be consumed by him without even the slightest indication of any ill effects. He doesn't chew tobacco yet, but he is young and has some time left to learn.

What is remarkable about the chap is the fact that despite this smoking habit he has never been ill a day and is fat and chubby, weighing a little in excess of fifty pounds.

Young Roth also is said to be adept now in making a "touch."

"Pop, give me a nickle for a good cigar," is his style.

When he doesn't get his regular ration of the weed he creates a rumpus by crying and indulging in antics that arouse the household.

His mother said she believes he formed a taste for tobacco by biting on stumps that he found in the house.

When a reporter asked the boy if he could smoke, he said:—"Sure, give me a match."

Then with the air of a contented man he calmly struck a match and lit up. He puffed away joyously and ran away to play still clinging to the weed.

KEEPING HIS BALANCE.

A Story With a Moral That Is Told Among the Tartars.

There is a story told among the Tartars which has a moral for the civilized men of the present day. It is to this effect: Robo, cousin of the great mogul, was condemned to death for participation in a rebellion. The most skillful swordsman in the empire was provided for the execution, and the great mogul and his court were present as spectators.

The thin, keen blade flashed in the sunlight and descended upon the bare neck of Robo, who stood upright to receive the stroke.

The executioner's work was so deftly done that, though the head was severed, not a vital organ was disturbed. Robo remained standing.

"What, Robo, art thou not beheaded?" exclaimed the great mogul.

"My lord, I am," replied Robo, "but as long as I keep my balance right my head will not fall off."

The great mogul was placated. A band was put on Robo's neck, and he recovered. He afterward became a loyal subject and was made cashier of the empire because, as the great mogul remarked:

"He knows that if he keeps his balance right his head will not come off."—Exchange.

MAKESHIFT COMPASS.

Float a Magnetized Sewing Needle In a Bowl of Water.

If a thoroughly dry and clean sewing needle is carefully laid on the surface of water in a basin the needle will float in spite of the high density of steel—seven or eight times that of water. On close inspection it is found that the surface of the water is depressed under the needle, much as if there were a thin film stretched over the water and slightly indented by the weight of the needle.

This property of liquids of offering a certain resistance to a force exerted upon their surface is termed "surface tension." The magnitude of the force of surface tension varies from one liquid to another. It is greatest in the case of mercury. The cause of the phenomenon must probably be looked for in the attraction of the liquid molecules to one another.

A sewing needle thus floating upon water may be used as a compass if it has previously been magnetized. It will then point north and south and will maintain this position if the containing vessel is moved about. If the needle is displaced by force it will return to its position along the magnetic meridian as soon as the restraint is removed.

Strategy.

"Doctor, that ointment you left for my husband to use on his rheumatic elbow may be all right, but there's no use telling him to rub it in. He won't take the trouble to do that. You don't know him as well as I do."

"I think I do, madam. I put some stuff in that ointment that will make his elbow itch like fury, and he'll have to rub it."

An Oversight.

"Waiter," said a guest at a hotel as he inspected his bill before leaving, "there is one item omitted."

"What item, sir?" inquired the waiter.

"The manager said 'Good morning' to me yesterday and has forgotten to charge for it!"

Just the Opposite.

"You are a poor young man?"

"I am."

"Then what you want is a thrifty economical wife."

"Not at all. What I want is a rich liberal wife."

Woman's World

SHE EARNS $10,000 A YEAR.

Miss Katherine I. Harrison, Private Secretary to the Late H. H. Rogers.

Katherine I. Harrison, private secretary to the late H. H. Rogers, is harder to reach than J. P. Morgan, James Stillman, John W. Gates or any other of the kings of finance. She is the one woman in the world who knows everything that goes on in Standard Oil. For doing what she is required to do—and not the least of her duties is to keep her mouth sealed—she receives $10,000 a year. You might count on your fingers the women in the United States who receive this salary.

What made Katherine I. Harrison so valuable to H. H. Rogers and his partners in the Standard Oil? A hundred answers could be given to this question. Other women are as bright, and other women are possessed of equal executive ability. But the best answer of them all may be summed up in two words—absolute trustworthiness.

Miss Harrison can keep a secret. She can hold information inviolate that would make a poor man a millionaire.

MISS KATHERINE I. HARRISON.

There are men who would pay a king's ransom to know a tithe of what she knows.

This important personage in the Standard Oil is tall and spare—close to six feet. Her face is stern, but comely. Altogether she is an attractive type of the American business woman. She dresses well, but severely. Her favorite office dress is a plain but short skirt of dullish blue, a white shirt waist, a blue four-in-hand tie and a turndown collar. When she goes out she wears a short, closely cut jacket of covert cloth and a toque trimmed with feathers. Her shoes are low cut and have broad soles.

But first of all the observer notes Miss Harrison's eyeglasses. They are set in a golden bow and have great, thick lenses. When you try to look at her through these fortresses of glass you see yourself reflected in tiny replica. On the contrary, they magnify to you Miss Harrison's steady, insistent eyes until they wring from you your secret.

Miss Harrison wrote most of Mr. Rogers' letters. She signed many of his checks. She never committed her employer to anything.

Miss Harrison lives with her mother and two sisters in a handsome Queen Anne house at 1354 Dean street, Brooklyn. She contributes to the welfare of the family and has a pretty fortune.

And how old is Miss Harrison? Well, she was Mr. Rogers' private secretary for eighteen years. She may be thirty-five; she may be more.

Next to Mrs. Hetty Green she ranks today as probably the most important business woman in all New York.

New View of Education of Women.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot has been exceedingly gracious to college women's clubs since he laid down the burden of Harvard direction, and only spiteful women recall what strenuous opposition he made to certain innovations in Radcliffe. He has been addressing the intellectual women in and out of season, and he has urged them not to henpeck the men because of their intellectual attainments. In a recent address before a college club of Baltimore he praised higher education for women enthusiastically, but he deprecated the limited view generally assigned to it. He thinks that in the home education is of more genuine benefit to society and for the future of the race than in the professions and that in the last analysis knowledge benefits women only in so far as it trains them for their natural duties. Instead of seeing the menace other great educators see in the desire which the modern woman has for obtaining the best educational advantages, Dr. Eliot takes vast comfort in the idea. The next generation, he thinks, being trained by intelligent and intellectual mothers, will swing the pendulum the other way for the men of the American race. Instead of being consumed with business ambitions to the exclusion of mental culture, he holds, they will be trained from their cradle upward to estimate properly the necessity of college training.

HOLLAND'S "ORANGE BUD."

Little Princess Juliana's Start In the World.

Princess Juliana, the "Dutch baby," as she is universally known, is almost a month old, and every one still speaks well of her. The "Orange Bud," as her own people delight in calling her, has, like most babies, blue eyes and fair hair, and, although Prince Henry, her father, is reported to have exclaimed, "Only a girl!" the queen, her mother, greeted the announcement of the child's sex with a smile.

Juliana is not a common name in Holland, and practically every one expected as a matter of course that the baby would be named after her mother, but the parents preferred to give her as first name that of one of her most illustrious ancestresses. Juliana, countess of Stolberg, wife of William of Nassau-Dillenburg, was the mother of the five brothers, William the Silent among them, who helped to free Holland from the Spanish yoke. The baby's other names are Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina, the first after Louise de Coligny, William the Silent's fourth wife, who, like Juliana of Stolberg, is noted in Dutch history for her piety and charity. The next two are the names of the grandmothers.

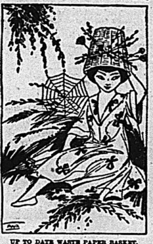
The Dutch custom of distributing muisjes, or caraway candies, on buttered biscuits was not neglected at court. Every one in any way connected with the court was presented with a bag of the little sweets with biscuits inclosed, the whole being put up in a bag of the national colors, red, white and blue, tied with an orange ribbon.

An enterprising Dutch astrologer cast the horoscope of the little princess twenty minutes after her birth. This is what he says: "Princess Juliana will be trustworthy, honorable and prudent in word and deed. She will possess great power of will, which, however, will not be uselessly employed. She will be sympathetic and philanthropic and will work disinterestedly and quietly for others without desire for reward, but seeking perfection in all things. The princess will also follow art and science and will have a special talent for music and poetry. Companionable and eloquent of speech, she will possess the knack of getting on well with all sorts of people."

A CLEVER ADAPTATION.

Jap Tradesmen Have "Caught on" to the Peach Basket Hat.

The subjects of the mikado know the secret of effective decoration in the home, and something of the charm that is associated with their homekeeping may be imparted by the introduction of articles of Japanese origin for service and ornament into the American home. The selection here made is particularly adapted to the country home, the bright colorings fitting in appropriately with the fittings of bungalow or cottage.



UP TO DATE WASTE PAPER BASKET.

Reference is made to the doll seen in the sketch, which illustrates Japanese quickness and sense of humor. The modish peach basket hat has furnished newspaper writers and cartoonists with topics and subjects innumerable. All of this fun poking has not been lost on the stolid Japanese, it would seem, for the original of the doll here sketched was conspicuously displayed recently in a big Japanese shop and it may be noted that the wastebasket that serves her for a hat is decorated in a style that can hardly be matched by the most extravagant production of the American milliner.

Elephant Ear.

The elephant ear is one of the most striking plants for use in bedding, borders or for clump planting on the lawn. It grows from six to ten feet high, and its large green leaves grow to be three or four feet long and two and one-half feet wide. It has been used with great success in subtropical gardening in the central and southern states. It makes an excellent plant for the margins of aquatic gardens, as it thrives best if given plenty of water.

It grows from tubers, which are best started in pots in sand and grown indoors until June, when they should be planted out in well drained, warm, light soil. A rich soil and frequent waterings with liquid manure will produce excellent results. In the fall all the leaves except the central ones should be cut back to within two inches of the crown. Let the plant remain in this condition for a few days to ripen and then take up and store in any cold frost proof place.

These plants have a variety of uses besides ornament. In the Pacific tropics they are made into a drink. The starchy roots are edible and in Japan are used much like our potatoes. The young leaves are also edible when boiled.

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

light aloft now," said Di Loria, half-proudly, half-mournfully.

"America's hands are working hands; she is a pioneer, ont a prophet, and it was Columbus of Genoa who gave her to the world."

"May she never know trials such as ours have been!"

"She will not, but she may succumb to a more cruel doom, one that threatens now all the nations of the north, the doom of a hopeless materialism. That will not come to Italy, I think, fo r the spirit of beauty, which is also reverence, that has so long wihstood calamity will be able to resist the harder strain of prosperity."

They entered the belvedere and stepped out to the balcony, from whence the chief glories of earth seemed to sweep to their sight. Below them lay the smiling city; beyond it the bay stretched serene in the light of the radiant heaven that bent above it, the smooth surface of the shining water matching the deep blue of the cloudless skies. Nola and the Apennines were in full sight and as clear as the great dome of San Gennaro down in the heart of the city. Vines clung to the gray walls beneath them and nestled gently in the soft breeze, while beneath all a low, deep roar like the distant thunder of many waves, or that mysterious symphony caught and treasured by the sheils that are brought from the depths of the sea, was borne to them. On and on it murmured, until the profound monotone became intolerable as that note of an organ, which, dwelt on too long, seems to shudder painfully through every nerve.

"It is the sound of all the feet that pass, all the voices that speak in the streets of Naples," said Di Loria.

"It is the sigh with which a great city draws her breath," said Rhoda, and they left the wide view and the old monastery and went down once more into the crowded ways that lay below.

CHAPTER XI.

FROM REGY'S POINT OF VIEW

"Mother," said Regy, "do you think it was fair to let me in for a sentimental journey?"

"My dear?"

"Well, you know I have no conscientious objections to fine feelings and the rest of it, but you know you alone are a strain on the emotions, and when it comes to you and Rhoda and Di Loria—Dio mio, as our friend would say; what is a man of moderate susceptibilities to do?"

Mrs. Winter laughed. "Poor Regy" she said, smoothing his neat brown hair away from his brow. Then she became grave. "Don't make a jest of your best self, my boy."

'The Lord saved me that trouble, mammy. Don't abuse your special privileges by taking me seriously. Who would want me around if I tried that dodge myself? It wouldn't impose on any one but you, and I suppose I could make you credit me with a seething nature if I wanted to. Oh, mother, mother!" said Regy.

"Now to do Italy," he went on, as she made no answer, "with three such exalted beings is wearing, very wearing. I don't yearn for Eugene's company—not habitually—but it would be worth something to have him here now. That is, regarded entirely in the light of an amusement for me, otherwise—"

"Otherwise?

"I think he had better stay in Vienna."

'That has been discussed and agreed upon."

"From his point of view, always from his point of view. Oh, the sublime indifference of lovely woman to the interest of another woman where those of a man for whom she has a liking are involved! I'm beginning to have some hopes of Rhoda though."

"I don't understand you."

"She sees the contrast, that's all."

"What contrast?"

"Between Eugene and the most noble marquis, of course."

"You cannot think that!"

"I don't think it, I know it."

'Regy, you distress me!"

"I don't see why."

"Have you no feeling for your cousin?"

"Not much. Eugene is a very good fellow in his own unique way, but I'd shoot a sister of mine before I'd let her marry him."

"How little you know him."

"Well enough for that, at all events."

"Rhoda would never be content with a lesser man."

"Where's your lesser man?"

"You have spoken—I hope mistakenly—of Di Loria."

"You judge him—I know mistakenly—to be less of a fellow than Eugene."

"You cannot pretend that he has Eugene's talents."

"He does very well without them."

"I am not sure that he has very much character."

"Eugene certainly has plenty, but there is a difference of opinion as to its quality."

"And I don't for a moment imagine that his evident admiration for Rhoda is more than the usual Italian effusiveness over any attractive woman, especially one who has the additional charm of novelty."

"That is a point against him, if you are in the right," said Regy, gravely. "It lessens my really good opinion of his intelligence. For if ever two people were ordained for each other by all the rules that govern human felicity, those are the identical two."

"My dear boy, you lessen my really good opinion of your intelligence."

"Why?" asked Regy, unmoved.

"Rhoda, with all her theories and convictions and uneasy aspirations, the modern woman to the tips of her fingers, to marry an Italian, a Neapolitan, and a Catholic, and go back two centuries."

"My dear mother, your mild Unitarianism is hide-bound Calvinism

THE CAPTIVE SULTAN

HOW ABDUL SPENDS HIS TIME AT SALONICA.

The Former Despot of Turkey Is Becoming Accustomed to His New Condition — Abdul Hamid Was Cruel as a Child and Used to Torture Animals Just to See Them Suffer—Characteristic Acts.

Abdul Hamid, the ex-Sultan of Turkey, is slowly becoming more accustomed to his surroundings and reconciled to his captivity. He has cast off his aforetime morose demeanor, no longer gives way to outbursts of anger, and conducts himself in a quiet and retired manner.

Repeatedly he expresses his satisfaction at being kept at Salonica, requests his guardians that he may be allowed to remain at the Villa Allatini, and prays that he may be permitted to live there and end his days "like a good old man." For whatever may be the opinion of his former subjects, the ex-Sultan's confidence in his own virtues remains undiminished.

"Why do my people say and write such bad things about me, and attempt to blacken my character?" he frequently demands. "Why do they revive everything that is bad, and never mention all the good things I have done for my country? After all, the bad things were not due to me; they were the works of my councillors. Every man I had round me was bad—absolutely bad. I had no opportunity of choosing my advisers."

Very early in the morning Abdul repairs to a small ante-room overlooking a small portion of the main road. Here he takes up his position at the window. Almost his first occupation is to give orders to Emil Bey for his day's food. These orders are handed to an agent of the municipality, who is detailed off to do the necessary marketing. The cuisine is in the hands of one of Abdul's old cooks, who was specially brought for the purpose from Yildiz.

The dethroned monarch's favorite delicacy is shrimps, which just now are in season in Salonica. He is now being accorded the greatest liberty, with pens and paper being supplied him, and he is allowed, if he so desires, to walk in the garden at will. He has, however, up to the present taken no advantage of this extension of liberty, preferring to remain cooped up in his little ante-chamber.

He sleeps badly, and often paces the floor of his bedroom the whole night through. For this reason every afternoon he retires for a brief siesta. He takes little pleasure in the society of his wives, and seldom sees them, with the exception of the mother of his son Hamil Effendi, who is in almost constant attendance upon him. His sole recreation lies in the newspapers, which are liberally supplied, and are read to him by his favorite wife. He takes the greatest possible interest in passing events both at home and abroad, but outside of this he has no occupation and passes the day with the utmost monotony. Of late, however, he has had a desire to employ himself with amateur carpentering, and in accordance with this idea a full set of joiner's tools has been ordered from a Parisian factory.

Various interesting conversations have been the outcome of Abdul Hamid's newspaper reading. When he had been read the account of the investiture of his brother as Sultan amid the acclamations of the populace, he was considerably agitated.

"Why is it," he demanded, "that the people like my brother when they hate me?" "Because," he was told, "the people do not like what you like, and like what you do not." A grunt of disapproval was the ex-Sultan's only response. He has a considerable aversion to the Constantinople journal Yeni Gazeta. Frequently he gives vent to his disgust at this newspaper.

One day he was complaining to Fethy Bey, his chief guardian, of his lack of occupation. "When I have no papers to read," he said, "I have nothing to do; I do not amuse myself at all." Fethy Bey replied asking him why he did not write the memoirs of his reign. "You continually aver," said Fethy, "that you have done only good by Turkey. Write your memoirs, and perhaps the people will then understand how they have misjudged you."

"Yes," replied Abdul, "that is a very excellent idea, but I have not here the necessary notes to compile such a volume. They are all at Yildiz." For a moment the fallen monarch was wrapped in silent thought, and then he added. "But, after all, I am sure that the historians will vindicate me, and even if the Turkish historians do not do so, I am certain that the foreign historians will do me justice."

It is said that as a young man Abdul Hamid was wont to maltreat small animals with the sole object of seeing them suffer. This trait would seem to have developed in later years to a total lack of sympathy and consideration for those about him.

When Abdul Hamid took train at Constantinople, among the few people present was the woman who had been foster-mother to Hamil Effendi, and who, no doubt, because of the blighted future of the youth she had nurtured from birth, was crying bitterly. Perceiving this, the imperial prisoner faced his warders and demanded: "What is that woman doing here; who told her to come? I do not want her; send her away immediately."

Difficulty Easy to Overcome.

"But are you able to support a wife?" asked the old gentleman.

"Well," replied the youth, "you know it is said that two can live almost as cheaply as one in such circumstances."

"Ye-es; I've heard that stated," admitted the old gentleman doubtfully.

"So it occurred to me," went on the youth cheerfully, "that you would not begrudge the slight extra cost that will be entailed as a result of this addition to your family."

Many residents of this city and vicinity will take in the Cobourg Horse Show.

Up to yesterday, over 450 people had paid their dog taxes in this city.

About the weariest-looking people you see these days are those who have just come back from a holiday. Nothing tires a man so much as a good long rest.

A stranger in the city wonders at the alleged scarcity of screen doors on Belleville stores. He thinks the flies may have something to do with the typhoid.

Aletha is Still On Cow Island.

DID NOT GET OFF YESTERDAY AFTERNOON, AS EXPECTED — DAMAGE MAY BE SERIOUS.

The Aletha did not make her escape from Cow island last night, as expected. It was reported that she had done so, but it was a false alarm. The boat was still hard and fast on the rocks this afternoon, and mariners who have experience in such matters say the job of getting her off is going to be worse than at first expected. She is up firm and fast on a solid rock bottom, they say, and may be found to be rather damaged when she once more floats.

Strenuous efforts were made by the Brockville and a tug to get the Aletha off yesterday afternoon, but there was nothing doing. To-day the dredge was working on her.

Tramp Gets $2 a Day For Going To Prison

Denison, Texas, is the scene of a hard fight between the liquor interests and the law abiding citizens, according to Herbert W. Wolcott, a Kansas City lawyer, who recently returned from a trip through the largest State in the Union. He told of a tramp whose jail life he declared to be the happiest of which he had ever heard, says the Chicago News.

"The liquor interests," he said, "wished to test the law and not caring to risk going to jail themselves, they hired a tramp to be arrested and face trials. He was to receive $2 a day for every day he remained in jail. The man was arrested duly and lay in jail for some days before his case was called, during which time the saloon men paid his salary of $2 per day.

"When he was finally tried he was convicted, the saloonkeepers appealed the case and in order to avoid paying the $2 to their proxy while he was awaiting trial they went to court with a plea that it wasn't right for their client to lie in jail so long. He was released, but the saloon men had to furnish a large appeal bond. Then their trouble began!

"Every day their wily representative would approach one or the other of them and threaten to leave town thereby forfeiting his bail, unless sundry drinks and 'pieces of change' were forthcoming. The threat always brought the money. Finally the interests got tired of it all and when the tramp was convicted at the second trial they allowed the matter to rest. They are now paying him $2 every day until he serves out his sentence of one and one-half years."

Sham Directors In U. S Banks.

UNCLE SAM HAS HIS SHARE OF THEM, AS WELL AS SOME OTHER COUNTRIES.

Washington, Aug. 15. — Many replies have been received at the office of the comptroller of the currency to the letters of enquiry which were sent to all directors of national banks several months ago, asking whether they had an actual knowledge of the condition of the bank with which they were connected. Lawrence O. Murray, the comptroller of the currency, sent out these letters in an effort to impress on the directors of national banks the important obligation resting upon them in regard to the banks and the public.

The replies indicate that the directors do not take an important part in the administration of the national banks.

Four per cent. of the directors admitted they knew nothing of their banks, while only 25 per cent. of the directors responded that they knew what were the real conditions of their institutions.

Loans were approved by only 31 per cent. of the directors, and in the remainder of the institutions the loans were left entirely to the discretion of the officers of the banks.

Eighty per cent. of the directors could not certify as to the genuineness of signatures on notes discounted by the bank and 6 per cent. of the directors tacitly permitted over drafts.

INCIDENT SHOWING HOW INSPECTORS ARE BRIBED AT CONEY ISLAND.

Brooklyn, Aug. 16. —The tale of a $1,000 bill enclosed in a box of cigars and alleged to have been handed to Edward A. Langan, chief inspector of elevators in the bureau of buildings, by the officers of a scenic railway in Coney Island, was told to the commissioner of accounts to-day at the investigation of the administration of Borough President Coler. The alleged bribe was said to have been tendered to the inspector by the Dare Devil Rider company, and the story was told by August Fleming, machinist and patentee of a revolving globe tower, who also swore that he had been told and believed two bribes of $50 each were given to Langan by the Globe Amusement company for having the plans of the revolving structure passed by the bureau of buildings.

In support of the second statement, a cash book of the company was shown, in which there was an entry under date of July 29, 1908, as follows:

"Building Department, plans, $50."

On the check book was shown a stub for the same amount, with the abbreviation "B. D. Pl.," which was sworn to mean "Building Department plans." Another stub and another entry dated March 9, 1908, and made out in the same manner, was also placed in evidence.

August Fleming, the inventor, swore that he had heard the story of the Red Devil Rider cigars, with the thousand dollar bill enclosed, direct from the lips of Chief Inspector Langan himself.

BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA.

"For ten years," states Capt. McDonald of Kingston, Ontario, "I have been a terrible sufferer from Bronchitic Asthma and often it was so bad that for nights at a time I couldn't sleep. I spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and medicines, but one dollar outfit of Catarrhozone cured me. Have no bother now from any old troubles."

The reason Catarrhozone is so successful is because its healing balsam and vapors get at the root of the bronchial irritation, where the disease has its root. Other remedies work through the blood or the stomach. Catarrhozone works directly on the diseased membranes and always does cure Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh. The dollar outfit of Catarrhozone contains two months' treatment and invariably cures. Small trial size 50c. all dealers or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

DRINKING LESS WHISKY USING MORE TOBACCO.

The wave of prohibition that has been sweeping over the United States in the last few years cost the Government $7,641,978.42 in revenue during the fiscal year ended with June 30, says the Indianapolis News. The loss is figured from a comparison with the returns from spirits and fermented liquors in the fiscal year preceding. Of this big sum the heaviest loss was traceable to the decreasing manufacture and use of whiskies. Beer, porter and other similarly fermented liquors came next in the proportion of lost revenue to the Government.

In his report to Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh, the acting commissioner of internal revenue, Robert Williams, Jr., sets forth some interesting figures. The revenue from whiskey fell off more than $5,500,000.

A peculiarity of the report is that the people of the United States, while throttling thirst, have let their craving for narcotics apparently go unchecked. The increased revenue from tobacco exceeded $2,000,000, and the army of cigarette smokers contributed a good proportion of this, the increased amount paid in as a result of the growth of the habit over last year being $722,245.30. That the cigarette is supplanting the cigar is shown by the fact that the loss of revenue on cigars over the previous fiscal year was nearly a half million dollars.

In summing up his report, Acting Commissioner Williams declares that losses are attributable to the falling off in consumption of certain commodities. The decrease in distilled spirits consumed exceeds five million gallons, and in ale and beer nearly 2,500,000 barrels. There were 152,185,830 fewer cigars smoked. On the other hand the cigarette smokers of the country burned up 703,105,065 more cigarettes than in the previous year.

WANTED TO MAKE HAY.

A Dominant Parish Clerk With Little Regard For the Dead.

Unfortunately a very young clergyman came to the parish, and then John, the parish clerk, did just, and only just, what he liked. A leading dissenter had died and his wife had named a day to the vicar for the funeral. One fine day in July the funeral procession duly arrived, and the vicar advanced in full canonicals to meet the corpse at the churchyard gate. To his amazement the widow advanced toward him in a perfect fury, shaking her fist in his face and shouting: "Do you call this religion? Where's the gravie? 'Tis shameful to a poor lone widow. Where's his gravie (grave), I tell you?"

The vicar then, for the first time, perceived that John, the clerk, was missing and that no grave had been prepared. Upon inquiry he was told that John was haymaking in the park. A messenger was dispatched to bring him, and shortly John appeared, limping along with a prong in his hand, his shirt sleeves rolled up to the elbow, his coat upon his arm and a large straw hat upon his head. He advanced with perfect composure, and when the vicar began to say, "This is very disgraceful, John," he replied:

"You bide a bit. I sees what it be. You let me talk to she. She knows me, and I knows she." Then, addressing the widow, he proceeded: "Now, I tell ye what it be. You listen to reason. Now we's had rain, rain, rain, and now we're got a fine day we must make our hay. Now your corpsey he won't hurt. Come a wet day, 'tain't no odds to you. You bring your umbrellas, but our hay'd spile. Now, you take he home and listen to reason. Your old man he'd 'a' listened to reason. Hay's a thing as can only be made when 'tis fine. 'Tain't no odds to corpseys whether 'tis wet or dry."

So completely was the woman convinced by the irresistible logic of John's argument that she was completely subdued, and if the vicar had not insisted upon some of the haymakers being called in to dig the grave the funeral would have turned home again.—Cornhill Magazine.

Another Prescription.

The middle aged man who was giving himself a half hour's walk before breakfast had taken his ten-year-old boy along. "Papa," asked the lad, "do you like such a long walk as this?"

"Not particularly."

"What do you take it for?"

"I thought you knew. I am doing it by the advice of Dr. Ringgold. He says it is the best exercise in the world and every man ought to devote half an hour before breakfast, if he has the leisure, to"—

Honk, honk!

Heeding the warning, they stepped out of the way of a huge touring car, which whizzed past them at the rate of thirty miles an hour. The man who was steering it waved his hand in greeting, and the middle aged man responded rather stiffly.

"Why, he knows you, doesn't he, papa?" asked the boy.

"Yes."

"Who is he?"

"Dr. Ringgold."

Clyde Fitch's Story.

The production at the Garrick Theatre, London, of Mr. Clyde Fitch's play, "The Woman in the Case," recalls an amusing story which he tells regarding an incident that occurred during an amateur rehearsal of "As You Like It." Mr. Fitch held this performance in a garden overlooked by a building in course of construction. "As my amateurs," says the popular dramatist, "postured and chanted the bard's beautiful lines, bricklayers above us laid bricks, carpenters planed boards, and masons chipped stones. And one afternoon, during a silent pause in our rehearsal, we heard a voice from the new building say, gravely, 'I prithee, malapert, pass me yonder brick.'"

Food Economy In Hotels.

"Popular opinion is that half of the foodstuffs purchased by a hotel is wasted," said an assistant manager of a New York hotel. "Now, that is not true. A large hotel employs experts who plan so cleverly that almost everything is used from day to day. Take the bread, for instance. What is not used at once is used later for the employes and also for making the toasts on which many special meat and other dishes are served. Cakes are made up according as the demand is for the day. It is known that there will be a greater demand on matinee days, when the tea garden and the restaurants are crowded. Don't believe too much about the waste."

The Siamese Treaty.

The British Empire has just added 15,000 square miles to its area, and 450,000 citizens in Siam. The full details are now published in the treaty signed on March 10. The Siamese Government agree not to cede or lease any land to any foreign Government. In exchange "we renounce all rights of extra-territorial jurisdiction while we and our Asiatic fellow-subjects will in future be subject to Siamese courts, in which a European legal advisor will sit as a judge, and decide. The Indian or Burmese British subject will be tried by a Siamese, who will decide, but in the presence of a European adviser.

Not Gratifying.

Some one sent the manuscript of a story to a literary friend, with the request that he would criticise it. The friend returned it with the following note:

"My Dear Blank—Your book contains much that is both new and good, but what is new is not good and what is good is not new."

Mrs. "Look Here."

"Women in Korea have often no names at all," says Dr. Weir, a missionary. "They are referred to as 'Look here.'"

AT THE BEEHIVE

Chas. N. Sulman.

The best time to cut flowers is early in the morning, while the dew is upon them, or else during the evening. As soon as cut the steams should be placed in water, even if in a temporary way, if not convenient to arrange them at once in their proper positions.

When the flowers have to be packed early in the morning to be sent a long distance they must be cut extra early or, what is better, cut the previous evening and placed in water all night in a cool place which can be kept close. In this way they absorb all the water it is possible for them to do, being consequently fresher when unpacked.—Gardening Illustrated.

Some of the Effects of Eyestrain

Are tired eyes, pain and soreness in eyeballs, pain on top and at back of head, blurring of print, intolerance of light, dislike of being in a crowd, dizziness, red or swollen eyes after close work. These are some of the ways the eyes have of showing strain, and all of which may be relieved by the use of the PROPER glasses. If you suspect that your eyes are not entirely normal do not delay, but consult us at once. The longer you wait the more difficult to get satisfactory results. If glasses are not needed you can be sure that we will not recommend them.

Turbinia Rammed Steamers Kingston And North King.

BIG BOAT RAN AMUCK AT CHARLOTTE — ROUGH HOUSE IN THE HARBOR.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 16. — The steel passenger steamer Turbinia, of Toronto, with many passengers on board, ran amuck in Charlotte harbor last night and barely escaped doing serious damage to a number of vessels.

In some unexplained way the engineer of the Turbinia turned on full steam ahead, it is said, and the Turbinia rammed the Kingston, a large passenger steamer, and the North King, a smaller passenger boat belonging to Kingston, and bumped into the Arundel, a passenger boat which was just coming into port.

The Kingston, because of the force of the impact, rammed the schooner Cornelia. There were hundreds of passengers aboard of the Kingston and Arundel at the time of the collision. While considerably injured, the Turbinia and Kingston were able to leave port fortheir trips.

NOT BADLY DAMAGED.

Kingston, Aug. 16.— The steamer Kingston arrived here this morning with her bulwarks boarded up from the bump that the steamer Turbinia gave her. The injuries which she received were not of such a nature as to prevent her from making her trip. Although last night was one of the roughest ever experienced on the lake for this time of the year the Kingston, despite her injury, crossed to this port and arrived in good time. The repairs will be made as the steamer proceeds, and she will not be tied up in any way.

Mr. E. E. Horsey, general manager of the Lake Ontario and Bay of Quinte Steamship Company, when asked as to the accident, said that he had had no special advices of it, except such as came over the general wires, and that he felt certain, therefore, that no serious damage had been done his boat, the North King. If such had been done, he says the officers of the boat would have got in instant touch with him. His own theory was that the Turbinia had hit the boats a glancing blow rather than a full head-on blow.

THE ENGINEER DISMISSED.

Toronto, August 17. — Second Engineer J. Boag, who was in charge of the machinery when the steamer Turbinia crashed into several vessels in Charlotte harbor on Sunday night, has been dismissed. General Manager Goodearle, of the Turbinia Steamship Company, who was a passenger on the steamer, investigated the matter after the collision, and dismissed Hoag immediately. The Canadian and American Marine Departments will investigate, the latter authorities having already requested the officers of the different steamers to make a report to them at once.

Bad Water Causes Epidemic Among Kingston Horses.

Kingston, August 16 — Typhoid influenza has become very prevalent among horses in Kingston district. Typhoid influenza is almost similar to typhoid fever which afflicts humans, and is very dangerous. Up to the present, however, there has been only a few fatalities in this district.

According to a local veterinary the disease is caused by impure water. It is quite noticeable that the disease is more prevalent with horses that are pasturing in marshy lands, where there are stagnant pools.

The disease first made its appearance seven years ago, when the death list was very large. Since then the disease has been gradually decreasing. At the present time, however, the disease is claiming many horses about Peterboro.

Ella Gingles Went Back of Own Accord.

YOUNG IRISH LACEMAKER WAS NOT DEPORTED — HER CHAPERON SAYS SO.

New York, Aug. 16.—Ella Gingles, the young Irish lacemaker whose trial in Chicago for larceny from her employer attracted national attention because of her sensational charge that an attempt had been made to force her into "white slavery," and who once resided in Belleville, Ont., sailed for her home in Ireland on the steamer Campania. After her acquittal, Orangemen in the west and in this city raised a fund to send her back to Ireland and start her in the lace business there.

Before sailing Mrs. Cook said to the reporters: "I wish you would state distinctly that Miss Gingles is not being deported, nor was she given any intimation by any court order that it would be best for her to leave the country."

Lightning Struck House At Trenton

RESIDENCE OF MR. YOUNG HIT BY ELECTRIC-FLUID AND INMATES BADLY SHOCKED AND SCARED.

During a severe thunderstorm which visited Trenton on Sunday afternoon last, lightning struck the residence of Mr. Young, barrister, of that town, and while it did not set the house on fire, shocked the inmates badly and gave them a severe scare. Mr. and Mrs. Young were away across the lake at the time, but their children and other young people who were in the house at the time had an experience that they would not care to have repeated. The damage was not serious, though by no means trifling.

Fire in Gasoline Yacht Last Night.

FIREMEN HAD A RUN, BUT SERVICES WERE NOT REQUIRED.

About 10 o'clock last night the fire alarm rang, the cause of the trouble being a fire in the gasoline yacht "Lalla," owned by Mr. Robert Sills, the yacht, at the time, being in the harbor just back of Jack Roblin's boat house. At the time the alarm rang Mr. Roblin was in a moving picture show, upstreet. He heard somebody say the fire was in Roblin's boat house. For the next few seconds, a moving picture of Jack would have shown him making time which would have made Longboat look like an ice wagon. However, the fire did not touch Mr. Roblin's property at all. It was confined to Mr. Sills' boat. It appears that something was being done to the boat's engine, preparatory to starting her, when, so it is said, a sudden explosion took place, and flames shot into the air. Water was immediately poured into the little craft, and she was sunk up to her railings. There was nothing for the firemen to do, though they made a quick run.

The damage to the "Lalla" cannot yet be ascertained, as she is still under water. It is estimated that it will be about $400. The boat was built by Mr. Sills himself, and there is, we are told, sufficient insurance on her to cover the loss.

Just Talking.

At 12.30 this morning the police received a call to the entrance to Queen Victoria park, where it was said some men were creating a disturbance. An officer responded and found four men who, he said, were sitting talking quietly. He did not disturb them, and did not think he had any right to. What the men were talking about is not known, but perhaps they were wondering why the Harbor Commissioners do not take steps to have the weeds, dead fish and bric-a-brac cleaned out of the harbor. Many other people are wondering why, too.

A SMUGGLERS' ISLAND.

Detroit River Band Broken Up by the Police.

Windsor, Aug. 17.—A band of Chinese smugglers, using a deserted island ten miles down the river as a base of operations, is believed to have been broken up by the capture of three young Detroit men and two Chinamen in Lansing, last week. With the knowledge gleaned from the prisoners, it is believed a temporary check, at least, has been put on the bold gang. The headquarters of this gang of smugglers, according to assistant U. S. District Attorney Bland, is on Fighting Island, inside the Canadian border. It is the belief of the Government authorities that the gang, checkmated at every point, hit upon the deserted island as their headquarters, and that Chinamen to be smuggled were taken in hand upon their arrival in Windsor and secreted on the island, probably in one of the fishermen's huts, until an opportunity arose to take them across the line in a launch. But the scheme went wrong on its first trial, it is believed, and all because the white men involved were unable to control their hunger. They stopped in Lansing to ask a policeman the way to a restaurant, and the officer saw the Chinamen, insufficiently covered by a rug, in the bottom of their automobile. He accordingly seized the machine, the two Chinamen, and three of the four white men in the rig. The Chinamen were remanded for a hearing by U. S. Commissioner Davison, and the white men are making an effort to obtain bail.

Farmer's Close Call.

Guelph, Aug. 17.—A farmer by name of William Hall, who resides near Elora, had a miraculous escape from being killed at a level crossing. He was met on the crossing by the 2.20 train from Elora. The engine struck his horse, throwing it into a fence corner about 30 feet, killing it instantly. The shock broke the tips of the shafts from Hall's buggy, but left him and his vehicle otherwise uninjured.

Brantford, Aug. 17.—As a result of taking a bridle off a horse which she was driving, Mrs. R. Lowes, wife of a farmer near Tranquility, was severely injured.

A Tiny Whale.

Not long ago the smallest specimen of the cetacean tribe ever caught by a British trawler was landed at Grimsby by the King James. The baby whale was brought up by the net in the North Sea, and was so small—eighteen inches long only and three pounds three ounces in weight—that the fishermen could not recognize that it was a cetacean at all until an expert certified the fact. The local officer for the Board of Fisheries secured the interesting little capture for the museum of his Department in London.

His Lame Excuse.

"Gregory," said Mrs. Squallop, "I have just received a letter from Aunt Abigail. She says that as we don't seem to want her to come to visit us this year she will postpone it indefinitely. What does she mean by that? I told you to write and tell her to come at her own convenience. Was that what you wrote to her?"

"Er—substantially," answered Mr. Squallop. "I couldn't remember how that word 'convenience' is spelled, and so I made it 'risk'."

Earl of Egmont.

Excepting, perhaps, Lord Lyvedon, the Earl of Egmont, who celebrated his fifty-third birthday the other day, has had a more adventurous career than any other member of the peerage. Before succeeding to the title, about a dozen years ago, he roughed it for some twenty years, serving as a sailor before the mast, as a fireman on the London fire Brigade, and as caretaker of the Chelsea Town Hall.

FARMER IS MURDERED

Aged Norfolk Man Killed and Boy Is Charged.

Michael Hall, Aged 80, Is Found Dead With Bullet Wound Behind Ear and Two Others In Body—Young Farm Hand Is Arrested — Had Been Playing at Jesse James' Pranks.

Simcoe, Ont., Aug. 17.—Emerson Shelley, 15 years of age, is locked up in jail here, charged with having shot and killed Michael Hall, an almost blind octogenarian, on Sunday afternoon. He is also alleged to have fired several shots at Mrs. Hall.

From all accounts, the shooting was most deliberate.

Hall, who was 80 years of age, almost blind, and somewhat crippled, lived near Walsh, ten miles from the town. Shelley has been working for him, his stepfather living in the neighborhood.

As far as can be learned the old man was shot with a 32 calibre rifle from behind, the bullet entering the back of his head. Two more bullets were then fired into the prostrate body. This was about 5 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. Yesterday morning Constable Abel went out and arrested him.

Shelley is the stepson of one Staebler, a poor farmer living nearby. He denies that he was in the vicinity of the Hall premises on Sunday, but acknowledged he had been in the woods with his rifle.

He has been in the habit of carrying a revolver recently, it appears, and discharging it at random, causing much alarm among residents of the neighborhood. He looked upon himself, it is said, in the light of an emulator of Jesse James and men of like criminal tendencies. Certainly his mind has become more or less impregnated with tales of their deeds.

His companions, too, have been men of a desperate code of morals. Warnings from neighbors had no effect and he persisted in his practices.

The boy is small and slight of figure and does not look at all vicious as he lies in his cell here.

It is said the motive for the shooting was a reprimand from Hall some days before.

Brantford Man Injured.

Brantford, Aug. 17.—John Cornish, an employe of the Waterous Engine Works, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon.

He was helping unload a car of sheet iron by means of a crane, and one of the pieces, weighing 800 pounds, when suspended about ten feet in the air, fell, levelling the unfortunate fellow to the ground, the sharp edge severing one leg and inflicting severe internal injuries. Cornish was warned not to stand under the iron when it was swinging. He was removed to the hospital, but no hope is held out for his recovery.

Attempts to End Strike.

Glace Bay, N.S., Aug. 17.—It is expected that the Premier of Nova Scotia, Hon. George H. Murray, will be here to-day to render his assistance towards a settlement of the coal strike.

He will likely suggest a course already agreed upon. This is what is expected, but reports from the inside are few and meagre. Meanwhile, a more optimistic sentiment prevails and the feeling of irritation has been modified and quiet indications point that negotiations for a settlement will be started in a few days.

Assault or Suicide?

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 17.—Andrew Olson, a laborer on the Grand Trunk Pacific, was found by the police at midnight Sunday with a gash in his throat and a number of smaller cuts on various parts of his body and neck. He claimed that he was attacked and robbed by highwaymen, but the police believe he attempted to commit suicide.

An Attack on the Knights.

Montreal, Aug. 17.—The Verite, the advanced clerical organ, is out with another article against the Knights of Columbus, saying: "How much longer will French-Canadians allow themselves to be the stepping-stone for the Irish as assimilators in the United States and to Freemasons and Orangemen in the Province of Ontario?"

Aviator Curtiss Hurt.

Rheims, France, Aug. 17.—Glen Curtiss, the American aviator, met with an accident during a trial flight yesterday.

The accident was due to a large gust of wind catching the aeroplane crosswise and causing it to strike the ground hard on its side. It is stated that the aeroplane was damaged greater than at first appeared and it is feared that repairing it possibly will be a long operation and even may preclude Mr. Curtiss' participation in the first days of the meeting.

Mr. Curtiss is suffering from shock and bruises, though his condition is not serious.

A hurricane, accompanied by hail and torrents of rain, swept over the aeroplane last night, unroofing a number of sheds.

Britain Plans Nurse System.

London, Aug. 17.—Based on the German and Japanese models, the War Office has issued proposals for a great voluntary Red Cross in connection with the territorial army scheme.

It will be worked in connection with the existing Red Cross Society and St. John's Ambulance Society, and, in the event of an invasion, would provide the entire country with a complete net work of Red Cross organizations.

Men and women of all classes are invited to become volunteers, to be trained in detachments in every territorial area as nurses, and in every branch of the Red Cross service, utilizing country houses and local resources for hospitals.

TORONTO, Aug. 16.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 90 carloads, consisting of 1848 cattle, 8 hogs, 442 sheep and 56 calves.

Butchers.

The following are the quotations for the butchers' that were placed on sale: Choice, picked lots, $5.30 to $5.60, and one load, weighing 1326 lbs. each, sold at $5.75; loads of good, $5 to $5.25; one load of 22 cattle, 1045 lbs., being sold by Dunn & Levack at the latter price; medium, $4.75 to $5; common, $3.75 to $4.50; cows, $3 to $4.40.

Milkers and Springers.

Milkers and springers sold at $37 to $58 each.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves sold at $3 to $6.50 per cwt., and one new milk-fed calf brought $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs

Lambs sold at from $6 to $6.70, or an average of about $6.50 per cwt.; sheep, $3.50 to $4 per cwt.; rams, $2 to $2.75 per cwt.

Hogs.

Some of the hog dealers were not anxious to be quoted. One buyer for a leading firm quoted $7.85 for hogs, fed and watered at market, $7.60 f.o.b. cars, while another buyer stated that he was paying $7.75 for hogs at country points, or $8 at the market, fed and watered.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Aug. 16.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Aug. 14 were 2150 cattle, 775 sheep and lambs, 1750 hogs and 825 calves, while the offerings for local consumption this morning consisted of 1225 cattle, 475 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs and 500 calves.

A feature of the sale was the weaker feeling in the market for cattle owing to the increased supply, and the fact that the bulk of the stock was only of medium quality, consequently prices show a decline of ¼c per lb. as compared with those of a week ago. On account of the unfavorable weather which prevailed thruout the entire morning, the gathering of buyers was not as large as usual; but, notwithstanding this fact, there was a fairly good demand for those present, and, taking everything into consideration, the trade done was satisfactory, and fewer cattle were left over than was anticipated. Owing to the continued discouraging cable advices from Liverpool, which reported trade very slow, and the fact that exporters had ample stock coming forward to fill all ocean freight space, there was no demand from them, and trade in this direction was dull. There were no really choice cattle on the market, and the prices paid for good beeves were 5c to 5¼c, while fair stock sold at 4¼c to 5c; medium at 4c to 4¼c; common at 3c to 3¾c, and canners at 2¼c to 2¾c per lb. A weaker tone developed in the market for hogs, on account of large receipts and prices ruled lower than those paid last Wednesday. At the auction there was a fairly good demand for packers, and supplies were well cleaned up. Sales of selected lots were made at $8.90 to $8.95 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. Cable advices from Liverpool on Saturday on Canadian bacon reported the market quiet and steady, while those from London were strong, and Bristol firm. Supplies of small meats were fair, for which the demand was good, and an active trade was done in all lines. The tone of the market was steady, and prices show no important change from last week. Sheep sold at 4c and lambs at 6c to 6¼c per lb. Calves brought from $2 to $1.50 each, as to size and quality.

MAINTAINS INNOCENCE

Emery Shelley Says He Was Shooting at Bird.

Lad Charged With Murder of Michael Hall Near Walsh In Norfolk County, Declares That He Was Firing at a Thrush—Detective Greer Will Test Rifle — Many Stories Told Concerning Shelley Family.

Simcoe, Aug. 18.—Coincidence seems to connect Emery Shelley, the 15-year-old boy, who is in jail here, pretty closely with the death of old Michael Hall, who was felled by a bullet in the back of the head on the threshold of his cabin, two miles north of Walsh, Sunday afternoon.

The boy has admitted that he was shooting in the bush across the road from the Hall house at about the time —3.30 p.m.—that the tragedy occurred. To County Constable Abel of Port Rowan, he said he fired three or four shots at a thrush from his bush. The last shot killed the bird, he said, and he carried the songster home and fed it to the cat.

Thomas Overholt, whose farm is on the same side of the road as the bush from which the lad says he fired, reported to Provincial Detective Greer yesterday that shortly after 3.30 he had ordered young Shelley to stop shooting on his place. Overholt says a bullet struck his barn and he was afraid one of his children had got hurt.

These bits of evidence fit pretty well with old Mrs. Hall's story. She says she heard a shot and immediately her husband fell forward through the door. As she rushed to raise his head, thinking he had fallen in a fit, a second shot struck the house over her head, a third hit the house high and to one side, and a fourth shattered the window at the side.

On Tuesday last a 32-calibre Stevens single-loading rifle was stolen from the blacksmith shop in Walsh Village. A. B. Neoilson had brought it in to be repaired.

On Saturday night Emery Shelley walked to the village of Walsh and bought a box containing fifty 22 short rim fire, black powder cartridges, and the balance of the box are in Constable Abel's possession, as is the rifle. Saul has not seen it, but says he would be able to identify it if he once did.

Young Shelley, who was at Saul's on the Tuesday before the shooting, claims to have got the rifle from an Englishman at Avon, about 30 miles away, in exchange for a suit of clothes and some money.

A 22-calibre rifle was taken with the boy when he was arrested, and this Detective Greer will take out to the place to-day, to test the carrying powers by shooting from the edge of the bush at the dilapidated old house. A shed from which the shots were at first supposed to have been fired is only about 25 yards from the front of the house and to one side. The bush is about 250 yards in front of the house. Mr. Greer wants to be sure whether or not the bullets could not have reached the spots where they lodged from the bush.

His mother says Emery said: "If I shot that old man I did not know it."

The mother, who was married a second time, was on trial once for shooting her second husband in the leg. The first husband, it is related, before he died, confessed to having burnt down a church, so that he could add the property to his land.

The Shelley family is a large one. Mrs. Shelley married again, after her first husband's death, and the family had a hard struggle to keep the wolf from the door. They live some little distance from the Hall home, but young Shelley and Hall know each other well, and it is said that the old man had warned several boys in the neighborhood not to trespass on his small farm.

Inquest will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at Walsh, with the preliminary police court hearing at Simcoe on Friday.

Michael Hall's funeral yesterday was largely attended.

Train-Racing Auto Wrecked.

Kaiserslautern, Germany, Aug. 18.—A French automobile was wrecked near here yesterday, and all the occupants, three women and two men, were badly injured.

The owner of the car, Mme. Gailja, and her daughter, Claire, were so gravely injured that there is practically no hope of their recovery. The third woman occupant and the two men, while dangerously injured, yet are expected to recover.

The car was racing with an express train when it collided with a tree and exploded.

Always Glad to Receive Aid.

St. John, N.B., Aug. 18.—Hon. Jas. Bryce, British Ambassador to the United States, in an address before the Canadian Club last night, declared that Britain would always be ready to receive naval assistance from her colonies.

The ambassador denied the statements that there is anything but the kindest feelings on the part of the United States toward Canada.

He was glad that the two races in Canada were uniting for the good of the Dominion.

2,400 Houses Destroyed.

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—The following telegram has been received by the Japanese consul-general from Tokio, in connection with the severe Japanese earthquake of Saturday last:

"Severe earthquake in Shiga Prefecture on Aug. 14, at 3.30 p.m. Instant deaths, 31; injured, 167; houses totally destroyed, about 2,400, and houses with small damage, innumerable."

Contractors Foot Loss.

Ottawa, Aug. 17.—The loss caused by the collapse of a bridge on the National Transcontinental in New Brunswick will fall upon the contractors. The National Transcontinental Commission do not take the work over until it is completed.

Conference Going Well.

London, Aug. 18.—Sir Frederick Borden, interviewed by the Canadian Associated Press, described the American despatch announcing that Australia and Canada are combining to "Meet the Japanese Peril," as sheer nonsense.

Respecting The Times' correspondent's idea that some one in an authoritative position should cable the progress of the defence conference negotiations to Canada, Sir Frederick remarked negotiations were confidential.

They were proceeding satisfactorily, and any reports published must necessarily be mere guesswork.

Demand Use of Ross Rifle.

Montreal, Aug. 18.—The Ross rifle is again to the fore in a dispute. The Fifth Royal Highlanders decided that they would not go to the D.R.A. matches if they were not issued Ross rifles Mark II-Star by the Government. At the P.Q.R.A. matches last week the Eighth Royal Rifles and the Victorias carried off everything with the Ross rifle. The Eighth of Quebec had them issued by the Government. The Victorias of Montreal bought theirs. The Highlanders decided that they will get them also, or they will not take part in the shooting. The Vics are sending 32 men with Ross rifles.

U.S. Will Buy Canadian Soft Coal.

New York, Aug. 18.—The first effect of the reduction of 22 cents a ton in the tariff on bituminous coal will be to increase shipments from the mines in Nova Scotia. In discussing this phase of the situation, Black Diamond, the official organ of the trade, says:

"If ultimately there is any displacement of Pennsylvania and West Virginia coals in New England markets that buy coal from Nova Scotia, it may be expected that producing companies in the former fields will have to market their additional surplus in the rail market of the west."

Suicide Ends Family Troubles.

North Bay, Aug. 18.—Zoel Dutrizac of Sturgeon Falls, aged 40, committed suicide on the lake shore at North Bay yesterday morning by taking paris green.

Dutrizac was separated from his wife, who works in a local hotel, and Monday evening sent for her to attempt a reconciliation. She refused to live with him, and he stated that he was not long for this world, which held nothing attractive for him away from his wife and two children.

The body lay unidentified at the morgue until the afternoon, when Mrs. Dutrizac was called.

Boys Saved From Lake Erie.

St. Thomas, Aug. 18.—Two lads, aged 12 and 5 years respectively, were carried out on Lake Erie at Port Stanley on Monday in a leaky old punt, having only a broken home-made paddle. A heavy rain and electric storm came up and the boat was half-filled with water. Their plight was observed from the shore by a telescope in the hands of Chester Smith of St. Thomas and Russel Croden of London, both just lads in their teens. They are once got out a rowboat and bravely put out into the lake to the rescue.

Serious Diphtheria Outbreak

London, Aug. 18.—Because of an outbreak of diphtheria at Byron, about five miles from this city, the school has been closed, and also the Brick street school, a mile away. Three of the family of William England have died within two days, and were all buried immediately. Three more of the family are in Victoria Hospital and the others are quarantined.

Rain Good for Cheese Factories.

Peterboro, Aug. 18.—The refreshing rains of Sunday and Monday were of great value. The farmers are now assured of a large make of cheese for the balance of the season, and it should be of the highest quality.

Father Slays His Child

Peterboro County Man Then Takes Poison

Thomas Willoughby Kills His Six-Year-Old Daughter In Fit of Despondency and Lays Her Body Out In Best Clothes Ready for Burial Before Taking His Own Life—Had Been Ill.

Norwood, Aug. 18.—After slaying his six-year-old daughter, bathing her body, arraying her in her Sunday clothes, and laying her on a couch in the parlor, Thomas Willoughby, a prominent farmer living about two miles from here, took his own life yesterday afternoon. Willoughby had been unwell for some time, and recently, it is said, had shown signs of despondency.

The tragedy was discovered when the wife of a neighboring farmer entered the Willoughby home on an errand. Mrs. Willoughby was away shopping in Norwood with her nine-months-old baby. The neighbors was startled by low cries from the parlor and, hurrying into the room, found the body of Sarah stretched on the sofa and Willoughby lying beside her. He was still alive and attempted to speak, but in a panic the woman rushed for some one to assist her, and when, a few minutes later, she returned with help, Willoughby was dead on the floor.

There was one other member of the family in the house when they returned, little Harry Willoughby, aged 6, but he could tell nothing. He had gone into the house a short time before, but had found no one there, he said.

A search revealed a double-barrelled shotgun, with one barrel recently used, in the woodshed, and there were also blood stains and grains of shot on the floor. It was here apparently that the murder had been committed. The girl had been shot in the breast.

The fact that the body of the girl was arrayed in her best clothes was explained by the presence in a heap in one corner of the room of the garments which she usually wore. A basin of water nearby showed that the demented man had washed the body before dressing it in the new clothes.

Willoughby was a man of about 35 years of age, and universally respected throughout the countryside. Quite recently his health began to fail him.

While the theory of murder while insane is readily accepted, it is also possible that the shooting may have been accidental and that, in his anguish, Willoughby then ended his own life.

Coroner Grey of Peterboro, who went at once to the scene of the tragedy and made a hurried examination of Willoughby's body, declares that he found no outward trace of poison. If, at the post mortem, this proves to be the case, the only theory of the man's death is that he died of the shock and remorse following upon a realization of his deed. It is thought more probable, however, that Willoughby died from the effects of a poison not readily detected.

An inquest has been ordered for today.

Dead In the Bush.

North Bay, Aug. 18.—James Lattimer, aged 70, living near Callandar, went out picking berries two days ago, and a search party found his dead body in the bush yesterday morning, death resulting from natural causes.

Lattimer was in comfortable circumstances, but eccentric and had not been living with his wife and family for some time, leaving them at the homestead at Barrie and living the life of a recluse on the outskirts of Callandar.

Takes Sister's Place.

New York, N.Y., Aug. 18.—Miss Emma Kinney, of Blairstown, N.J., is here en route to Vancouver, where she will wed Robert Johnson, who was to have married her sister, now deceased.

Miss Kinney is the daughter of James Kinney. She is pretty and only twenty. Both she and Mr. Johnson mourn Elizabeth, the sister, who died only recently.

May Not Go to Kingston.

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—Jail Physician Argue has reported to the Provincial authorities on the condition of Conrad and Woods, the men sentenced to a year in the Central for the McMillan diamond robbery. They have tuberculosis in the incipient stage, and will probably not be taken to the prison, in which case they will serve time in the local jail.

Fierce Fires In the Rockies.

Banff, Aug. 18.—A terrific forest fire is raging in Castle Mountain, sixteen miles west of here, near Laggan. Government fire-fighters in charge of the situation left here Monday to combat the flames. Monday Bankhead and the whole district for ten miles up the valley was completely involved in smoke. The fire is nearly under control now.

Col. Wylie's Assassin Hanged.

London, Aug. 18.—Madalari Dhinagari, the Indian student who, on the night of July 1, at the conclusion of a public gathering in the Imperial Institute, shot and killed Lieut.-Col. Sir William Hutt Curzon-Wylie, and Dr. Cawas Lalcaca, was hanged yesterday morning. He was sentenced to death July 23.

Only prison officials and a chaplain were present at the execution. An English lecturer named McMaster, who has just arrived from India, applied for admission on the ground that he was a friend of Dhinagari's, but he was refused. McMaster declared that the murderer was perfectly sane when he committed the crime, and that his act was a symbolic protest against British rule in India.

Dhinagari showed no sign of fear. He declined to partake of breakfast and walked to the scaffold calmly and quietly.

Young Accountant Suicides.

Welland, Ont., Aug. 18.—The body of Edwin R. Weller, accountant for the Pierce Motor Co. of Buffalo, and son of Dr. H. Weller, was found in a corn field close by the roadside, between Ridgeway and Crystal Beach, yesterday afternoon. The body had evidently been lying there for some days, and was badly decomposed.

The last seen of the young man was a week ago Saturday, when he went to Crystal Beach with some friends. Two days previously, he had written a letter to his father, saying he was disheartened and despondent, though he did not give any cause. A revolver was found by his side. He had shot himself through the right temple. Officials of the motor company say he was doing excellent work, and no reason can be assigned for his act.

Swept Overboard In Squall.

Port Dover, Aug. 18.—While the gasoliner Naiad was returning to this port from Selkirk, having on board Howard Coll, the only son of Richard Coll, Cleveland, Ohio, who had attained his twenty-first birthday on Sunday last, and Roy Dell and Hazen Waddle, she struck a severe squall about midday. The boat in tow filled and Howard uncleated the painter and attempted to pull the tow up to the gasoliner. A furious sea struck the tow, pulling Coll in. The painter, running overboard, caught the tiller and rendered the launch temporarily unmanageable, and the two younger lads were forced to watch their companion drown. They managed to repair the tiller and run under the shelter of Peacock Point.

Ex-Banker Roy Ill.

St. Johns, Que., Aug. 18.—Arthur Lasnier, baliff, has just returned from St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, where he went to serve on P. H. Roy, former president of the St. Johns Bank, who is doing a seven-year term for falsifying reports, notice of action taken against him by Mr. Marcellia Robert, late director of the same bank. Mr. Lasnier says Roy is emaciated, and evidently in very poor health. He is at present in the infirmary as a result of his attempt at suicide during the course of his trial.

U.S. Weather Bulletin.

Washington, Aug. 18.—A special announcement by the weather bureau yesterday gives promise of speedy relief from the intense heat which was prevailing in the middle west and states that at present there are indications of prolonged heat for the eastern states. The next disturbance from the west will appear in the extreme northwest Thursday, advance over the plains states, central valleys and great lakes Friday and Saturday, and reach the Atlantic coast about Sunday.

Honors for Strathcona.

Winnipeg, Aug. 18.—When Lord Strathcona arrives here next Wednesday, he will be publicly received, the militia cadets corps, council, St. Andrew's Society, and other bodies turning out. He will be asked to become hon.-president of the Canadian International and Selkirk Centennial Exhibition of 1912.

Fatal Run Off.

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—A mixed train, going west, was derailed a short distance from Berry's Bay at 9.15 Monday night, due to heavy rain, causing a washout. W. J. Thurston, fireman, Madawaska, was killed.

Japan Not Mentioned.

London, Aug. 18.—The Canadian Associated Press has the highest authority to state that Japan has not been mentioned or discussed in any way by the Imperial Defence Conference.

The harbor bar is moaning a lot these days. All the green scum, dead fish and weeds in the harbor has probably given the bar a pain.

The Globe says the purposes of the Canadian militia are for peace, not war. That's probably right, though it sounds funny. If the Canadian militiaman is armed with a Ross rifle he'll not want to go to war.

A Cyclist writes: "Which is best, to ride over some of the new crossings, and tear up your tires, or to ride on the sidewalk, and tear a hole in the law?"

If it's our guess, the best way is the cheapest, old man.

There seems to be considerable reason in the wail of that stranger who is now within our gates. He says we do not pay enough attention to keeping the pesky housefly out of stores and houses, and that only one store on Front st. has a screen door. Is the typhoid in Belleville traceable to the fly. Anyhow, it can't be the water, for our medical authorities say the water is pure. And that settles it, as the egg said to the coffee. Down with the fly, or at all events, get some more screens and keep him out.

Autoists in Montreal say they are being persecuted. Perhaps. From time immemorial the innocent have had to suffer for the sins of the guilty. A few fools leaven the whole lump.

The Brockville water has been declared to show a high percentage of intestinal bacteria. When it was first examined it was found not guilty. Experts differ on the water question, as they do on most others. Safest thing to do with the Brockville water, evidently, is to leave it alone, as the Times man does.

Coming events are already casting their shadows. Western sports are in the east, trying to corner hockey players ready for the assault and battery events next winter. Heigho! Time flies. Do your Christmas shopping early.

Poets are still twanging their lyres and singing "O Canada" in the big papers. This suffering country has much to put up with these days. For poets, even of the amateur brand, should have other qualifications than a fountain pen, a stock of white paper and an empty head.

Come to think of it, we must break a lance with that Toronto preacher who partly condoned theft because the party who stole did not get a large enough salary. In our humble opinion, theft is never excusable. The banks, or any other class of employers, are not allowed to handcuff men and make them work for a small salary. The trouble these days is that young fellows whose stipend calls for baked beans hanker after pate de foie gras. They want to go over the jumps on borrowed horses. Disaster ensues. And the practice will not die out while preachers condone it. That Toronto sky pilot might easily have been in better business.

The fact that the budget is popular among the masses in Great Britain is not strange. Who would vote to turn out a government which was giving him a handout—at somebody else's expense?

Having High Time In the Woolly West.

Mr. John Smith, a highly respecter farmer in the 5th concession of Tyendinage, has received a letter from his son, Frank, who is now in Yorkton, Sask., which shows that the young man, who has many friends in this district, is having a high old time in the woolly west. A few extracts from the letter will be of interest:

I am out cow punching now. I have been in the saddle every day for three months. I like it fine. There is not much to do, and I get good wages. I get $75 a month for eight months and $100 for the round-up. You see it is Sunday and every day. There is no such thing as getting a day off. I have a good pony and saddle. The saddle weighs 65 pounds, and the company gives me a pair of leather pants with slashed seams and a buckskin shirt, two six-shooters, a knife and 100 rounds of ammunition a week See you have to have the guns to drive cattle across a river, or in case of a stampede, if any get hurt, you can shoot them and bring back the hide. I got one day off for the fair. I got another fellow in my place. I rode in the broncho contest. I got second money. I got a $75 saddle and $25 in cash, but I earned it. When I got off the horse the blood was running out of my nose and ears, so you can guess that broncho was going some. When you are riding in a contest you are not allowed to grip the leather with your hands. Just drive them on and throw them and saddle them and get on them before they are up without a bridle or halter. I was up in the woods five months last winter. I drove four horses all winter. I liked it fine; in fact I like this country a lot better than the east.. I would not take the best farm in Ontario and go back and live there one year.

Crops are fine out this way this year. They are all headed out. Oats just take me to the waist. We had a late spring, but crops are going to be early. How are crops in Ontario? If crops are good I will take a bunch of bronchos down there this winter. I know where I can get a good bunch cheap. How would they sell down there? You see they are too small for this country. The fellow I am working for has twelve on the harrows and a fellow riding a saddle horse driving them. Six good horses would do their work and would not need as much care, but they are plenty big enough for the east.

Tom is at Yorkton, working at his trade. He has worked for the same man ever since he came up. He gets $4.00 a day and boards himself. Alex. is working two of his teams in town. George is out digging wells. He makes more money than any farmer in the west. He cleared $4,500 last summer in five months, and he is having great luck this summer. He sold farm, cattle and everything last fall and put $9,000 in the bank. He got cash for everything.

St. Michael's Picnic Is Very Successful

Hutton's Grove, better known as the Pine Woods, was en fete to-day, when the picnic in aid of St. Michael's Academy was held. A visit to the grounds after dinner showed that a large crowd was already present, and others were coming in fast. The grounds were enclosed with barb wire fencing, the track being at the northeast end. This afternoon a programme of games and races was being pulled off. The dining department was liberally patronized, and those who ate and drank were very merry and profuse in their praise of the good things provided. With the Oddfellows' Band and Orchestra on the job there was plenty of music, and everybody seemed to be enjoying themselves. The promoters expect to make much money as a result of the picnic. Over $1500, it is said, is looked for, and no surprise will be felt if the proceeds total $2000. Many country people are present.

Traffic Falls Off On Canada's Canals

While trade conditions generally show improvement and increases all along the line, the volume of traffic on the canals this year so far has decreased quite noticeably in comparison with last year. Up to the end of June the Soo canal traffic had fallen off by 1,182,102 tons, the Welland by 63,953, the St. Lawrence canals by 77,869, and Ottawa canals by 30,750. Two increases were 7,500 on the Rideau and 10,500 on the Trent. The grain movement is not so heavy this year, while the strike on the Great Lakes and the accident at the Soo have doubtless exercised an influence. The decrease, however, is in practically every line of freight, and it is rather difficult to explain. The July showing, so far as the figures have been received, is better.

Atkinson--Hopkin

Walworth, N. Y., August 16. — A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Col. H. Atkinson, Walworth, when their youngest son, Elmer W. Atkinson, was united in marriage to Miss Emma Lois Hopkin, of Belleville, Ont., Canada. The ceremony was performed at 1 o'clock by the Rev. McArthur, of the First Baptist Church, the bride and groom being attended by Miss Mary Miller and Mr. Clarence Holling of Rochester, N. Y. The bride was attired in a handsome gown of white, with lace trimmings, the bridesmaid wearing pink. The guests were invited into the dining-room where they partook of a bountiful repast, the table looking beautiful, adorned with pink roses. Covers were laid for 25. The present were numerous, useful and ornamental. The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Parker and Ruth, Fairpoint, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. George J. Sager, Clayton and Gladys, of Ontario, N. Y.; Master Stanley Crook of Newburg, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Glen Atkinson, of Lincoln, N. Y.; Miss Mary Miller, Clarence Holling and Chester Cottman, all of Rochester, N. Y. The bride and groom left for Canada, where they will spend their honeymoon.

Pale And Depressed

ANAEMIA, BAD BLOOD, INDIGESTION, SICK HEADACHE, DIZZINESS.

Success of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

For her life and health Mrs. E. K. Wilkinson is indebted to the marvellous curative properties of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Her brightness, activity and present good looks are due to nothing else but the enormous benefit she derived from using this grand medicine.

From her home in Newton where she resides with her large family, Mrs. Wilkinson writes: "For years I was pale, anaemic and lacking in vitality. I was a constant sufferer from indigestion, and the distress and pain it caused me, coupled with ever-increasing anaemia made me weaker day by day. Constant headaches, specks before the eyes and attacks of dizziness made me feel as if life were not worth living. My constitution was completely undermined and the constant pallor and dullness in my eyes showed what a sick woman I was. I began to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the improvement although slow was sure. I gradually got back my strength and my appetite grew much stronger and I enjoyed my meals thoroughly. I felt happier and more contented and the sickly pallor of my face was replaced by a bright, rosy color which proved that a strong medicine was at work. In a few months Dr. Hamilton's Pills brought me from a condition of deathly despair to robust health."

You can obtain the same results by using Dr. Hamilton's Pills — beware of the substitutor that offers you anything except Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all dealers or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

Phillips--Palmer

Mr. George Phillips, formerly of Canifton, now, of this city, was married this morning to Miss Ethel Palmer, daughter of Mr. John Palmer. The happy couple left for a trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls, Buffalo and Chicago.

He Needed Change

A rural editor once got a big advertisement from a place which sold nothing but oysters. The place had just opened, and while the proprietor was willing to advertise he didn't have the cash to spend: so the newspaper man took a card which entitled him to $10 worth of oysters.

"A few days later a tramp printer strolled into the Gazette office and wanted a job," related the editor. "I had nothing to offer him, but told the man he might sleep back in the composing-room, and as he had no money to buy food, I gave him the meal ticket on the oyster parlor. I didn't hear from him again for more than a week. One day he came into the office looking a bit drawn and worn.

"'I don't want to seem dissatisfied with what you've done for me, Mr. Carter', said he, 'and I'm willing to admit that the luscious bivalve is a wonderfully fine bit of food, but for heaven's sake, can't you get an ad. from a ham and egg emporium?'"

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES

In a baseball match played on Coleman's Flats last night, the City Firemen beat the Flats team by a 10-2 score. The losers blew up badly.

Montreal beat Toronto two games, and pulled them down a few points. The Pea Soups have won 13 out of 15 from the Leafs.

Jeffries will not go to Australia to meet Johnson, no matter what the purse.

Johnson, the black pug, could not get hotel accommodation in Salt Lake City. He wanted to sleep in the police station, but they wouldn't have him.

Joe Yeager, Montreal's shortstop, in two games, accepted 20 chances without an error.

Lajoie has resigned the management of the Cleveland ball team. Too much criticism, he says.

Mr. Charles Wilmot, at the Cobourg Horse Show, took 1st prize in the pony in harness over 13 hands class.

The National league race is growing tighter than a well-fitting shoe.

Umpire Tom Hurst has been dropped for good from the American league staff.

Marathon races will be resumed in the fall at Madison Square gardens, New York.

Reulbach and Matthewson are the two greatest pitchers in the National league this season.

Tom Longboat says he will run away from Shrubb when they meet at Toronto in their fifteen mile foot race.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

Mr. Percy Geen left to-day for a holiday trip down the St. Lawrence.

Miss Florence Davis, Albert St., is spending her holidays at Port Hope.

Mrs. (Rev.) Tomblin and daughter, of Cedar St., are in Cobourg, where they will remain till fall.

Master Gerald Ives, of St. Henri, Montreal, is visiting Mr. Lewis Miles, of Herchimer Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer W. Atkinson (nee Miss Hopkin), of Rochester, are spending their honeymoon in the city, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Barlow, Mill St.

At the Quinte: B. F. Rapley, C. L. Brewer, A. Gorrie, P. C. Adair, Montreal; P. A. Williams, W. A. Rae, V. Stone, H. M. Upton, W. V. Wright, G. E. Bunting, W. R. Crombie, W. P. Pembroke, C. W. Spratt, Lindsay; F. H. Cunningham, J. Hutton, Ottawa.

HORSES AT THE FAIR.

Everything Points to an Immense Exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Horse entries are coming in so fast at the office of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, that the success of that department promises to be more pronounced than ever before.

The prizes given for speeding in the ring aggregate $4,000, and that in itself is a guarantee that the fastest harness horses in Canada will again be found in the races on the afternoon of August 30th and 31st and Sept. 1st and 2nd.

In Clydesdales everything points to an entry that will exceed last year's show, when they were there in numbers and quality that cannot be equalled anywhere on the continent. Hackneys are growing better year by year and the show of them is excellent, while Toronto is a centre for hunters and jumpers of the very highest class; the competitions in this line excite almost world-wide interest.

In harness horses there is always a great exhibit, while the pony classes have been enlarged and extended in keeping with the growing popularity of the children's pets.

Grain Vessel Sinks.

Montreal, Aug. 18.—With 20,000 bushels of wheat on board, the steamship Glengarry, bound for Montreal from Kingston, is sunk at the Atwater Bridge in the Lachine Canal.

Stole Gold From Mint.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 18.—Charged with one of the rarest offences committed against the Government—that of abstracting gold from a mint—Charles W. Dakin, a trusted employe of the mint at Denver, Col., was arrested in this city on Monday, by a secret service agent.

Dakin is said to have made a confession of his guilt. He is alleged to have sold gold to local dealers, disposing of it in small lots.

Wireless at Fort William.

Fort William, Aug. 18.—For several days representatives of the United Wireless Telegraph Co. have been in the city consulting with officials of the city, and as a result it is practically assured that the company will instal a big plant here capable of communicating with any steamer or land station within four hundred miles. Some twenty-two steamers and twenty land stations are already equipped.

One of the most welcome among the many exchanges which come to our desk is THE NEWS, of Toronto. THE NEWS has recently made wonderful advances, so much so that old friends of the paper would hardly recognize in this great Canadian newspaper the old News of a few years ago. THE NEWS now contains from fourteen to twenty pages each day, with twenty-four to thirty-two on Saturday. A specialty is made of political and Parliamentary news and questions affecting the welfare of the public receive fair editorial treatment by clever writers. We are safe in saying that there is no paper more widely quoted in Canada and its cartoons are reproduced by many of the leading journals. Through an arrangement made with THE NEWS we are able to offer The Intelligencer and THE NEWS in a club for one year at the remarkably cheap price of $4.00. a21-dtf

ESTHER'S ALTERNATIVES.

When the Test Came It Was Not Difficult to Choose.

By W. BERT FOSTER.

"And now, Jack, what can I do? He follows me everywhere, and he stands around and ogles me with that detestable 'baby stare' of his, and—and—you're laughing, Jack! You are as mean as you can be to laugh when I come to you for advice!"

Esther stamped her foot. Jack Ormsby leaned against the veranda railing and watched her with amused eyes.

"I can't help smiling, Esther, but I can appreciate the irritation poor Hallowell must cause you."

"Irritation!" A world of emphasis entered into the word. "And just because I was foolish enough to let him propose to me!" she wailed.

"Well, of course," Jack said slowly, "you must expect to have your scalps cost you a little something, Essie."

"He doesn't say anything!" exclaimed the girl. "If he did, it would give me a chance to tell him what I think of his dogging my footsteps everywhere."

"It certainly is a case of 'the villain still pursued her,'" Ormsby said. "What do you want me to do, Essie—call him out and plug him full of holes?"

"Ugh! Don't be so vulgar! I don't want you to do anything but tell me what to do to get rid of him."

Jack was almost the only man she knew well who had not proposed to her. Men had fallen before her charms, had said their little piece, and some said it rather well, she had to admit to herself, and gone their way, and until now no man had really been able to trouble her serenity.

"Do think of something, Jack," she pleaded. "It's been three months now since he—he"—

"Since he said the momentous words which made him—not yours, eh?" And Ormsby laughed, but his hands trembled as he shifted the cane a little.

"Don't be absurd! He doesn't want me any more than other men do."

"Whew! Your serene conceit is certainly charming, Essie."

"Don't be unkind. You know it's true," she said calmly. "Any woman with fluffy hair and blue eyes can bring men to her feet. Only you don't get foolish and propose to me, Jack."

"No, I don't propose to you," he said, quite calmly.

"And that's why I like you."

"Then I'll try not to make you dislike me. But what can I do to poor Hallowell? A cat may look at a king"— But Esther interrupted snappishly.

"That's no reason why a calf should look at me all the time!"

"Poor girl! You're finding it mighty hard getting away from the consequences of your own sin, eh?"

"What sin have I committed?" she demanded, with conscious innocence. "Is it a sin to refuse to marry a man you don't want?"

"No-o. But how about—well, not exactly leading him on to proposing—but"—

She favored him with a frigid look. "I beg your pardon, Mr. Ormsby," she observed.

"Well, you needn't," he said quietly. "You expect plain talk from people whose advice you ask, don't you? No man will ever ask a woman to marry him if she doesn't give him the opportunity."

"That is different. But such remarks as you are making now are hardly in the nature of advice, Jack."

"Well, I don't see that there's much you can do," he drawled, and his eyes began to twinkle. "There seem to be but two courses to pursue, and two only"—

"Oh, here's your Sultan and the runabout!" suddenly cried Esther, clapping her hands and springing up. "Are you going to take me to ride, Jack?"

"Well, it's what I came around for, but your tale of woe about knocked it out of my head."

The negro from the stable leaped out and held the big bay's head. Esther ran down to the gate, forgetting the beruffled parasol lying on the veranda. Ormsby followed lazily.

"Feeling pretty gay, isn't he, Jackson?" he asked, pulling on a glove and looking at Sultan, who danced charmingly to the accompaniment of little squeals of delight from Esther.

"Yes, sah; he do, sah."

"Hop in, Essie," Ormsby said, holding out his hand to assist her. Then he added, "Speaking of angels, there's Hallowell now."

A fresh faced young fellow cantered by on a fine horse and lifted his hat seriously. A little way beyond he pulled in the animal and dismounted as though he would come back to speak to the couple at the runabout.

"Do hurry up!" exclaimed Esther under her breath. "What shall I do to get rid of him, Jack? You said there were two ways. What are they?"

"Well," and Ormsby buttoned the glove slowly and put one foot on the step of the runabout, "you might marry him to get rid of him."

"No, thank you!" she exclaimed, pouting and tossing her head. Then she started and looked toward the house. "Oh, Jack—my parasol! I shall want it."

Ormsby had already leaned forward to seize the reins. He glanced at the colored man. "Miss Dingley's parasol is on the veranda, Jackson," he said.

The man dropped Sultan's bridle. Like a flash the bay threw up his head and started.

The lines had not been quite within Ormsby's grasp. His foot slipped from the step. He made a leap to reach the carriage, but Sultan swung into a long stride on the instant and fairly snatched the runabout from under his master's grasp.

"The reins, the reins! Quick, Essie!" Ormsby cried.

Thank God, she knew what he meant and seized the lines before they slipped over the dashboard to dangle about Sultan's heels and drive him mad with terror. But the horse knew instantly that an unfamiliar hand held the reins, and he increased his trot to a gallop.

Esther told herself that she would not be frightened, and she drew the lines in firmly and said "Whoa!"

But Sultan saw no reason for "whoaing" just then. There was a long stretch of dusty, sunlit road before him, and he seized the bit in his strong teeth and bolted. He flew by Hallowell's mount with a rush and set that creature to dancing. Hallowell hung on to the leather and stared with round eyes after the runaway.

His astonishment was vastly increased when a second whirlwind reached him. Ormsby went at him as though he was playing football.

He snatched the bridle from Hallowell's hand, and that young man was sent rolling in the dust as Jack leaped astride and set the now frightened animal after the bolting Sultan.

The road for a mile was clear, but where it joined the boulevard beyond Ormsby knew the runaway would burst into a tangle of carriages of all descriptions and the end would be serious. He didn't know much about the soundness of Hallowell's mount, but he would have made an asthmatic old car horse do stunts just then.

Like the wind he rode, and his mount's nose soon came up to Esther's shoulder. Foot by foot he gained on Sultan, and then with a swift dive Ormsby seized the reins, which Esther had continued to cling to with all her little might. A strong pull on both horses and Sultan instantly recognized the fact that all his fun was over.

He slowed down and in half a block and just before the junction with the boulevard stopped was gentle as a lamb. For a minute they gazed at each other.

"Well," Ormsby said at last, "you came near escaping the pursuit of the villain that time, Essie, for good and all."

Esther's eyes grew luminous. "And you dared suggest that I marry him!" she said, catching her breath.

"Well, you know there was an alternative."

"And that is?" still looking at him.

"That you might marry me to get rid of him. That—that would be effectual, wouldn't it?"

Another breath of silence, and then Esther murmured, "Well, Jack, dear, we might try it."

Blonds In History.

It is certain that blond, long headed men once played a great role in history, for it was they who colonized Galatia and brought home the treasures of Greece and Italy to Toulouse, who overthrew the Roman empire in the west and won England from the Britons. It is equally certain that this physical type was once much more dominant and widely distributed than it is now and that it is tending to die out. This is especially true of that pronounced form of blonds which is distinguished by red hair. Red haired persons do not now constitute the majority in any known tribe or nation, but one authority sets forth grounds for thinking that red hair was once much more prevalent.

It must have occurred, for instance, among the Brahmans, since they were forbidden by the laws of Manu to marry red haired women. There is no doubt that blonds and red haired persons are still encountered about the Hindoo Kush, among the tribes from whom the Brahmans are supposed to have been immigrants. But obedience to the law mentioned would in the course of time annihilate the tendency to their reproduction.—Westminster Gazette.

Where Poverty Was Criminal.

In Peru at the period of the Incas, before its conquest by the Spaniards in the early part of the sixteenth century, poverty was counted a crime. The whole territory was divided into three portions, and the respective revenues and resources were given (1) to support the priesthood and ceremonial worship of the sun, who was their god; (2) to the reigning Inca for the expenses of the royal household and the cost of government; (3) to the people at so much a head. The extent of land apportioned to each householder was regulated by the size of his family. This nation of workers wrought as one man for the common good. Their simple wants were easily and entirely satisfied, no one was overworked, and thus they lived a happy and contented life, with frequent holidays and festivals. Under a social system so well organized that no man could be poor unless he were incorrigibly idle we cannot wonder that those who did fall into poverty and want through sheer indolence were regarded as deliberate criminals and were even allowed to starve.

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

in comparison with the Catholicism of a man like Di Loria. You don't understand 'Young Italy.' He does not openly renounce the forms, because it would not be a civil thing to do; reflection on his ancestors, and so on; but for sheer, absolute skepticism commend me to one of those courteous gentlemen reared in the ancient faith! They don't trouble themselves to protest; they're not protestants by nature like us, and they can't understand the urgency we feel to declare where we stand. But when it come to a concrete matter—witness the feeling raised by the clerical opposition to erecting the statue to Bruno in Rome. Rhoda isn't going to lose any centuries if—"

"But in other than religious affairs, you don't claim that they are progressive?"

"Eminently, when you think of the odds they've had to fight against. Why, this delicious climate alone is enough to pervert Jonathan Edwards to Universalism and make Edison a lotos-eater. We've been progressing as we strugled away from discomforts, they haven't any to struggle away from down here. I call it an act of sublimity for a man to think about his soul or the welfare of the race on a shore like this. Besides, you don't understand Rhoda, mother. She isn't the advanced being you think she is; she is one of the most absolutely conventional people I know. Of course she has an exceptional intelligence, and good taste into the bargain, so she follows only the higher conventions and more exalted fashions. It's the fashion ust now for the superior woman to be broadly philanthropic—and a mighty good one it is—and perhaps a little mystical, so all of you who have souls above chiffons take to al sorts of intensities in the moral and religious line. And then each says the other is a remarkable woman!'

"Oh, my son!"

"Oh, my mother, even so. There is a sort of heavenly crankiness about you—"

"Reginald, I will not permit you to use that expresion in my presence," said Mrs. Winter decisively. "There has been an incalculable amount of harm done by that word 'crank.' People who are shut out from the faintest comprehension of high motives can always discredit them by throwing that abominable epithet at all who are actuated by them. There is no emotion, no belief so exalted that it cannot be made ridiculous. A prophet in a garb of motley appears like a common fool; that word is hideously effective as a garment to clothe real worth with absurdity."

"And there is no emotion or belief of real worth that will not stand the test of ridicule in the end."

"In the end, perhaps. But how about the people who haven't the continuity of purpose to carry them so far, and are turned aside to lower things at the outset?"

"Just as well lost to the cause—whatever it may be. Fittest survive."

"I am thinking more of the people than of the cause."

"They wouldn't like it when they got there and found what it really was. But about Rhoda—she's just the sweet, loving woman that we all adore only informed by a better intellect, and restrained by a fairly correct taste. Eugene will make her miserable. She isn't low down enough to take his abuse and like him the better for it, and I'm afraid she isn't high up enough to send him about his business and take up with this handsome fellow with his eyes and his patriotism and his palaces."

"You would think that an act of high moral courage!"

"Of high common sense, which is the better virtue, any day."

"Oh, Regy, you can never bring all existence down to that standard."

"No, more's the pity.'

"Was it common sense that has induced men to leave home and friends and country for the sake of a principle?'

' 'When it was a political principle, yes, as a rule; the long-headed view of results."

"Results by which they individually did not profit.'

"You may be sure they expected to eventually, in time or eternity, even if they failed."

"You have no conception of righteousness for its own sake."

"Who has?'

"Many have thought they had, and acted accordingly."

"Many have been all wrong then; righteousness is a means, not an end."

"What is the end?"

"Happiness."

"That is one of the new-fashioned commonplaces, Regy."

"You mean it has become a new fashion to so phrase an old conviction long acted upon.'

'But from time immemorial men have acted upon convictions directly opposed to securing their happiness, my boy."

THE AGONY OF INDECISION.

Some Women Slaves to the Habit of Vacillation.

I would rather regulate my life by the flip of a penny than suffer the tortures of indecision that I know some women do, says Ruth Cameron in a Pittsburg paper.

"Shall I get straw matting or denim for the new bedroom carpet?"

"Shall I have Mary sweep the front room today and wash the blankets tomorrow or wash the blankets today and clean the front rooms tomorrow?"

"Shall I have roast lamb and asparagus for the special company Sunday, or would it be better to have planked steak?"

Hours and nerves and complexions they wear out swinging the balance back and forth between such weighty questions as these and in the end make no wiser decisions than if they had settled them offhand. Some women make themselves fairly wretched over their wardrobes, such awful opportunity for vacillation they find in choice of material and trimming and make. To others papering and carpeting resolve themselves into a perfect agony of indecision. "I would rather clean that house from top to bottom than pick out a living room carpet again," I heard one woman say the other day. "I do believe I got more tired from tramping around and trying to make up my mind than from all the sweeping and dusting and washing I did." We have just been through the agonies of papering a room in my own home, which perhaps accounts for my warmth on the subject.

It took us two weeks to pick out that paper, and before we ceased wavering between the yellow paper with the poppy border and the pink stripes with the rose border mother almost had to take to her bed.

Indecision is a disease, and, what's more, it is a chronic and a cumulative disease. The more you let yourself be undecided the more undecided you are going to be.

Mental suggestion and mental firmness in following the suggestion is about the only remedy possible.

In the effort to cure myself, for I might as well confess that much of this sermon is directed at my own vacillations, I have formulated three rules.

Perhaps they're worth passing on.

First.—Bring up the arguments slowly and carefully for each side. If they are many and complicated, take a pencil and write them down.

Second.—After having thus gone over the ground make a decision and act upon it at once in some way so that it shall become irrevocable.

Third.—When you begin to feel a tendency to regret your course, to wallow in walls of "it might have been" and to tremble at the consequences that may follow your decision, repeat the following classic stanza:

The cow is in the hammock,
The calf is in the lake,
The baby's in the garbage pail.
What difference does it make?

HELPS FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

Squeeze a few drops of lemon in the water in which potatoes are boiled just before they are done and they will not turn black.

If soda is mixed with flour in making ginger cookies with sour milk instead of being dissolved in milk, as is the usual way, they will be lighter.

Paint that sticks to glass can be removed with hot vinegar.

Cleaning pots and pans is the bugbear of the cook. It is hard work at best, and if left until after the dishes are washed it hangs over one as a burden. One easy way is to keep a supply of newspapers in the kitchen, and as soon as a skillet is emptied pour in it a little boiling water, then throw the water out and rub skillet with a large piece of paper. If the frying pan is not clean add a little more water and finally polish until dry with a fresh piece of paper and hang away before other work is attempted.

To keep milk toast from being soggy, as it too frequently is, try serving the boiling, buttered milk in a covered pitcher, passing it with crisp, hot toast. In this way each person can have toast as soft or as crisp as desired.

The housekeeper who wants "the best" does her own marketing, and does it early, before the foodstuffs are picked over or wilted from the hot sun.

More Americans should understand cooking with curry powder. It makes a delicious change for the cooking of meats, rice, eggs and fish. An Anglo-Indian will tell you we know nothing of the use of curries, but that is no reason why we should not learn.

There are fewer reckoning days if housekeepers pay cash. If they persist in running accounts for groceries and other staples they should have a book and see to it that the right price is put down the minute anything is bought.

The only nourishment that bread affords is that which the flour contains.

Bread baking is merely putting flour in appetising form.

Flour making is merely putting the nutritious part of wheat in shape for bread making.

Bargain Cigars

A Club man, who was detained at the house for a part of the day, handed his wife, who was going down town, a quarter of a dollar and requested her to get him three cigars for it.

When she returned she handed him the package, remarking, exultantly: "That shows that women can beat men all hollow when it comes to making purchases. I found a place where I could get eight for a quarter instead of three. Isn't that going some?"

And the poor man, as he took his medicine, merely remarked:

"It certainly is, dear."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Harper's Weekly.

Do not throw away old umbrellas By removing the cloth cover and cutting it up in strips you can make a number of dainty neckties for your husband. The ribs, properly twisted, and woven together, make a very good rat-trap, and the stick, when carefully polished, will do for a cane to present to the clergyman at Christmas.

To keep freckles from showing get a small paintpot, quart size, and fill with a pink paint carefully matching the tone of your complexion, and with a camel's hair brush paint each freckle out.

If your lamp wicks give out, a very satisfactory substitute can be made of Irish point lace or Valenciennes, carefully wound round the wick holder. A knitted necktie will serve the same purpose, but is apt to burn fitfully and give out a pungent odor.

All housekeepers know how flat is the taste of pears when cooked. This can be cured by soaking them well in cod-liver oil overnight before boiling It gives quite a flavor to the fruit, and, as we all know, is not unwholesome.

If your small boy is restless and kicks the covers off at night, a good way to stop it is to make them over into a bag, and after inserting the boy tie the neck of the bag firmly with seventeen knots in a stout cord.

Your yard stick of morality must be full-length if you would measure accurately.

C.P.R.'s Wonderful Record

The sanguine predictions of Sir John Macdonald, Sir Charles Tupper and those who supported the policy of a railway from ocean to ocean have been more than realized, and the doleful forebodings of failure and ruin to the country if it committed itself to the aiding of the building of such a road have been scattered to the four winds, as most Grit predictions are..

The financial statement of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the year ending June 30 shows, for the railway property alone, as follows:

Gross earnings	$ 76,313,321
Working expenses	53,357,748
Net earnings	$22,955,573

The meaning of these figures can best be appreciated by comparison with those of former years, since the expectations of the men who promoted the enterprise began to be realized. The gross earnings and operating expenses of the road since 1900 have been:

	Gross earnings.	Working Expenses.
1901	$30,855,203	$18,745,828
1902	37,503,053	23,417,141
1903	43,957,373	28,120,527
1904	46,469,132	32,256,027
1905	50,481,822	35,006,793
1906	61,669,758	38,696,445
1907	72,217,527	46,914,218
1908	71,384,173	49,591,807
1909	76,313,321	53,357,748

The earnings, it will be noted, have more than doubled since 1901, and the working expenses have considerably more than doubled in the same time. In 1901 they took 60 3-4 per cent. of the gross receipts; in 1906 they amounted to almost 69 1-2 per cent. This growth in the percentage is largely due to the increases in wages, not only of the men who work on the road, but of those who in other branches of industry find employment in producing what the railways consume, and the variety of articles is immense. The problem created by this advance in cost has not always been successfully overcome.

It were well, in the interests of the Dominion, if the Grand Trunk Pacific can present so favorable a statement after 20 years of operation. It will not, is our prediction.

106 Contests—Local Option

Local optionists are still to the fore. No less than 106 municipalities are to enter the campaign and vote on local option by-laws in Ontario in January next. Among the towns, villages and townships are the following:

Towns— Brampton, Clinton, Dresden, Dundas and Uxbridge.

Villages—Ailsa Craig, Blyth, Bradford, Brussels, Burlington, Dundalk, Elora, Exeter, Fergus, Grand Valley, Port Perry, Shelburne and Teeswater.

Townships— Delaware, Dumphries South, Dungannon, Eastnor, Grey, Harwich, Hilton, Lobo, London, Nichol, Oxford North, Pilkington, St. Joseph, Stephen, Tossoronto, Turnbury, Westmeath and Westminster.

These thirty-six places, added to the two cities, twenty towns, five villages and forty-three townships already announced, make a total of 106 municipalities which have entered or will enter upon local option campaigns this season.

The English Budget

Cable news from Great Britain indicates a falling off of the opposition to the Asquith budget. This was expected by those who took the trouble to reflect upon the character of the great majority of the electors. Any attack upon landed properties and men of wealth, or supposed wealth, is always popular with the socialistic portion of the people, all of whom have votes, and to this element is the Lloyd-George class of statesmanship of the present day directed.

The cable says: "There has been a distinct diminution in the public opposition to the bill during the past few weeks. The reason of this is the repeated declarations of Lloyd-George and Winston Churchill that they are striving to put through burdens exclusively on the rich, and the idea appeals to the masses, who are unable to understand that it is impossible, in the ultimate effect, to differentiate."

FIVE DREARY DAYS IN DUNGEON CELL

ENGLISH SUFFRAGETTE TELLS AMERICAN READERS OF HER EXPERIENCES IN PRISON,

London, July 17.—On Monday, July 12, I was sent to prison for six weeks for the part I had taken in the women's demonstration on June 29. On Monday, July 18, I was set at liberty.

For five days and six hours I have been without food, and for five days I have been shut up in a punishment cell in Holloway, a cell which I can only fitly describe as a dungeon, and which I do not believe anyone outside of the officials of Holloway would believe to exist in civilized England in the twentieth century.

When we got to Holloway on the night of Monday, July 12, we determined to protest against being imprisoned in the second division as common criminals. On Tuesday, as we were not placed in the first division, we decided to break all the prison regulations. We sang aloud "The Marseillaise." When the governor came to see me on Tuesday morning I said to him, "Can you not let us have any air in these cells?" and he said, "It is impossible for you to have any more than you get now." I said to him, "We shall, then, have to find a means for ourselves." The wardress came to me and said I was to clear up my cell. I refused. When they had left I broke three panes of glass in my cell windows, and in that way I was able to get air to breathe.

On Wednesday afternoon our cell door was flung open. "Come at once!" I was told. I took up my bag to bring that with me, but it was taken from me by force. I was then taken downstairs, and found in a room a committee of some twenty magistrates, and I was asked whether I had any reason why I should not be punished. I explained to them that I had taken part in a political act, and I refused to be treated as a common criminal. They sentenced me to seven days' solitary confinement in the punishment cell.

I shall never forget the horrible place into which I was taken. When I saw the damp, underground dungeon into which they led me I could have cried bitterly, but somehow the spirit always comes to you when you are fighting for principle, and I determined to stand my ground. The place was horribly dirty and seemed full of all kinds of germs. There was scarcely any ventilation and no light, except that which came from a thick skylight in the ceiling, so that the place was nearly dark.

The only bed in the room was a piece of wood let into the wall. The whole place seemed to me as though it had not been used for a very long time, and was dark and damp. I saw that all means of protest had been taken from me except one, and that was to do what Miss Wallace Dunlop had done, and refuse to take any food.

The hardest time was the first twenty-four hours. Milk was brought to me, which I felt I could have taken very willingly, but I put it from me. Then the wardress brought me in some food. I said to her, "Will you please take that out?" She refused. I therefore took the tin in which it was and rolled it out of the cell, and what was in it went upon the ground. On Friday I took to my bed, and the doctor told me that if I persisted I should get fever, but I was absolutely determined to do my part at whatever sacrifice.

On Sunday night I was taken to the hospital, and there a fresh effort was made to get me to take food. Medicine was brought to me, which I absolutely refused, knowing that it was either food in another form or else intended to aggravate my hunger. On Monday afternoon my head was exceedingly bad, and I felt that I hardly knew what I was doing, but I determined that I would not give in. In the evening the governor came to me and said, "I have orders to release you."

Could you use another suit at a price? We believe you can and will, after you learn the value of the suit and the price that will buy it. We're going to do some great stunts in the way of suit selling and have taken all broken lines of Men's Suits which have been selling all season for $6.50, $7.50 to $8.50, placed them by themselves and now offer them to first comers for just

We want no carry overs and of course to do this we must be willing to accept a loss. We would rather count the money than carry the stock. If your size should be missing from one line you are sure to find it in another.

GETTING YOUR CHILDREN READY FOR SCHOOL—DO NOT OVERLOOK THEIR EYES.

Perfect and easy vision is necessary to stand the strain imposed upon them by their many school duties. Eye Strain uses up an excessive amount of nervous energy and causes the child to become tired and disinterested in its work. Properly Fitted Glasses have released many children from the bondage of eye-strain and made them happy and energetic scholars. Do not ignore frequent complaints of headache, tired or aching eyes, but let us make a careful and scientific examination, and if necessary supply the Proper Glasses. There is no truth in the frequent statement, "I do not like putting glasses on children, because they may always have to wear them." The reverse is the truth, by putting the Correct Glasses on the child during the growing time in many cases they outgrow the error entirely and are able later to go without glasses, whereas if neglected too long they will always have to wear them without getting as satisfactory results even by wearing the glasses. Charges moderate. Consultation free.

Capt. Hunter Doing Excellent Work In Protection Of Fish

Kingston, Aug. 17.—Captain Alfred Hunter, Eastern Ontario Fishery Overseer, is doing good work in preventing illegal netting and fishing generally. On Saturday evening he started out in the Government yacht Navarch, and went down the River St. Lawrence. Three miles above Gananoque he secured a mile and a half of gill net. The live fish were returned to the water and the dead ones were given away. The name of the owner of the net has not yet been secured.

He also secured a skiff with a jack light and spearing outfit. The owners of the outfit claimed to be ignorant of the law, so they were not prosecuted, but the skiff and fishing tackle were confiscated.

Every true lover of sport appreciates the work done by the Government officials at preserving the fish.

Former Belleville Man Leases Hotel, Scene Of Tragedy.

The Royal or Hunter Hotel, of Bobcaygeon, where the terrible shooting affair took place over a week ago, has at last been leased and reopened under new management. Thos. Green, of Whitby, and his son, Frank Green, of London, formerly clerk in the Benson House, Lindsay, are the men who have secured the well-known hotel. Mr. Green at one time was the lessee of the City Hotel, in Belleville.

Alarm Clock Gave Quebec Man Away.

AND THEN THE CUSTOMS OFFICERS FOUND 25 GOLD STICKPINS IN HIS OVERCOAT POCKET.

New York, August 16. — An alarm clock ringing vociferously in the overcoat pocket of M. Henri Robitaille, a cabin passenger on the Bretagne, of the French line, just as he was about to step through the gate on leaving the pier just after the ship berthed from Havre, caused him to be held up and searched. M. Robitaille who is the president of the Eureka Distilling Company, of Quebec, Canada, was much disturbed when six boxes containing twenty-five gold stick pins were taken from the pockets of his overcoats.

Many People Went To See Lift Lock

The annual excursion to the Peterboro lift lock, which left here to-day under the auspices of Holloway st. Church, was very successful. Over 200 people went from Napanee alone. The train had eleven cars when it left this city, eight of them being full. Many more passengers will be taken on at other places. It looks as though the record will be broken.

Price of Bread—Rents and Taxes

Chief Newton, Mr. Harry W. Parker, of Minneapolis, (brother of Sir Gilbert Parker) and a newspaper man were talking in the police station this morning, and the conversation drifted up to the high cost of living in different places.

The Chief could not see how English bakers imported Canadian flour and then sold a four-pound loaf in London at the same price that a three pound loaf brings in Belleville.

"Talking of living expenses," said Mr. Parker, "I pay $65 a month for the flat I live in when I'm at home."

"Talking of living expenses again," said the newspaper man, "what do you gentlemen think of the taxes they pay in an English town I was in a little while ago? How much? Eleven shillings in the pound, or 55 per cent."

And still Canadians contribute not a copper to the upkeep of the British navy.

Need Large Mains

Mr. Gardiner, manager of the Gas works, was seen by The Intelligencer this morning in regard to the alleged poor pressure in certain outlying districts. The trouble, Mr. Gardiner said, is caused by some of the mains being too small. They are doing the best they can at the Gas works, but 3-inch mains are needed in certain districts where only 2-inch mains are laid. There doesn't seem to be much chance to remedy matters at present.

Sewerage Affairs As Seen by Mr. Flint

FOUR-FIFTHS OF WEST BELLEVILLE PROPERTY-OWNERS, HE SAYS, HAVE PETITIONED AGAINST THE COUNCIL'S SCHEME — A GRIEVANCE IN EAST BELLEVILLE.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

My Dear Sir,—I beg to inform the good citizens of West Belleville that we have called in the several petitions which have been circulated against the West Belleville sewer scheme, because we have secured as many petitioners as we desire. There are in the two wards, Coleman and Murney, 535 real estate owners. About 400 of these have petitioned against the scheme. We could easily have procured over one hundred more if we had wished so to do. I did not find one person in favor of it, and I very much doubt if there are ten owners in the two wards who approve of the scheme.

May I say a word as to Macdonald street sewer in East Belleville? I am in favor of this sewer and quite willing to pay whatever frontage tax may be assessed, but I have signed a petition against the present scheme as outlined in the Council's notice. I assume the idea is to make Macdonald street sewer a trunk sewer, into which, in time, laterals may run from the several streets east of Charles. Now, Charles street has a sewer, for which the owners on both sides of the street are taxed. No lateral sewer could, therefore, be built from Charles street to the trunk sewer on Dundas street. Why, then, should the citizens living on the east side of Charles street be taxed at all for this trunk sewer, paying the taxes they do for the Charles street sewer? Why are the fortunate citizens living on the west side of Charles street exempted from the tax for the trunk sewer, while the east side of the street must be taxed? My good neighbors will not misunderstand me, I do not ask that those living on the west side of the street should be taxed, but I ask, where is the principle or the justice in taxing any people living on Charles street, who are already taxed for their sewer? My friend, Mr. Mikel, has real estate on Charles street, for which he pays a sewer tax. He has none on Dundas street. Why should he pay a tax for trunk sewer alluded to, when no lateral sewer in which he is interested will run to Dundas street sewer? If the scheme was reasonable, I would support it, but at present must decline to do so.

I am, yours,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.

Norwood Shooting Was An Accident.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Norwood, Ont., August 18.—It now seems to be beyond all doubt that the shooting of little Stella Willoughby by her father, James Willoughby, yesterday afternoon, was purely accidental.

The Willoughbys have been always known as quiet, respectable people, and there could be no possible motive for a crime.

Willoughby's own death, it is also now generally conceded, was the result of shock caused by his child's tragic death. The man had not been in robust health for some time past.

Coroner Grey will open the inquest this afternoon.

WHAT CAUSES THE BLUES

London, Eng.—Doctors have discovered that the "blues" or "mental depression and irritability" is really a disease caused by defective circulation in the cells of the brain.

The "British Health Review" says "by improving the circulation, there is an immediate improvement in the mental outlook".

If this is the case, we Canadians do not have to wait for the foreign scientists to pursue their investigations any farther. We have the cure for the "blues" in those wonderful fruit liver tablets called "Fruit-a-tives".

It is doubtful if the greatest physicians abroad will ever discover anything to equal "Fruit-a-tives" to purify and enrich the blood and improve the circulation.

They go straight to the root of the trouble, stimulating the torpid liver and kidneys and regulating the bowels. Thus they cleanse the whole system and renew vitality, mental as well as physical.

WORKED MANY GRAFTS.

Men In Montreal Jail Must Face Long List of Charges.

Montreal, Aug. 18.—The three men, Alloff, Shykofsky and Katsoff, who have been in jail for several weeks, waiting for the police to gather up evidence against them as bogus claims agents, are liable to have a great deal to answer for before they see liberty again.

They have been committed for trial at the next term of the King's Bench and in the meantime the C.P.R. secret service are unearthing a series of bogus claims which the above-named trio worked off upon the unsuspecting companies, such as the Grand Trunk, the C.P.R. and the Montreal Street Railway.

It transpires that the men always had a raft of creatures who were ready to swear that they had been hurt or had lost articles of value, many of which were paid for by the companies rather than go into the courts.

PLANS FOR THE NAVY

Canada's Fleet Will Be Started on Both Coasts.

Official Statement From London Says That Work on Atlantic and Pacific Simultaneously Along the Lines Suggested by Sir John Fisher—Dock Facilities Will Be Improved—Good Feeling Shown.

London, Aug. 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A lengthy statement is published giving the "general lines" of the scheme of Canadian naval defence.

According to this, the formation of a nucleus of a Canadian navy will be begun immediately on lines suggested by Sir John Fisher in 1907.

Canadian ambition would not be satisfied by a mere contribution of money. Canada wants her own navy. On this point the supreme consideration is the constitutional freedom of state, and to this, questions of strategy, no matter how important, must be subordinated, says the stateman.

Respecting details, disposition of ships, etc., these are not yet concluded, but it is obvious that Canada would not be fulfilling her own undertaking if she placed all her eggs in one basket. She has two oceans to consider and work will begin practically simultaneously on both coasts.

The scheme also includes an increase of dock facilities. It is unlikely that the naval forces will be limited to Halifax, Esquimalt and Prince Rupert; possibly Quebec and Montreal will also have to be considered.

The very best feeling has been displayed on both sides at the conference, a perfect understanding existing between the Imperial and Dominion authorities."

Track Foreman Killed.

Galt, Ont., Aug. 18.—John McVicar, a track foreman of the Galt, Preston and Hespeler street railway, was accidently killed yesterday afternoon by being struck by a car near the golf links station. He was 60 years of age, and leaves a widow and four children.

He was carrying a sledge on his shoulder and it came into contact with the moving car, producing a large gash on the back of his head, and pitching deceased partly under the car, where his left leg was crushed.

Mexico City, Aug. 18.—A delayed despatch received here yesterday from Acapulco, says three severe earthquake shocks were experienced there on Monday. The ocean dropped far below its usual level and along the entire shore line of the port the beach was exposed for a distance of 30 feet. These shocks are believed to be the same as those recently registered at the Washington Observatory.

DEADLY POISONS.

Nearly One-half of Those Known Are Chemical Rarities.

"There are only about 160 deadly poisons known to science," said an expert in poison lore the other day. "Of these 160 quickly fatal drugs one-third are alkaloids, and more than a score are complicated animal and vegetable poisons not yet fully classified. Nearly half of the total number of known poisons are chemical rarities—not things that ever get into the coroners' reports. Of these 160 kinds of poisons 19 per cent. act directly on the brain or on the spinal cord, either by bringing on unconsciousness or by stimulating the mind to such an extent that delirium follows; 5 1-2 per cent. affect the respiration and only a little more than 4 per cent. the heart primarily. Nearly 40 per cent. are irritant poisons, and the rest have a mixed action on the human body. Arsenic, for example, produces almost the same symptoms as Asiatic cholera; phosphorus produces jaundice, and strychnine's effects resemble a case of lockjaw. All these symptoms, of course, are those that precede death when a fatal dose has been taken.

"A good many of these poisons are dangerous to manufacture. Mercuric methide, for instance, brings madness to those who work too long at making it. A gas rises from it that is not immediately fatal, but that causes temporary insanity, which may, of course, become permanent.

"Potassium bichromate is another dangerous chemical and one that is used in large quantities commercially. The workmen who breathe in the dust that rises from the manufacture of this deadly poison finally lose their noses. For that reason those who work over this chemical have their faces protected by respirators. Even then the dust is so fine and insidious that they do not escape entirely, and many suffer from painful affections of the skin. The horses that work about the factory where this potassium bichromate is made on a large scale are mostly lame. The dust gets into their hoofs and causes sores. Cyanide of potassium looks so much like sugar that the workmen in the factories where it is made keep their mouths bandaged to help them resist the temptation to eat some of of it. A pinch of this poison is fatal instantly, as every one knows. It is used in the separation of gold from the other metals with which it is found in the earth, and thousands of tons of this particularly deadly poison are employed for that purpose every year all over the world.

"Some of these poisons have been known for ages. Prussic acid, then called 'the poison of the peach,' was used by the Egyptians before the pyramids were built. They were the first to distill the poison from peach pits."

Fifteenth Century Artists.

Artists in Italy in the fifteenth century were little better off than small shopkeepers. This is shown by the dowries they usually gave their daughters, which varied from $1,040 to $2,080, and it is related as an extraordinary instance that Andrew Manegna gave his daughter $2,600 at the time of her marriage, which was about the close of the fifteenth century. Michelangelo, Raphael and Titian were the only painters of the fifteenth century who succeeded in attaining a position of ease. Michelangelo at his death left about $48,000, besides some real estate, to his nephew, Leonardo. Raphael's property was estimated to be worth $135,000, while Durer was worth at the time of his death only $31,650. In those days, however, pensions were frequently given to artists by sovereigns and cities.

Small Mercies.

The young English tourist who had been staying for a week at a hotel in the Scottish Highlands for the purpose of taking advantage of the fishing was at the end of that time rather inclined to think that the fishing had taken advantage of him. He had caught nothing, and his expenses, of course, had been none the less heavy.

On the last day of his stay, however, he landed a fine salmon.

"Well, Donald," he said to a canny Scot at the hotel as he proudly surveyed the fish, "it's a nice catch, and so it ought to be. It has cost me £15 at least."

"Aweel," replied Donald calmly, "it's a gr-great blessin' ye didna catch ony mair!"

Predisposition to Disease.

Children are seldom born diseased. They may be born with a tendency to disease because one or both parents are suffering from it. As we know, certain conditions favor the development of certain disease. Place a child in conditions that have produced disease in the parents, and the tendency will be to produce the same disease in the child. So we sometimes find whole families die of consumption or diphtheria or something else, not because the disease was inherited or "caught," but because the same conditions produce the same result in all the cases.

A Mysterious Visitor.

New Servant—Please, mum, there's a strange lady downstairs, and she didn't have no card. She took off her things, as if she intended to stay, and she looked around the room with her nose in the air, as if things wasn't good enough for her, and she rubbed the winder to see if it was clean, and she peeped in the dark corners and then looked at the dust on her fingers and sniffed.

Mistress—I can't imagine who the creature can be. My husband's mother and sisters are away.

Teacher and Tommy.

Teacher—Tommy, can you tell me what shape the world is? Tommy—It is round. Teacher—How do you know it is round? Tommy—Because you told me yourself, Teacher—Yes, but my telling you the world is round doesn't make it round. How do I know it's round? Tommy—I suppose somebody told you.

They Help Your Stomach Out

And Save You a World of Wretchedness

A stomach that cannot digest a good meal is certainly a sore trial. It has been responsible for almost everything in the way of human misery, up to suicide.

The trouble in most cases is that the stomach and other digestive organs lack vigor. Not enough of the juices necessary to digestion are secreted, nor does the stomach work up the food properly.

The worst of it is that there is not sufficient nourishment taken out of the food to restore the system's vigor, and the trouble goes from bad to worse. The stomach needs help.

"Little Digesters" meet the need exactly. One "Little Digester" after each meal will ensure perfect digestion, provided, of course, that the food is good and wholesome.

"Little Digesters" are guaranteed to cure Indigestion, and Dyspepsia, or your money will be refunded.

WESTERNER GETS PRIZE

Nelson Marksman Wins in O.R.A. Banker's Match.

Pte. F. E. Weir Carries Off Money In Yesterday's Big Event at Long Branch — Four Ontarians and a Saskatchewan Man Divide Prize In Mackenzie Match, All Making Possibles—Dundas Cadets Win.

Long Branch, Aug. 19.—In the second day's matches at the Ontario Rifle Association meet, Pte. F. E. Weir of Nelson, B.C., won the honors and high money in the Bankers' match, four Ontario men and a Saskatchewan man divided the prize in the Mackenzie match, all making possibles, and Pte. Bibby of the 71st Regiment, Fredericton, N.B., and Pte. Patterson of the Oxford Rifles, made possibles in the Macdonald match and bunched the prize money.

Weather conditions yesterday were as good as could be hoped for, and some excellent scores were chalked up. Several times during the day, however, what is known as a fish tail wind sprang up and threw some ordinarily good shots off their bearing. During the shooting of the Mackenzie match some marksmen started off with the wind gauge three degrees to the left and before they had finished the wind was five degrees to the right.

The shooting all through was not so good as last year. Sixty-one points or better was required last year to get in the money list of the Bankers' match, while this year, with 23 more competitors, 59 scores got money. Also in the Mackenzie match a number of thirties got prizes, while last year 32 was required to get a money prize.

During the early afternoon the light was very bright and threw a glitter on the targets, which was not the best for good marksmanship. The Dundas cadets are now the permanent owners of the Pellatt challenge trophy, valued at $120, having won it on two previous occasions. The Harbord cadets won it the first year and the Guelph vadets won it one year.

Canadian Cities Excel.

New York, Aug. 19.—James Shaw Maxwell, senior magistrate of the city of Glasgow, who is making an extensive tour of the United States and Canada, has arrived in New York.

He is taking advantage of the opportunity to study American public institutions and declares he has been greatly impressed with those he has already visited, Chicago, Boston, Toronto, and Ottawa.

Coming, as he does, from the birthplace of municipal ownership, Mr. Maxwell professes surprise that the citizens of the large municipalities are not more interested in that problem.

"From what I have already observed," he said, "the Canadian cities are far ahead of those in the United States in many respects. They appear to be better regulated and are kept cleaner."

Little Girl Cast Adrift.

Montreal, Aug. 19.—Sent to a false address in Montreal from Burlington, Vermont, Germaune Huot, 12 years old, walked the streets without money or home or friends until she fell exhausted. She was taken in by Councillor Martel, of Montreal West.

Her story is that her father died when she was young and left her mother well off. He was a doctor at St. Johns, P.Q. Her mother died three years ago, and her money was put in the Banque St. Johns, of which Hon. P. H. Roy was president. The bank failed and she lost all. When the woman with whom she lived in Burlington found that she could get no money out of her she sent her to Montreal without money and to a false address.

Will Force an Interview.

London, Aug. 19.—The militant suffragettes who have been picketing the House of Commons for the past six weeks with the object of securing an interview with Premier Asquith, have extended their operations to the Premier's residence on Downing street.

Mrs. Despard and Mrs. Saunderson yesterday afternoon took up their stand outside Mr. Asquith's house and declared that sentries would be maintained uninterruptedly until the Premier granted an audience.

The Premier, however, is able to slip through a garden in the rear of his house to which the public does not enjoy access.

TWO-YEAR-OLD IS LOST

Lad Wanders Away From Home Near Stellarton, N.S.

Large Bodies of Men Are Searching, But So Far Without Success—The Little Fellow's Grandmother Was Picking Berries Near the House When He Got Away—Used Chair to Open the Latch.

Halifax, Aug. 19.—Great excitement prevails in Stellarton over the fate of a two-year-old child of Rudolph Mueller, who was lost on Tuesday afternoon at Mount William, about two miles from Stellarton. Mayor Campbell of Stellarton had a large force of men on the search within one hour after he was notified of the case. This force was increased in the evening by the fire department, who continued the search all night, and yesterday the coal miners, assisted by a large number of I.C.R. employes, are diligently searching the woods which surround the house where the child was last seen. Mr. Mueller's mother left the child sleeping in the house while she and another woman went picking blueberries. When she returned she found the door open and the child gone. A child's chair was pulled up to the door, as if he had it there to open the latch.

Mrs. Mueller says she was only 400 yards from the house and could see the house door. She was on the alert to hear the child cry if he woke up. His right heel was sore and he was barefooted. His parents are Bulgarians, and the child cannot speak English. In spite of the heavy rain yesterday large crowds searched the woods, but as yet have found no trace of the lost boy. Heavy brushwood extends in nearly all directions from the house where the child was last seen.

German Navy Manoeuvres.

Kiel, Aug. 19.—The entire German fleet comprising 40 battleships and armored cruisers and 50 torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers left here yesterday to take part in the extensive summer manoeuvres under the command of Prince Henry of Prussia, who is on board the flagship Deutschland.

In addition to the two active squadrons, one reserve squadron of eight defence battleships and another composed of cruisers, will take part in the manoeuvres which will commence in the Baltic and probably extend to the North Sea.

Emperor William will review the fleet on Aug. 30 off Swinemunde and later there will be an attack by the torpedo boats at Luebeck Harbor and an attempt to land a strong force on the coast. The shore line will be defended by an army corps.

Killed Under Wall.

Toronto, Aug. 17.—Percy Jones, aged 16, died in the General Hospital at 8 o'clock last night from injuries sustained at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when a wall fell in on him.

Jones, who is a driver in the employ of William J. Street, plumber, 117 Pembroke street, was engaged in salvaging on the ground on University avenue which is being cleared of buildings for the new hospital. He asked if the wall was in a safe condition. The men were preparing to pull it down, but as their preparations had not been completed, they thought it was safe and told him so. He went under it and it collapsed.

Alfonso Wants to Fight.

Madrid, Aug. 19.—King Alfonso is taking the keenest interest in the war in Morocco and all of Premier Maure's influence is required to prevent him from going to the front.

His Majesty writes daily to officers at Melilla whom he knows personally.

Neither King Alfonso nor any member of the royal household has participated in any entertainments or rejoicings since the war has been in progress and the social life of Madrid is almost at a standstill.

Mysterious Cattle Disease.

Port Hope, Ont., Aug. 19.—A mysterious cattle disease has broken out in the herd owned by James Dickson, near Campbell-Croft, and much alarm is felt in that neighborhood.

Inspector Stork of Toronto was up and investigated the herd, but he did not say what the trouble was. It resembles blackleg. Though the herd has been vaccinated three valuable animals have died.

For Conciliation Board.

Ottawa, Aug. 19.—F. A. Acland, who is now in Fort William, in connection with the dispute between the Canadian Pacific and its freight handlers, has wired Hon. MacKenzie King, that the employes have nominated Frederick Urry, secretary of the Trades and Labor Council, as one of the members of the board of conciliation. The C.P.R. has recommended W. J. Christie of Winnipeg.

$100,000 Gift to Princeton.

New York, Aug. 19.—Princeton University is given $100,000 by the will yesterday of Cornelius C. Schuyler, the banker who was killed recently in an auto accident in France.

The sum is known as the Theodore C. Schuyler fund, the income to be used as the trustees may deem best.

There is no substitute for thorough-going, ardent and sincere earnestness. —Dickens.

Lad's Story Is Verified.

Young Shelley Might Have Been Shooting Birds

Detective Greer Makes Test of Rifle in Hall Tragedy Near Simcoe and Finds That Bullet Will Carry to Hall Home—Other Shots Hit Farm After Old Man Was Killed—"Accident" Theory Seems Good.

Simcoe, Oct. Aug. 19.—That Emery Shelley, the boy charged with the murder of old Michael Hall on Sunday last, was most probable innocent of any intention to do harm, seems quite likely after Detective Greer's experiments yesterday.

A careful survey of the bush opposite and 250 yards from the Hall stable strengthened the theory that the bullets might easily have done their work from this thicket, and that shots from in the woods at a bird in the border would be within range of the marks they made.

A test was made with a 22-calibre Stephens rifle with 22 short ammunition, which showed that death could result at 300 yards. It was also seen that the bullets penetrated medium hard wood when fired from over 100 yards, as far as they did when at a distance of only five yards.

One thing that strongly upholds the "accidental" theory is that the old man was killed by the first shot, yet others continued to rattle on the building, also that shots were scattered wide apart, as though fired at random.

Another thing, if the accused really did the shooting, it doesn't look like a wilful act, also he wouldn't likely have continued shooting on his way home.

The neighbor, Thos. Overholt, told the detective that when he stopped the boy shooting on his farm on Sunday lest some of his children be injured, it was after Hall had been killed. The boy was then coming from the direction of the Hall house and was on his way home, but so far as Overholt could see had no dead thrush with him.

In the event of lack of evidence or proof sufficient to connect young Shelley with the firing of the fatal shot, the crown may still prosecute on a charge of criminal negligence, on the ground that the lad had no right to roam about a populated country, Sundays or week days, discharging a firearm at will.

Revolver Missed Fire.

Glace Bay, N.S., Aug. 19.—The first tragedy of the strike was nearly enacted at the Reserve Colliery early yesterday morning. Special Constable John McDonald, while making his rounds at Norway Crossing, was accosted by three strikers and asked what he was doing. The officer made a reply, and as he started to leave one of the men struck him with his fist. The officer grabbed his man and knocked him down. The other two assailants then started kicking the officer, and landed some nasty blows on his head, chest and stomach. The man whom the officer knocked down then made his escape. McDonald grappled with one of the assailants, and pulling his gun, he pressed the cold steel against the other's throat and pulled the trigger. The gun missed fire, and once again the trigger was pulled, with the same result. One man was arrested.

Wants to Find Wife.

Boston, Aug. 19.—Anxious to capture his deserting young wife, who was Lillian S. Hayunga of Morrisburg, Ont., V. L. Spearrin of Lawrence, Mass., has sought the aid of the police.

Spearrin thinks his wife has gone to her girlhood home, and the police in that town have been notified to watch for her.

The young woman, in a letter to her husband, states she will never return to him.

Tunnel Under Jail Wall.

Pittsburg, Aug. 19.—Discovery of a tunnel at the Western Pennsylvania Penitentiary yesterday frustrated what would have been a wholsale escape of prisoners.

Two convicts suspected of digging the tunnel are now in solitary confinement and three life prisoners are under surveillance.

Information is refused, but it is said the tunnel was within a few feet of wall when discovered.

To Shoot by Sandglass.

Ottawa, Aug. 19.—In connection with the shortcoming of the time limit for each shot to 45 seconds, a novel plan will be tried at the D.R.A. next week.

Each register-keeper will be equipped with a sandglass in which the sand runs through in exactly 45 seconds. When the target comes up the glass will be upended and the rifleman must get his shot off before the sand is in bottom.

Dynamite In Battleship Coal.

London, Aug. 19.—A despatch from Portsmouth to The Daily Graphic says there is much alarm there owing to the discovery thrice lately of supposed dynamite cartridges among the coal shipped to Portsmouth for the battleships. The latest find of this character was during the coaling on Tuesday of the cruiser Duke of Edinburgh.

Almost a Jailbreak.

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 19.—Several desperate prisoner in the city police station all but succeeded in getting way yesterday. R. Faulkner was caught climbing over the transom. The bars of the window had been sawn through and if it had not been noticed, 30 prisoners might soon have been freed.

Elected by Three.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Aug. 19.—In the bye-election in the fourth district of Prince County yesterday, M. C. Delaney (Con.) defeated Capt. Joseph Read (Lib.) by three votes.

The standing of the parties in the Legislature is: Government, 16; Opposition 14.

Arrested Close to Border.

Niagara Falls, Aug. 19.—Arrested yesterday morning just as he was beginning to cross the steel arch bridge to the United States, the capture of a man, said to be Samuel Gordon, wanted in Brantford, charged with uttering forged checks, is regarded as a smart piece of work by Detective Kelly of the Ontario frontier police.

The man gives his name as Samuel Ipzcovitz, a Jew, of Brantford, salesman of optical goods. He answers in every particular to the Samuel Gordon of the same town, wanted on a charge of uttering two forged checks and getting them cashed in a bank at Brantford.

First Showing of Ladies New Fall Suits

We have never shown Fall Suits so early in the season and though by no means complete, the present showing is representative o the styles to be in vogue this coming season.

Some of the most noticeable features are the longer coats, the elongated waist line and the fuller skirt coats are still semi-fitting, though a little tighter perhaps than last season, while the slender hip is still maintained. Many of the models have pleated panels introduced in both coats and skirts. Some adhere strictly to tailored lines while others are smartly trimmed with touches of soutache braid, pipings of satin and jet buttons, others have pockets, cuffs and collars, trimmed with moire silk.

Altogether the styles are more pleasing, the qualities better and the prices more moderate than we have been able to offer before. Prices $18.00 to $38.00.

New Arrivals in the Skirt Section

Almost every day now sees new skirts added to our stock and the shades and styles are certainly more than ordinarily attractive, while the designing and workmanship cannot fail to excite your admiration. The new models are shown in plain and fancy striped worsteds, serges, panamas, voiles and venetians and the color range includes medium and dark browns, greys, navies, greens, and black. Some are plain tailored many are in the new pleated effects with touches of satin and jet buttons, splendid styles, priced at $5.75, $6.50, $7.50 up to $18.00.

Schonblom-Fisher.

LEGAL GENTLEMAN IN NEW YORK STATE CAPTURES A CHARMING BRIDE IN THIS CITY.

A very pretty wedding took place last evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. Fisher, Geddes st., when his second daughter, Elizabeth Derothy, was united in marriage to Judge Frank E. Schonblom, of Ebenezer, N. Y.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. L. Geen, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride who was given away by her father, looked charming in a white princess gown and carried a beautiful bridal bouquet of white carnations. The bride and groom were unattended.

After the ceremony the party repaired to the dining-room where a dainty repast was partaken of.

The table decorations were carnations and asters.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold brooch with diamond setting. Mr. and Mrs. Schonblom will spend a short time in the city and vicinity, before taking up their residence in Ebenezer, N. Y.

The Sewerage Scheme.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

My Dear Sir, — Since giving statement of number of petitioners against West Belleville sewer scheme I have received a petition signed with fifty-six signatures. Total number of owners, five hundred and thirty-five. Of this number four hundred and thirty-two owners have petitioned against the scheme. I learn that a gentleman, who obtained about twenty-five signatures, lost the petition. If these names were added it would make a total of four hundred and fifty-seven against the scheme out of five hundred and thirty-five, leaving only seventy-eight owners in the two wards who have not petitioned against it.

I am, yours,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.

$320,637,590 !

Our Liberal friends boast of the progress of the Dominion under their reign. That liberalism is a cardinal principle in their policy is shown by the fact that the Dominion's net debt has now reached $320,637,590, and that during the month of July the increase reached the sum of $5,651,324.

A summary of the financial record, published in Ottawa, of the first one-third of the fiscal year of the Dominion Government, gives the following result:

Four months of the current fiscal year were completed on July 31, and the financial statement for that period shows an increase of about four and a half million dollars in the revenue of the Dominion, as compared with the corresponding period of last year. The expenditure on consolidated fund increased by nearly three millions and the capital expenditure by nearly a million. Revenue for the four months amounted to $30,030,311, as compared with $25,502,299 for the four months ended July 31, 1908, the increase being general in all sources of income. Customs receipts increased by $3,275,000, Post Office by $25,000, railways by $330,000, and "miscellaneous" by over a million. Excise receipts decreased by about $135,000. The increases in capital expenditure include $257,637 in railways, $45,000 in Dominion lands, $621,424 in railway subsidies, and $37,000 in bounties.

For the month of July the revenue was $8,437,438, an increase of $1,773,978 over the revenue for July last year. The ordinary expenditure was $11,968,679, an increase of $1,111,516; capital expenditure for the month was $2,411,922, a decrease of $269,580 as compared with July, 1908.

On July 31 the net debt of the Dominion was $320,637,590, an increase of $5,651,324 during the month.

Who will say, after reading the above statement, that we are not progressing, in getting into debt, at least?

Party Appointments.

"To the victors belong the spoils," was not only the motto of Andrew Jackson and those who succeeded him in power and authority in the United States, but the practise also. As time rolled on that theory and practise gradually fell into disuse, but it took a long time to effect any reform, no matter of how moderate a character it might. President Taft, however, seems to have broken down the barrier that for over a century has prevented the appointment to office of any one not of a victorious party. While in this respect the United States has been reforming, Canada has been retrograding. Party, not qualification, has been and is still the ruling passion in all appointments of the present Ottawa Government, until the public service suffers.

President Taft evidently desires to not only treat the Democratic States fairly, but with justice. In making appointments to the census staff, in the Southern States, which are overwhelmingly Democratic, he has intimated his intention of selecting for the work, one-half from the ranks of the Democratic party and the other half from the Republican ranks. In uncertain States all the selections will be Republicans, for what reason is not stated. The President qualifies this announcement with the statement that the appointees shall be capable men rather than active partisans.

Is the Ottawa Government honest enough to adopt the same policy? Not a bit of it. The patronage-mongers and place hunters will not permit it.

THE BEST HERITAGE.

Good health is one of the first requisites to success. Prolonged application to any subject cannot be sustained without well fed nerves.

If nervous energy could be secured by a large cash payment, every person would make a big effort to find the money.

By reason of well directed study, assisted by practical experience, a way has been found to supply energy to jaded and overwrought nerves, without it's costing a fortune.

Pure, fresh air, exercise, and eating the simplest foods, will produce this desired result.

Among foods for human consumption none contain the necessary elements to sustain life in greater quantities than milk and wheat.

Orange Meat, which is made from the whole wheat, thoroughly steam cooked, malted, flaked and toasted, contains the necessary elements to sustain life in greater proportions than any other cereal.

ORANGE MEAT and milk is a perfect food.

A FEW HELPS FOR BUSY WIVES.

Oxalic acid diluted will remove ink stains.

To clean suede shoes use a very bristle brush.

Clean linoleum with warm water and polish it with milk.

Use tissue papers to clean mirrors, plate glass and table glassware.

A cracked egg may be boiled if you first wet the crack and sprinkle salt on it.

The most convenient and cheapest of all disinfectants to use in the cellar is quicklime.

Fill rat holes with laundry soap moistened and sprinkled with cayenne pepper.

Decorated china plates should be put away with round pieces of canton flannel between them.

No soap on window panes! Rub them with either alcohol or ammonia to make them shine.

Never use silk to mend kid gloves, as it cuts the kid, always cotton and sew on the wrong side.

In laundering black dress goods use a small portion of black diamond dye, mixing it with the starch.

More Text-Books At Low Prices.

COST OF HIGH SCHOOL BOOKS NOW REDUCED.

Toronto, Aug. 18. — Further reductions in the prices of text-books have been secured by the Provincial Government, which has already provided Public School Readers to be sold at less than half the price of the old series. The Department of Education hass arranged for the publication of five High School books, some of which are new and others revised editions of texts now in use. They are: The Ontario School Bookkeeping, a new book, at 30 cents, instead of 60 cents, the cost of the old book; a new edition of the present High School German Grammar, at 70 cents, instead of a dollar; a new edition of the High School Arithmetic, at 40 cents, instead of 60 cents; a new Ontario High School Chemistry, to sell at 40 cents, as compared with 50 cents, which was paid for the old Chemistry; Ontario High School Laboratory Manual in Chemistry, at 20 cents. With the reduction in prices it has also been possible to secure an improvement in the quality of the books. Contracts have been made, and the work of publication is going on.

A new type of text-book in writing book is being provided in the Ontario Writing Course, which will be sold for five cents a copy. It contains exercises which can be used to supplement those in the ordinary copy books.

Flour Down Again.

Toronto, Aug. 19.—Flour has tumbled in price about 40 cents a barrel. The outlook for a great wheat yield is responsible for the reduction.

Flour is Down, but Bread Stays Up.

Toronto, August 19. — Following the example of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company the leading flour millers of Canada yesterday reduced the price of flour forty cents a barrel, thus lowering the price of the higher grade from $6.20 to $5.80 and $5.40. Despite the drop in the price of flour city bakers declare that there will be no immediate reduction in the price of bread, but state that if the reports of a very abundant wheat crop hold good, and thereby a further recession in the price of flour, bread will come down. Cake bakers state that the reduction in flour will make no difference in the price of pastry, which is largely governed by the prevailing prices of eggs and butter, which are very dear at present, with no immediate prospect of any reduction.

Mr. Chas. Wilmot's horses took two more prizes yesterday at the Cobourg Horse Show, namely, 1st in saddle mare or gelding, driven by a lady, (Miss Wilmot) and 2nd with Black Silk in high jumping pony.

Jack Johnson and Sam Berger are both headed for California. Johnson says he will have no more dealings with Jeffries' manager until after his fight with Ketchel. Berger declares that Jeffries will not return here before Oct. 1, and that he will be at the ringside when Ketchel and Johnson hook up. Promoter Coffroth is on record with the statement that if Johnson actually signs to fight Jeffries he will outbid all of the other promoters who say they are after the match. Coffroth declares that he can go as high as $65,000, which will land the fight for his Colma Club.

British Man-of-War Surprised Germans.

The German press is full of astonishment over a recent incident showing how perfect is the science of navigation as practised by the navigators of the British Army, says the Brockville Times. An English man-of-war recently visited several of the German sea-ports, and, despite a heavy fog, slipped quietly into her moorings in the German harbor entirely under the direction of her own navigators. A British man-of-war did a very similar thing a few years ago in New York harbor, to the unbounded amazement of the United States naval men. And the navigators of the British navy do many other astonishing feats in the way of navigating their warships, big and little, which are never heard of by the general public but which nevertheless call for exceptional courage, cool nerve, and a profound knowledge of the seas and the seaports in all parts of the world.

OBITUARY.

MRS. JOHN NIGHTINGALE.

A much respected lady passed away this morning in the person of Mrs. John Nightingale, of Huff's Island, Prince Edward County. She was 65 years old, and had been ill about two weeks. A sorrowing husband and two sons are left to mourn. The sons are Thomas, at home, and Ignatius, of Vancouver.

Deafness can be Cured.

Sufferers from impaired hearing will be glad to know that their affliction is probably not due to any organic defect in the ear, but results probably from a thickening of the lining of the middle ear caused by catarrhal inflammation. Hundreds of perfect recoveries as a result of the inhalation of Catarrhozone are reported, and on the highest authority we recommend this treatment to our readers. Catarrhozone quickly restores lost hearing and its efficiency is placed beyond dispute by the case of Mr. Foxwell, of St. Thomas, who recovered perfect hearing by using Catarrhozone after years of deafness. Price $1.00, at all druggists or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

A Wonderful Spectacle.

Lord Curzon not long ago wrote the following graphic description of the Victoria falls in Africa: "The edge once passed, the falls appear to excel in grandeur any spectacle of the same kind in the world. The cliff wall down which they are hurled is sheer from top to bottom, 350 to 400 feet, of perpendicular descent, uninterrupted, save where in some places gigantic masses of basalt, split off or eroded by the same process as has formed the chasm itself, lie at the base and shatter the descending columns into a tempest of foam.

"Conceive a black wall as high as Shakespeare's cliff, at Dover, Eng., nearly as high as the cross of St. Paul's, and over a mile in length, and over the top of this tremendous precipice a continuous cataract of water toppling down from the sky, save in the three places where larger islands, carrying their growth of jungle right to the edge of the abyss, have protected a section of the cliff and interposed a gleaming surface of ebon rock between the snowy fleeces of the falls on either side.

"In scenery, the surroundings of the Victoria falls greatly surpass their American rival (Niagara). For every pinnacle and rocky buttress is clothed from top to bottom, at least in the rainy season, with a clustering forest growth; and the contract of the white storm of the cataract and the gloomy swirl of the torrent, with the brilliant green of the verdure amid which it pursues its course, is a fascination that never palls.

"Never can there fade from the mind of one who has seen it the vision of these towers of descending foam, the shouting face of the cataract, the thunder of the watery phalanxes as they charge and reel and are shattered in the bottom of the abyss, or the spray spumes whizzing upward like a battery of rockets into the air."

Leaves Million to Baptist Church.

Louisville, Aug. 18.—Theodore Harris, the aged banker who died a few days ago leaving more than one million dollars, willed practically his entire estate to the Baptists of Kentucky. He left comparatively few cash bequests to his family, which is large His blood heirs will have a life tenure in certain portions of his estate, enough to net them an income of $150 a month each.

In his will, written and signed April 15, 1907, he provides, further, that should the beneficiaries he names die or become otherwise disqualified the portion set aside for them shall revert to the estate as a whole and be paid eventually into the hands of the Baptist church organizations.

The discrepancy between his bequests to the church and those to his own children he explains by saying: The observations of a long life have taught me that inherited wealth is seldom useful to the one inheriting it, while on the other hand, with the blessings of God, these benefactions will do good to thousands yet unborn.

One of the most welcome among the many exchanges which come to our desk is THE NEWS, of Toronto. THE NEWS has recently made wonderful advances, so much so that old friends of the paper would hardly recognize in this great Canadian newspaper the old News of a few years ago. THE NEWS now contains from fourteen to twenty pages each day, with twenty-four to thirty-two on Saturday. A specialty is made of political and Parliamentary news and questions affecting the welfare of the public receive fair editorial treatment by clever writers. We are safe in saying that there is no paper more widely quoted in Canada and its cartoons are reproduced by many of the leading journals. Through an arrangement made with THE NEWS we are able to offer The Intelligencer and THE NEWS in a club for one year at the remarkably cheap price of $4.00. a21-dtf

The Field Post Office which was tried for the first time at the Niagara Camp and with such excellent results, will be operated at the Model Military Camp at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, and the further experiment will be made of having the Military Postmen handle the mail for the entire Exhibition grounds.

Canadian National Exhibition

TORONTO

HORSES AT THE FAIR.

Everything Points to an Immense Exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Horse entries are coming in so fast at the office of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, that the success of that department promises to be more pronounced than ever before.

The prizes given for speeding in the ring aggregate $4,000, and that in itself is a guarantee that the fastest harness horses in Canada will again be found in the races on the afternoon of August 30th and 31st and Sept. 1st and 2nd.

In Clydesdales everything points to an entry that will exceed last year's show, when they were there in numbers and quality that cannot be equalled anywhere on the continent. Hackneys are growing better year by year and the show of them is excellent, while Toronto is a centre for hunters and jumpers of the very highest class; the competitions in this line excite almost world-wide interest.

In harness horses there is always a great exhibit, while the pony classes have been enlarged and extended in keeping with the growing popularity of the children's pets.

TREASURES IN ART.

Will be a Feature of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

Famous pictures from the leading art galleries of Europe will again be a feature of the Canadian National Exhibition. The permanent agent cables that he has secured many of the leading pictures of the year, and that the list is coming by mail. In addition to this there will be an exhibit of art photography by the leading art photographers of England, Germany, France and Italy, and a graphic art exhibit by the leading illustrators of New York, including such men as Frederick Remington, Maxfield Parish and Charles Dana Gibson.

GOODS WHILE YOU WAIT.

Process of manufacture an interesting feature of Canadian National Exhibition.

The process of manufacture department is always one of the most interesting features of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and this year it promises to be far more extensive than ever before. In all there will be about forty industries at work showing just how shoes, silk, cotton goods, prints, and many other of the articles you use every day are made. It is impossible here to name more than a few of the exhibitors, but here are some well worth looking up.

The United Shoe Manufacturing Co., Montreal, manufacturing ladies' and gents' boots and shoes, showing the different stages from the cutting out of the leather to the finished shoe.

Merchants Rubber Co., of Berlin, demonstrating the manufacture of rubber shoes, showing every process from the crude rubber to the finished boot.

Davis & Henderson, manufacturing and printing envelopes.

The Canadian Silk Co. weaving silk and badges with photos on them.

Gundy, Clapperton, cutting glass, showing the process in which the fine quality of cut glass is produced.

Shredded Wheat, showing process in which their products are prepared and made portable and palatable.

Dominion Textile Co., Montreal, showing process of manufacture of fine cotton goods, prints, etc.

SHEEP AND SWINE.

Sheep and swine come in for a large share of attention at the Canadian National Exhibition. The best in Yorkshires, Berkshires and Tamworths fill the pig pens at the big Fair, while in the sheep pens are Shropshires, Cotswolds, Leicesters, Oxford Downs of the first quality. All the best that Canada and the United States can produce are found in this department. That the exhibit is a large one is shown by the fact that permanent pens have been built on the grounds for 700 sheep and 600 pigs. Then there is poultry and pet stock enough to fill a building 220 ft. by 60 ft.

The Department of Agriculture is putting on a display of wholesome and diseased meats at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, and will send two lecturers from Ottawa to tell the people how to discern the good from diseased meats. This should be of interest to cattle men, as well as meat producers.

EXPLODING SUBMARINE MINES.

Ships to be blown up on the Waterfront at Exhibition Grounds.

The submarine mine which plays such an important part in naval warfare will be part of the military display at the Canadian National Exhibition. These hidden guardians of every port in war time will be laid in front of the Exhibition grounds and every day at 5 o'clock a ship will be blown up by one of them. There is nothing more spectacular than what happens to a ship when it runs on to one of these hidden dangers of the deep.

EXHIBIT

of specially selected plants and seed taken from seed plots of members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, Toronto Industrial Exhibition, Aug. 30 to Sept. 13, and Canada Central Exhibition, Ottawa, Sept. 10 to 18 inclusive. With a view to giving greater publicity to the work which is being done in Canada by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association in the improving of cultivated plants, and in order that a medium may be provided through which the officers of the Association may come in touch with a greater number of those who are specially interested in the problem of crop improvement, arrangements have been made to place a special educational exhibit of selected plants and seed in the Agricultural building of each of the above mentioned Fairs. The exhibit will be in charge of the Secretary or some other officer qualified to discuss the general work of the Association. It is to be hoped that a large number will take advantage of this opportunity to learn more of this important movement.—L. H. NEWMAN, Sec. C.S.G.A.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITS.

All the provinces will be in line with exhibits in the Provinces building at Canadian National Exhibition this year. Each Provincial Government is at work on a display that will do justice to its territory, and the gold and fruit of British Columbia, the golden grain of the prairies from Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba, the various products and minerals of Ontario, right down to the best coal and farm products of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, will form one of the many features that makes the Fair truly National in character.

CORPS VS. CORPS.

Real Live Competitions in the Military Competitions at the Canadian National.

The Military Display and Tournament at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, will have more features of real interest this year than anything of the kind previously attempted in Canada. In such competitions as the Victoria Cross and wrestling on horseback, corps will be arrayed against corps, the Royal Canadian Dragoons stationed at Toronto, against the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery stationed at Kingston. The rivalry between these corps is very keen, so much so that the men are also anxious to mix things up a bit with a single stick in the Balaclava Melee, if the permission of the officers can be obtained. However, the officers have not yet decided. Some think a few hard knocks would not hurt the men, while others are inclined to think that the competition would resolve itself into something too much like actual warfare.

COMEDY IN FIREWORKS.

"The Battle of the North Sea" and "The Siege of Kandahar" are the features but by no means the whole of the fireworks display at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. In addition there are 62 distinct numbers on the fireworks programme and they include everything that can be imagined in pyrotechnics. And in these numbers comedy has its place. For instance a Punch and Judy show is one of the numbers. Another number pictures a boy fishing. A big policeman comes along and orders him away. Another boy seeing this brings on a giant firecracker, sets it behind the policeman and fires it off—result a big policeman kicking on the ground and boys disappearing around the corner.

IMMENSE BANKS OF FLOWERS.

The decorative floral display will again be a feature of the Floriculture department of the Canadian National Exhibition. These immense banks of flowers which cover 500 square feet of floor space make one of the beauty spots of the entire Fair. The premiums for this exhibit alone total $1,110.00, a sum that guarantees plenty of competitors.

DAIRY EDUCATION.

Proper Care of Milk to be Demonstrated at the Canadian National.

The educational features in connection with the Dairy department of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, promise, to be of unusual interest this year, not only to farmers, but to consumers of milk in cities and towns as well. The demonstration work and lectures in the Dairy amphitheatre will be under the immediate charge of Mr. Geo. A. Putnam, director of dairy instructions for the Province, and the Dominion Department will also furnish a man to give some definite instruction along the cow-testing line.

The proper care and handling of milk will be one of the subjects dealt with, and it will be accompanied by demonstrations of milk testing as well as charts showing the value of cow-testing associations.

The Model Military Camp at the Canadian National Exhibition will be fitted with hospital tents for men and women and all casualties on the Exhibition grounds will be handled by the Army Medical Corps which will form part of the permanent corps in the Model Militia Camp.

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

"Yes, for the sake of gaining what they considered the higher happiness of self approval or Divine reward. They were sure of a spiritual gain in that little exchange every time. I don't say they didn't get it in one way or another."

"Does not that prove—"

"It simply proves that tastes differ. Queer, isn't it, that two such widely divergent specimens of our kind as Eugene and Di Loria should happen to have the same on one point."

"Oh, you are so wrong there! The Marchese cares nothing about her in that way. And if he did, and if there were no Eugene in the case, I would not wish it for her. It's not the type for an American woman."

"Now there's where your northern arogance comes in, mother. You have a certain ideal of sturdy virtue—though how in Heaven's name you reconcile it with affection for a vaurien like Eugene and a trifler like me is more than I can understand. and you forget that there is no earthly necessity for being sturdy except under pressure. Why should you endeavor to breast the elements in a rose-garden? Those old Puritan and Knickerbocker ancestors of ours had to hew their way through stubborn forests and heaped snow-drifts. If they had been transported from New England and New York to Southern Italy they would have all been lying around in the sunshine and touching the tuneful guitar in the second generation. Why not? It's what happened in the 'anarchs of the North,' ages ago. These people can be heroic when occasion demands it. We learned our vigor by wresting substance from an unkindly soil. They have no fight with nature, she is their best friend, but when they must needs fight man they generally come to time, I observe."

"But—"

"Won't that do for this time, mother, if I continue in our next?"

Mrs. Winter kissed him, with a sigh.

"But she has only known him a month," she said, half to herself.

"What has that to do with it?"

"Such a little while—"

"Do you remember the time that elapseed between Romeo's first sight of Juliet and his declaration?"

"Oh, if you are going to draw conclusions from Shakespeare!"

"He didn't know much of life, did he?"

Mrs. Winter walked away, really vexed with Regy, and seriously alarmed at his suggestions.

CHAPTER XII.

THE POMPEIAN VILLA.

And Rhoda? At least for a time she was happy. No prescience of coming storm disturbed her. She had put away from her all consideration of those grave perplexities which had newly distressed her through those letters from Vienna, and, knowing her own disposition, was amazed to find her resolve effective and herself free from recurrent pangs. She could not understand the bold delight unmarred by the old tremors and hesitations, with which she abandoned herself to the enjoyment of the present, and could have cried aloud with the great German: "Naples is a paradise; in it one lives in a sort of intoxicated self-forgetfulness. It is even so with me—I seem quite altered. Yesterday I said to myself, 'Either you have always been mad, or or you are so now.'"

The languid and chilly existence of other days seemed like a long dream. The influx of bounding life flooded her being. She looked at the trees, bending benath their fragarnt load of golden fruit, at the thickets, starred with deep-tinted flowers, at the young children, round-limbed, flushed and eager, at the whole teeming country about her, sky and sea shore, alive with the soft creatures that flew and swam and ran before her, and exulted in a strange glad, acknowledgement of a newly discovered kinship with it all. For the first time this thought-worn child of a sad and doubting day felt the great heart of Mother Nature pulse beneath her as she threw herself on the ground and buried her face in a tangle of vines. The elemental earth passion stirred within her. She yearned back to the woods, and the streams, as if she were dryad or faun, and her lips, breathing hitherto only words of perplexed affection and struggling thought, shaped themselves ever to song. No vexed questions of ethics now, no nice weighing of social problems, no half-hearted efforts at social reform. Life, life! Only stirring, beating, growing life, the same that coursed through the veins of the trees and the birds, that throbbed in the glad hearts of the shy, fleeting animals and the laughing children, only sublimated into conscious delight in the fuller development of her strong, young womanhood.

But in all this awakening to a vivid sense of the primal joys of existence was no element of human passion, nature's last supreme expression of dynamic force—not yet. Her feeling for Merriam lay in a region quite apart from this new realm of sensation, and she recognized in Di Loria scarcely more than a factor in the soft beauty of the scene that lay about her. It was not love, but love never found its way into a heart better prepared for its reception. It was a glorious transition state, as much more beautiful than whatever might come after as the delicate splendours of dawn are more beautiful than the full daylight. If it could have lasted then would life have been an experience incomparably sweet and fine—but when has charm lasted beyond the appointed time?

What Di Loria felt in these days is at once easier and more difficult to describe. He was thoroughly in love, and he knew it, but the effect of love on that exquisite nature was something which constantly evades analysis. It had come upon him, the sudden clinging, penetrating passion which the ancients knew and sung so well, and he made no effort to resist it. Why should he? It was not his fashion to banish any gentle guest, and he knew nothing of the bonds that held the lady of his election. We all love, love, love even when we know nothing about it, and like to hint vaguely at emotions for which the adequate phrase has not yet been found, wondering all the time what this be-sung be-praised passion may really be. But Di Loria knew. He loved roses, though he cared little for botany, and he did not dissect his feelings, nor make a point of enjoying them after the manner of those who prey upon their sentiments and

A GOOD YARN.

How a Ship at Sea Would Have Foundered, But—

He was a sailor, an old sailor, therefore a good story teller.

"Well," he was saying, "we were jogging along down under when a thunderstorm overtook us, and the very first flash of lightning struck the deck amidships and bored a hole as big as my leg right down through the bottom of the vessel."

"And she foundered, of course."

"No, sir. The water began rushing in, and she would have foundered, but there came a second flash, and a bolt struck the fore to'gallant mast. It was cut off near the top, turned bottom end up, and as it came down it entered the hole and plugged it up as tight as a drum. When we got down to drydock we simply sawed off either end and left the plug in the planks."

Not Included.

The children belonging to a family living in a certain rural district heard that their father had that day been elected county sheriff and went home from school wild with excitement.

"Ma," one of them asked as the event was being discussed, "are we all sheriffs?"

"Of course not," returned the mother, with dignity. "It's only me and your pa."—Woman's Home Companion.

Absent All Around.

The absentminded professor returned home one evening and, after ringing his front doorbell for some time to no effect, heard the maid's voice from the second story window, "The professor is not in."

"All right," quietly answered the professor. "I'll call again." And he hobbled down the stone steps.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Exasperating.

"How is it that your wife gets you so sore at her? Does she henpeck you?"

"Quite the contrary, darn it! When we have an argument and I prove that I am right she sighs meekly and says, 'Oh, well, my dear, have it your own way!'"—Cleveland Leader.

Hitting the Pike.

Guyer—How about the wealthy class that can ride in automobiles?

Stung Again.

"I don't believe in hiding my light under a bushel," remarked young Sapleigh.

"You would be foolish to do so," rejoined Miss Slashem, "when a pint cup would more than hide it."—Chicago News.

But Not Crooked Ones.

"These suburban gardeners with their airs make me tired. They are a disreputable lot, anyway."

"How so?"

"Aren't they all professed rooters and grafters?"—Baltimore American.

So Shy!

"Where do you live, my lass?"

"Tee-hee! No. 411 Steenth street, but mamma don't allow gentlemen to call on me jest yet."

The Deliberate Shopper.

"Would you advise me to buy this?" asked the shopper.

"Madam," replied the conscientious clerk wearily, "I really would not. It has gone out of style since you began looking at it."—Philadelphia Ledger.

CHINESE ART.

Two Distinct Methods In Depicting Scenes of Nature and Life.

Chinese paintings are subjects that until very recently were but slightly known to occidental students of art. Yet recently light on this subjects shows that some of the Chinese artists as early as the first crusade had created paintings not only cleverly drawn and masterfully colored, but filled with that subtle artistic sense that is universally understood and appreciated by cultured mankind.

Chinese temples have furnished the best examples of Chinese paintings, just as the great cathedrals of Europe have given to western civilization the best pictures from the brushes of the Italian, French and Flemish artists. These paintings are mostly Chinese landscapes, although the hunting pictures of Chao Meng Fu, called "Mongols Hunting," is one of the most famous Chinese pictures. Nature studies, especially of birds, are frequent.

But the most singular and interesting point about Chinese painting is perhaps the fact that the two distinct methods were used. The first was called the "kakemono" method, in which the view was supposed to be the same as if one stood on the painting, in place of standing in front about on a level.

This method, couple with some queer views as to perspective values, is what causes Chinese paintings to have their weird appearance to foreign eyes when the beholder has never studied Chinese art methods.

The "kakemono" method is sometimes used, and in these paintings the method used is practically the same as in our own schools of art. The finer elements of painting, such as feeling, repression, color schemes, etc., are said by art critics to be superbly demonstrated by a number of the finer Chinese artists.

In Toronto the other day, they kicked a man to wake him up. He reminds us of a Hamilton policeman.

One thing that bothers a lot of us is, "Why does neighbor so-and-so have so many friends?"

The good woman's smile will do him more good than a dozen handed out by the pudgy faced bartender.

It is said of some society ladies that they sleep in more clothing than they wear at fashionable dances.

THE BIGGEST FERRYBOAT.

It Runs Across Lake Ontario and Carries Thirty Cars a Trip.

New Yorkers are prone to think that about every kind of craft that floats may be seen in the waters thereabout. They may be right as regards the pretentious carriers of passengers and freight, but when it comes to the humble ferryboat they are mistaken.

The municipal ferryboats which ply to Staten Island and South Brooklyn are probably the finest of their kind, but among the boats which carry whole railroad trains those in this harbor take a low rank. The Maryland and the Express of the New Haven railroad look mighty powerful as they pass under the Brooklyn bridge transporting the Federal or the Colonial express between Jersey City and Mott Haven, but they are surpassed by railroad ferries in other parts of the country.

The biggest ferryboat for railroad trains is now in operation on Lake Ontario, between Charlotte, N. Y., the port of Rochester and Cobourg, Ont., sixty-two miles away. Boats of the ordinary ferry type could not make the passage of Lake Ontario safely except in fair weather.

The boat which makes this trip, the Ontario No. 1, looks more like an ocean steamship than a ferryboat. It is 317 feet long. It differs from the ordinary steamship in appearance only at the stern, which looks as if a huge bite had been taken out of it.

If you view this boat from the stern the purpose of its building is apparent. The entire space of the main deck is a runway for cars. There are four tracks on which trains are run from the yards by means of an adjustable apron. It carries thirty loaded cars. There is also room on the upper deck for 1,000 passengers.

The Ontario No. 1 is used chiefly to transport carloads of coal from the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg railway to the Grand Trunk railway. A saving of nearly 100 miles of haul is effected and the congestion of traffic on the Niagara-Toronto lines is relieved.

The trip of sixty-two miles is made in about four hours. It is the only boat operating in the great lakes continuously throughout the year. It started running in November, 1907, and hasn't missed a trip yet.—Washington Post.

Some Strange Letters.

The division of dead letters is one of the show places of the national capital and is visited annually by thousands of sightseers. There is much that appeals to human interest and emotion in the immense stacks of letters and parcels received at the rate of 40,000 a day and containing articles of every description, some of them bearing addresses which cannot be deciphered even by the experts. In the 13,000,000 pieces of mail matter received by the division last year there were 6,000 books, 1,000 pair of eyeglasses, 900 fountain pens, 800 razors, false teeth, marriage certificates, rings, shoes, snakes—in fact, everything from valuable diamonds to penny souvenirs. There was also more than $65,000 in actual money and commercial paper, including checks, drafts, money orders, etc., representing a face value of $2,203,992.—Assistant Postmaster General P. V. De Graw in National Magazine.

Shad.

Owing to its price and scarcity the shad, once the despised "food for Indians," has become a luxury. In William Penn's day the colonists marveled at the shoals that invaded the Delaware. But then the Chesapeake was paved with oysters, and the slaves of Maryland despised so common a diet as terrapin. The shad are today more numerous on the Pacific coast, whither they had to be transplanted, than in the fish's native waters, where the fish commissions of the United States and of Maryland have narrowly averted their extinction.—San Francisco Argonaut.

New Burglar Alarm.

Burglars are expected to have difficulty beating an alarm invented by a German genius. The appliance is very simple, consisting of a curtain or portiere, wired with fine conductors. At certain places on it are fixed small metal knobs, which are connected with the wire conductors. The curtain is then drawn across the window or door or around a safe, and the slightest disturbance breaks the circuit, as the knobs are thrown out of contact with each other.—Chicago News.

Schoolroom Dust.

In the course of a report on the disinfection of schoolrooms W. H. Marsh, an English science teacher, asserts that tests made of samples of schoolroom dust showed the number of micro-organisms therein to be from 50,000,000 to 80,000,000 an ounce. On some days as much as one and one-quarter pounds of dust was swept from a room 400 square feet in area, which, on the basis of the figures quoted, would yield from 1,000,000,000 to 1,600,000,000 micro-organisms.

Sardou and a Statue.

Some months before his death Victorien Sardou, passing with a friend the Place de la Madeleine, pointing to the statue of Jules Simon, said: "There is nothing uglier than this good man in his frock coat. To erect this hideous monument a charming little fountain similar to the one we see on the other side of the place has been suppressed." And now it has been decided to erect the statue of Sardou on the spot occupied by the other fountain.—Cri de Paris.

DISASTERS ON MONT BLANC.

The Worst Occurred In 1870 and Cost Eleven Lives.

In the long list of disasters which darken the history of Mont Blanc the worst, according to Edward Whymper, the famous mountain climber, occurred to a scratch party in 1870.

The amateur Alpinists were two Americans, Mr. Randall and Mr. McBean, and a Scotch minister, the Rev. G. McCorkindale of Gourock. They took with them as guides or assistants no fewer than eight persons from Chamonix, a quite sufficient number. As is usual, they passed the night at the inn upon the rocks which are called the Grand Mulets.

On the next day, writes Professor Whymper in the Strand, a number of persons below watched their progress through telescopes. They were seen to arrive on the summit and to begin the descent. By that time the weather had changed. The wind was something frightful.

Even 12,000 feet below it was seen whirling the snow about so that the members of the party were obliged to throw themselves down to avoid being carried away by it. Then the summit became clouded and was not seen again for eight days.

No one came back, and on Sept. 7 fourteen men from Chamonix started out to try to learn something. Bad weather came on again, and it was not until the 17th that the fate of the party was ascertained. When the rescue party got up they found Mr. McCorkindale and two of the porters about 750 feet below the top, with their heads right way up, but with their clothes somewhat torn, as if they had slipped and fallen.

About 300 feet higher up they came upon Mr. McBean and another porter sitting down, the former with his head leaning on one hand and the elbow on a knapsack.

Upon Mr. McBean a notebook was found containing several entries in respect to the occasion. All the five corpses were hard frozen. They were put into sacks and dragged down to Chamonix. It took three days to transport them. The bodies of the six others have not yet been recovered, but they will probably come to light in the course of a few years.

One of the earliest avalanche accidents on Mont Blanc occurred in 1820, when Dr. Hamel, a Russian, set out on Aug. 18 to go up Mont Blanc, accompanied by two Englishmen and eight guides. They had ascended to a height of more than 14,000 feet, with five guides in front, who were cutting or making steps, when all at once the snow above them gave way and the entire party was carried down a thousand feet over the slopes up which they had toiled.

Snow again broke away above and more or less covered up the whole party. Some of them struggled out, but three of the leading guides were buried into a crevasse and buried under an immense mass of snow.

Ten years afterward, when conducting another tourist up Mont Blanc by the same route, one of the surviving guides pointed to the crevasse and said to his employer, "They are there."

He was wrong. At that time (1830) the bodies were no doubt a considerable distance from the spot where the accident occurred, for the dismembered remains of the three unfortunates commenced to reappear at the lower end of the Glacier des Bossons in 1861, more than four miles away in a direct line from the place where they perished, and must have traveled down on an average at the rate of 500 feet per annum.

Gold on Desolation Island.

Kerguelen, or the island of Desolation, may be the scene of the next gold rush. Situated midway between the Cape of Good Hope and Australia, it is one of the dreariest and most forbidding spots on the surface of the globe. But the captain of a brig, the Carmen, who spent four months there hunting sea elephants, has made a discovery which may lead to important developments. He picked up a pretty little nugget of gold among the pebbles while walking on the shore. The Carmen has arrived at Melbourne with 150 tons of oil, the product of a couple of thousand sea elephants shot by the captain and his men. They also report the discovery of valuable deposits of coal, which they declare to be excellent fuel. Kerguelen belongs to France by right of discovery.

Preventable Accidents.

The American Museum of Safety and Sanitation in its latest bulletin calls attention to the fact that in 1908, in the whole country, from all causes, accidents totaled 500,000 persons, "which is 500 regiments strong, and these victims of the perils of peace would be hours in passing a given point." The bulletin adds that in "America the insurance interests estimate the annual loss to companies from preventable accidents to be $125,000,000. This does not include costs of defending suits at law, in which the person injured receives in judgments scarcely $500 on the average, of which his lawyer usually gets one-half."

Neptune's Belts.

Neptune, the most distant known planet of the solar system, presents to the ordinary telescope only a small greenish disk, on which no distinct markings are visible. But recently telescopic observations have revealed indications of the existence of streaks on Neptune bearing a resemblance to the belts of Jupiter. A few years ago similar streaks were seen on Uranus. Saturn also possesses them, so that it may be said that cloudlike belts are a feature common of all the four greater outer planets.

AFTER MOVING.

Well, here we are—moved at last!
A house this time our shelter is.
Steam heated flats are of the past,
And we are done with terraces.
I hoped that she'd be satisfied
At least until the early fall,
But now she finds, however tired,
Our rugs won't fit the floors at all.

She likes the house and calls it cute.
The parlor color scheme is blue.
Our tapestries, she says, won't suit.
It's up to me to purchase new.
With lighter hangings, it is plain,
Our chairs must reupholstered be.
Our upright needs a coat of stain
Of something like mahogany.

The curtain fixtures are too small,
And very few of them will do.
As there is a reception hall,
I'll have to buy a rug or two.
She's got to have a new settee,
For bedroom use some wicker chairs,
And she has made it plain to me
We must have carpet on the stairs.

Our china cabinet looks cheap
In such a handsome dining room.
It's headed for the rubbish heap
And I for sure financial doom.
But there's one ray of comfort still,
Not all we own is ancient stuff.
One thing we have that fills the bill—
Our kitchen table's good enough.

Strife of Intellects.

"Why don't Dickins and Wickins let their children play together any more?"

"They both think they have the smartest children on earth, and the two families are accusing each other of plagiarism."

More Than One Way.

The caller, a man whom he had known in the old town back in Pennsylvania, had dropped in to talk old times with the busy lawyer, and the lawyer had endured it patiently for an hour and a half. Then, unseen by the caller, he pushed a small knob at the end of his desk and a bell rang in the adjoining room.

"Excuse me a moment, Mr. Hockensplutter," he said, stepping into the other room and proceeding to hold his one sided conversation over an imaginary telephone.

"Hello!"

"— — — — —."

"Yes."

"— — — — —?"

"No, Bertha, I'll not have time to go home for dinner. It's already 4:30, and I have several hours' work yet to do. I am very busy and have been detained."

"— — — — —."

"Yes. Goodby."

Then he went back to his desk, but Mr. Hockensplutter had already risen to go.—Chicago Tribune.

Too Wise.

"Will you take a chance on kissing a pretty girl?" asked the young lady with the raffle tickets at the church fair. The crusty and confirmed bachelor held up his hands in horror. "What, he?" he gasped. "No, indeed. I don't take any such chances as those. Chap took a chance like that one time, and six months later he married the young lady."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

In Great Fear.

Percival came running to his grandma one day asking for a drink of water. "Quick, quick, grandma," he said, "give me a drink of water! Quick!"

After he got his drink he said, "The reason that I was in such a hurry I thought I swallowed a worm while eating an apple, and I wanted to drown it."—Circle Magazine.

Johnnie's Logic.

"Dad," said the victim of the paternal palm, "you're awfully cruel."

"Why so, son?"

"'Cause you don't lick me oftener."

"What's that?"

"If you licked me oftener I'd get tougher and it wouldn't hurt so much."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Disregard of Gold.

"An artist should despise money," said the man with the wide hat and pointed whiskers.

"Yes," answered the one with the velvet coat and big necktie. "I'd like to get hold of enough to enable me to give a practical demonstration of my scorn."—Washington Star.

His Just Deserts.

Smith slapped Jones on the back.

"Hello, old chap!" he gurgled familiarly. "I'll wager $50 you don't recall me!"

Jones gave him an icy stare.

"You win!" he said, passing on.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Plenty of It.

"What was the fruit of your wife's millinery hunt?"

"A peach basket hat trimmed with apples, peaches and grapes. Would you want more fruit than that?"—Baltimore American.

To Drive Away the Mail Order Wolf

You can drive him out quickly if you use the mail order houses' own weapon advertising. Mail order concerns are spending thousands of dollars every week in order to get trade from the home merchants. Do you think for a minute they would keep it up if they did'nt get the business? Don't take it for granted that every one within a radius of 25 miles knows what you have to sell, and what your prices are. Nine cases out of ten your prices are lower, but the customer is influenced by the up-to-date advertising of the mail order house. Every article you advertise should be described and priced. GETTING YOUR CHILDREN READY FOR SCHOOL—DO NOT OVERLOOK THEIR EYES.

Perfect and easy vision is necessary to stand the strain imposed upon them by their many school duties. Eye Strain uses up an excessive amount of nervous energy and causes the child to become tired and disinterested in its work. Properly Fitted Glasses have released many children from the bondage of eye-strain and made them happy and energetic scholars. Do not ignore frequent complaints of headache, tired or aching eyes, but let us make a careful and scientific examination, and if necessary supply the Proper Glasses. There is no truth in the frequent statement, "I do not like putting glasses on children, because they may always have to wear them." The reverse is the truth, by putting the Correct Glasses on the child during the growing time in many cases they outgrow the error entirely and are able later to go without glasses, whereas if neglected too long they will always have to wear them without getting as satisfactory results even by wearing the glasses. Charges moderate. Consultation free.

St. Michael's Picnic— The Sporting Events.

TWO-MILE RACE WAS A CORKER —DYER, OF DESERONTO, WON OUT IN A GARRISON FINISH— THREE FINE BALL GAMES.

The picnic in aid of St. Michael's Academy, held yesterday, was a big success, and the sporting events were productive of great interest and excitement. The baseball games were particularly good, and the spectators were on their toes all the time, while the 5-mile and 2-mile races were being run. Father Spratt may safely shake hands with himself over the success of his picnic.

THE SPORTING EVENTS.

There were three baseball matches, and you probably saw better in the National League, and nowhere else. It was immense. These were the teams which competed:

Lonsdale and Coleman's Flats locked horns first, and the visitors galloped away with the victory by a 5-4 score. They also froze to a prize valued at $15. The farmer lads played gilt-edged baseball, and that's no fairy tale.

Next came Belleville vs. Trenton. The old rivals battled Greeky-Roman at baseball, and the home team came home on the bit, winning by 5-2, and also winning a trophy valued at $15.

Then the losers battled for the leather medal, and Trenton beat Coleman's Flats by 1-0. They gathered in a $10 trophy, too. The Coleman's Flats team, having won nothing, were taken over and presented with a lemon pie.

THE RACES.

Lo, the poor Indian, was pretty nearly the whole tip in the distance races, though Parker, of Peterboro, did hit a snag in Dyer, of Deseronto, and the paleface gathered in the 2-mile race amid barrels of applause. This was the summary:

Five-mile race; 18 entries.
1st—Parker, a Hiawatha Indian.
2nd—H. Dyer, Deseronto.
3rd—W. Brant, Deseronto.

The timers, who were real sporty-looking gentlemen, gave the time as 28.35.

One-mile race; 10 entries.
1.—Geo. Podank, Hiawatha.
2.—T. Brant.
3.—W. Wallace, of Frankford.
Time, 5.15.

440 yards—
1.—J. Craig, Belleville.
2.—W. Craig, Belleville.
3.—L. Gauthier, Belleville.
Time, 1.05.

220 yards—
1.—E. M. Roach.
2.—E. J. Johnson.
3.—W. Wallace.

Two-mile race; seven entries. This was the most exciting event of the day. Parker, the Peterboro Indian, kept ahead by about six feet till they came into the stretch; then Dyer, of Deseronto, running like a thoroughbred, passed him amid an awful uproar, and won out by about four inches. Summary:
1.—H. Dyer, Deseronto.
2.—Parker, of Hiawatha.
3.—Graine, Stirling.

OTHER RACES.

Boys, 10 years and under, 100 yards—W. French, A. Martin, James Boyle.

Girls, 10 years and under, 100 yards—Eileen Fitzgerald, Teresa McCauley, M. M. McGraw.

Boys, 16 years and under, 100 yards—T. Barrett, Stanley Harris, H. Stonge.

Girls, 16 years and under, 100 yards—Rosie Smith, I. Flagler, I. Emsley.

Belleville Won in The Trenton Races.

LOCAL Y. M. C. A. MADE HANDSOME CLEAN-UP IN MATCH RACE WITH TRENTON ASSOCIATION.

The Belleville Y. M. C. A. men went, they saw, they conquered. At Trenton's civic holiday yesterday there was a running clash between Trenton and Belleville's Y. M. C. A., and the home boys won out handsomely. The event was a 5-mile matched race, and these were the entries:

Belleville — R. Oliphant, H. Vickers, Jas. Alexander.

Trenton — A. Reynolds, Harry Palmer and E. Hoag.

The Trenton lads were strictly like the label on the bottle. The Belleville trio finished in front easily, Oliphant winning, Vickers being second and Alexander third. Alexander and Hoag ran like a team all the way, and the local kid just nosed the other chap out at the finish for third place.

Popular Belleville Merchant Married.

A quiet wedding took place yesterday at the residence of Mr. R. A. Barber, merchant, Trenton, when Mr. T. Blackburn, jeweller, and Miss Ida Estella Barber, both of this city, were united in marriage by Rev. F. W. Armstrong. Only a few of their most intimate friends were present.

Police Notes

The guardians of the peace had little to relate this morning. They found enough harness outside of a local harness shop to stock a farm. The owner was up at St. Michael's picnic.

There was a fight in a hotel, in which some chivalrous chap kicked another in the face. A charge may be laid.

A lady complains that she handed over 35 cents to a farmer for some tomatoes and corn. The delicacies were not delivered, and some worthy gentleman had a make-shift dinner. That farmer's conscience should trouble him a lot.

Ladies' Home Journal for September has 100 fashion pictures and 108 pages, with beautiful cover. Leave your order with Geen at once. Price 15 cents

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Aug. 18.—(Special.)—A fair volume of business has been done in ocean freight space of late, there being a good demand from Canadian exporters for space for ranchers, and all the August freight to all ports has been booked up, and some of the Liverpool for the first half of September, at 25s, while agents are asking for London 30s, Glasgow 35s, and Manchester 32s 6d.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the offerings this morning consisted of 1050 cattle, 400 sheep, 700 lambs, 600 hogs and 400 calves.

In spite of the unfavorable weather which prevailed, there was a large gathering of buyers, and, as they all wanted some cattle, the demand in consequence for the best grades was good, and an active trade was done.

The supply was the largest offered at this market this season, but this fact did not seem to have any depression upon the situation, on account of the large requirements of the trade, consequently prices were well maintained.

A feature of the trade was the demand from exporters for a few choice steers to complete shipments with, notwithstanding the discouraging cable advices of late from all the leading foreign centres.

Choice steers sold at 5½c; good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c; medium at 4c to 4¼c, and common at 3c to 3½c per lb. Cows brought from 2½c to 4¼c, and bulls 2⅛c to 4c per lb.

Supplies of small meats were large, for which the demand was active, and a brisk trade was done. The market for lambs was weaker, and prices declined ¼c per lb., with sales at 5½c, but sheep ruled steady at 3¾c per lb.

Receipts of calves are falling off considerably, and in consequence the undertone to the market for them is stronger, and prices have advanced. The demand was good, and sales were made at $3 to $15 each, as to size and quality.

There was no change in the live hog situation, prices being firm under a good demand, and sales of selected lots were made at $8.75; and mixed lots at $8 to $8.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the offerings of live stock were 450 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 550 hogs and 460 calves. The trade in all lines was good, and the prices realized were much the same as those at the above market.

POISON OR SHOCK?

Death of Thomas Willoughby Is Still a Mystery.

Peterboro, Ont., Aug. 19.—Mystery still surrounds the tragic deaths of Thomas Willoughby and his daughter, Stella May, near Norwood on Tuesday.

The inquest held by Coroner Gray yesterday afternoon threw little light on the affair.

Whether Willoughby died as a result of the shock caused by the shooting of his daughter, or whether he ended his life by his own hand will be determined by an analysis of the stomach of the dead man to be made at Toronto. A post-mortem was performed yesterday by Dr. Sutton of Norwood, and the stomach has been sent to Toronto.

The witnesses at the inquest were Doctors Pettigrew and Sutton, the wife of the dead man, and the six-year-old son. The latter proved a good witness. He told of running to the barn when he heard the shot, and his father said to him, "I have shot Stella."

Willoughby's wife said her husband had been despondent at times. He had worried a lot of late. The inquest was adjourned to Thursday, August 26.

Whether death was from natural causes is an important point, under the circumstances, as Willoughby had $2,000 insurance, $1,000 with the Equity Life, and $1,000 with the Canadian Order of Foresters, which could not be realized upon if he committed suicide. While it is related that two weeks ago, Willoughby bought strychnine, such a poison would have caused convulsions, and left traces.

Flag Shot Down.

Canea, Island of Crete, Aug. 19.—A well-directed shot fired by one of the parties of bluejackets landed early yesterday morning from the international squadron anchored in Canea harbor brought down the flag staff of the Canea fort and with it the Greek flag that has threatened to bring about war between Turkey and Greece.

A combined landing party composed of detachments from the ships of the four protecting powers was sent ashore before sunrise yesterday and the task of removing the Hellenic cross flag was carried out in a few minutes, without any attempt at interference on the part of the islanders.

Most of the bluejackets then returned to their ships, but small detachments representing each of the four powers were left behind in occupation of the bastion of the fortress to prevent any attempt on the part of the Cretans to raise another flag. Cretan gendarmes have been posted throughout Canea to maintain order.

Brantford, Aug. 19.—Word reached the city yesterday of a peculiar fatality at Smoothtown, a village on the Indian Reserve, about three miles southeast of Oshweken.

Jessie Cayuga, a young Indian, 21 years of age, was killed in a practice game of baseball. In company with other Indians he was engaged in the play, when he was accidentally struck in the back of the head with the ball, dying from the effects shortly afterwards.

MORE LIKE ACCIDENT

Hall Inquest Opens at Simcoe and Is Adjourned.

Gruesome Bit of Dead Man's Skull Is Laid on Table as an Exhibit in the Case—Crown Attorney Slaght Thinks Suspicion May Be Placed Elsewhere—Lad Was of Rather Wild Habits.

Simcoe, Aug. 20.—The rather unusual proceeding of exhibiting a piece of a dead man's body as evidence in an inquest was resorted to by Dr. Meek yesterday at Coroner W. A. McIntosh's enquiry into the death of Michael Hall, who was shot from behind as he was entering his home, in Charlotteville Township, Sunday afternoon.

Deceased was buried last Tuesday, but Dr. Meek in his post-mortem sawed out a triangular section of the skull containing the bullet hole, and produced it as exhibit "B" this afternoon. It lay on the table in front of the aged Mrs. Hall during her one and a half-hours' examination. The skull of some other party unknown was also displayed for the purpose of showing precisely the location of the fatal wound.

While conclusive evidence was adduced identifying the boy, Emery Shelley, and his 22-calibre rifle, with the Hall vicinity at the time of the fatality, and also showing the boy to be of rather wild habits, the theory that the shooting was accidental seemed to strengthen.

Crown Attorney Slaght asked for an adjournment at 6.30 p.m., because he believed that more evidence might be gathered that might put suspicion for the killing of Hall on some party other than the accused.

W. E. Kelly, K.C., was granted the privilege of cross-examining the witnesses in the interest of young Shelley and succeeded pretty well in making light of the allegations as to the desperado tendencies of the prisoner, until a letter from his mother to one of the lad's former employers was produced.

Mysterious Aeroplane to Compete.

Rheims, Aug. 20.—It is said that one of the surprises of aviation week will be the appearance of a mysterious aeroplane, built along the lines of the Wright machine, which has been used successfully in a number of secret flights held recently near Paris.

The pilot of this machine abandoned a project to fly from Paris down to Rheims only because of the possibility of damaging his flyer. This aeroplane takes to the air immediately without running over the ground or making use of outside force. It rises aloft by varying the angle of the planes, and the strength of its propellers.

Statement Not Quite Correct.

London, Aug. 19.—C.A.P.)—Hon. L. P. Brodeur, interviewed by the Canadian Press re statements contained in the "Lengthy Statement" cables yesterday, said that to take this statement as being a result of the conferences would be incorrect, but to a brief extent the statement was correct.

"I have been asked," said Brodeur, "several times to give information re the proceedings of the conference, but I have always declined, as the members of the conference are bound to secrecy, but I can say an official statement will shortly be issued."

Two Northern Accidents.

North Bay, Ont., Aug. 20.—P. Leduc, laborer, of Sudbury, while walking on the C. P. R. tracks, was struck by the Blind River local express and hurled violently into the ditch, breaking both legs and otherwise injuring him. His condition is critical.

William P. Hall, 20 years of age, who left Toronto this spring with his father, W. H. Hall, to clear a farm near Cochrane, was brought down last night on a stretcher, having smashed three ribs while taking in supplies on a jumper over the improvised roads.

Two Auto Racers Killed.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 20.—William A. Bourque of Springfield, Mass., and Harry Holcomb, of Grandville, Mass., were killed yesterday when their Knox racing machine crashed into the fence on the homestretch of the Indianapolis motor speedway. Bourque, the driver of the car, died as he was being lifted into the ambulance, while Holcombe, his mechanician, died a few minutes after he arrived at the emergency hospital.

Died Suddenly.

Kingston, Aug. 20.—Ernest Roberts, an employe of the city engineer's department, died suddenly. He was 70 years of age and served many years in England as a soldier, being a Crimean veteran. He is survived by a wife and family. His wife and one daughter are in Detroit.

Accidental Death.

Galt, Aug. 20.—Yesterday afternoon the jury empanelled to enquire into the death of John McVicker returned a verdict of accidental death, and attached no blame to any one. The fenders used by the G. P. & H. Railway had been approved by the Railway Commission.

250-Foot Tower Collapsed.

Berlin, Aug. 20.—A 250-foot tower on the building of the English Gas Co., located in the suburb of Schoenberg, collapsed yesterday and fell across the tracks of the Circular Railway, crushing an unoccupied car of a passing train. Five passengers in others cars were injured.

No Whirlpool Cemetery.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 20.—There will be no lonely cemetery under the tall dark pines beside the Whirlpool. Coroner F. W. E. Wilson, whose jurisdiction extends over the territory round the Whirlpool does not approve of the proposition of the Queen Victoria Park Commissioners to inter all bodies recovered from the Whirlpool, which are not identified and claimed by relatives in a necropolis beside the pool.

The coroner thinks that a board which has so much money to expend on the up-keep of the park should be able to spare the forty dollars necessary to give Christian burial to each unfortunate victim of Niagara.

Grain Traffic Decreases.

Kingston, Aug. 20.—The grain elevators here this year experienced the smallest grain delivery since 1884, the smallest on record.

In 1908, there was the greatest amount of grain ever shipped to Kingston, about 15,000,000 bushels, being reported to the local Government Canal Agent. In 1907, over 13,000,000 bushels were received here.

This year only about one-quarter of last year's figures has so far been received. There will be cargoes throughout the fall, but it is doubtful if more than one-third of last year's elevator business will be done.

Militia in Ontario.

Port Arthur, Aug. 20.—A new company will be formed in connection with the 96th Regiment here, making a complete regiment in this city. The Fort William companies will withdraw and form a new regiment to be known as the 103rd Fusiliers.

This makes three regiments in place of one in the past four years, the other being Kenora and Rainy River.

The 96th Regiment received much praise in a letter from Col. Steele for action during the strike trouble at Fort William.

Hog Cholera Near Ottawa.

Ottawa, Aug. 20.—An outbreak of a disease thought to be hog cholera has broken out among hogs in the vicinity of Ottawa, and as a result the Dominion Government has taken the case in hand and destroyed 44 of the animals. Disease is due to the fact that the hogs were fed on city garbage, and accordingly all premises which use this feed have been quarantined.

Major Helmer Prophesies Adoption of New Device

He Declares at Semi-Annual Meeting of O. R. A. that New Peep-Sight Is Greatest Thing of Its Sort Yet Invented and Expects That Canadian Government Will take It Up—Will Improve Poor Marksmen.

Long Branch, Aug. 20.—It is only a matter of time till the B.S.A. peep sight, which experts agree is the best rifle sight ever invented, will be issued by the Government to the Canadian militia, in the opinion of Major Helmer, D.A.G.M.

Many prominent officers of the militia discussed the new sight at the semi-annual meeting of the members of the O.R.A. here yesterday on a motion by W. H. Moore of the 77th regiment, Dundas, that the association council be urged to adopt the sight as has already been done by the Bisley association.

Major Alex. Elliott, who is a skilled optician explained that not more than 10 per cent. of marksmen have good eyes, and that the new sight was such an aid to the eye that all competitors would be practically placed on the same footing. It had been shown at the Bisley matches, another officer stated, that an ordinary rifleman using the B.S.A. sight could shoot all round an expert using any of the sights now generally in use. Major Helmer explained as the reason for the new sight not having been adopted this year, that the lack of facilities for distributing them, made it inadvisible. Only a few riflemen had the B.S.A. sight, he said, and by permitting their use the great bulk of marksmen would have been at a disadvantage. The matter of adopting the ew sight will be considered at the next meeting of the O.R.A. council.

The meeting was held at the noon hour in the officers' tent at the ranges, E. B. Osler, president, in the chair. Besides a hundred or more members the following prominent officers were present: Col. Macdonald, Lt.-Col. John Bruce, Major W. C. King, Major DeBury, Major Dillon, Major Mercer, Major Elliott, Major Helmer and Captain Miller, secretary.

The following were elected to represent the O. R. A. on the council of the D. R. A.: Major Mercer, Major King, Captain Pain, Captain A. A. Smith, Major Hutheson, Major McCrimmon and Captain A. T. Phillips. A committee consisting of Majors Helmer, Dillon and Mercer, Captains J. Crowe and Pain, was appointed to choose a team to represent Ontario in the shoot at Ottawa for the London Merchants' Cup in the D. R. A. meet.

A veteran among Canadian sharpshooters, Captain C. R. Crowe, of Guelph, pulled ahead in the final stage of the City of Toronto match, which was shot off yesterday afternoon, winning a gold medal and $25.

Pte. A. Wilson of the 43rd, D.O.C. R., Ottawa, made the high score in the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York match, winning a silver medallion and $25. Sgt. Morris, of the 46th Bowmanville, a Bisley man, won second prize, consisting of a bronze medallion and $20, while P. M. S. Craig, of the 10th Grenadiers, Toronto, secured third prize, $15.

The wind was the trickiest that the marksmen have had to deal with during the meet, and the scoring was low. Such shooting as a miss following a bullseye was very common, even among the crack shots.

An 8-Year-Old Traveler.

New York, Aug. 20.—Although he is only 8 years old, Master E. Maxim Joubert, grandson of Sir Hiram Maxim, inventor of the Maxim gun, left here Wednesday on the Lusitania of the Cunard Line, to visit his grandfather in Dulwich, England. His parents went to the boat with him, saw that his baggage was put in Cabin B 71, and asked the stewardess who had charge of that room to keep an eye on the lad. As the vessel backed out into the stream the boy stood at the rail waving adieu to his parents.

"He can take pretty good care of himself," said his father on the pier, "and we won't worry about him."

Foreign Coasters Not Barred.

Ottawa, Aug. 20.—A paragraph is going the rounds of the Old Country papers to the effect that all foreign vessels have been prohibited from engaging in the Canadian coasting trade and that the effect had been to withdraw the Norwegian vessels from the coal trade of the St. Lawrence. While it is true that an order-in-council has been passed rescinding the privilege enjoyed by foreign vessels in the coasting trade of Canada, it does not apply to the St. Lawrence, there being a special exception for that trade.

Boys Headed For Canada.

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 20.—With $6.90, two big revolvers, two boxes of cartridges, a good-sized knife, and with a $1.50 automobile, two boys are detained at Canandaigua. They say that their names are Harry Whitlock and Earl Lupton, 16 years old, of Dryden, N.Y., and that they ran away from Dryden Wednesday in the auto of their grandfather, Frank Bliss, to go on a Canadian hunting trip.

Ten Injured in Street.

New York, Aug. 20.—Ten persons were injured, one of them perhaps fatally, yesterday, when a wooden covering over the sidewalk of Sands street, Brooklyn, collapsed as they were passing under it. The structure was under the Brooklyn approach to the new Manhattan Bridge over the East River, and was erected to protect pedestrians from falling iron.

Hazing Cadets Dismissed.

West Point, N.Y., Aug. 20.—By direction of President Taft, seven cadets were dismissed from the U. S. Military Academy yesterday for being involved in the hazing of Rodando Sutton. Cadet Sutton is a brother of Lieut. Sutton of the naval academy, whose death was investigated at Annapolis recently.

RELIGION OF TO-MORROW.

Pope Pius Says Ex-President Eliot of Harvard Is Wrong.

New York, Aug. 20.—A Rome despatch to The Times says that the address delivered by Charles W. Eliot, president Emeritus of Harvard, on July 2, at the Harvard summer school of theology, on "The Religion of the Future," has been translated by the Pope's order into Italian that he may more thoroughly comprehend it.

The translation was read with great care by his holiness, who expressed profound regret that a man of such authority and culture as Dr. Eliot should spread theories which, he said, weer not, in fact, a basis for the new religion of the future, but a negation of faith and of the principles which were the foundation of Christianity and of modern civilization.

Dr. Eliot outlined his idea of the new religion in substance, in part as follows:

"The new religion will not be based upon authority, either spiritual or temporal; the present generation is ready to be led, but not driven. As a rule the older Christian churches have relied on authority. But there is now a tendency toward liberty and progress, and among educated men this feeling is irresistible. In the new religion there will be no personification of natural objects; there will be no deification of remarkable human beings, and the faith will not be racial or tribal."

Mob After Editor.

St. John, N. B., Aug. 19.—Bruce McDougall, publisher of a paper called "Free Speech," in Moncton, was arrested there yesterday on a charge of criminal libel, laid by Patrolman Lucas, of the St. John police force, and was brought to this city last night.

"Free Speech" has been publishing disgusting matter about young ladies of high repute, prominent citizens, aldermen and members of Government and Attorney-General's Department decided that something must be done. Action yesterday comes in consequence.

When Detective Killen arrived last night with McDougall, he was met by a large crowd of enraged citizens, and the police, fearing the man might come in for rough handling, sent a squad of extra men to help the regular force at the depot. McDougall was hurried into a cab and taken to a cell.

Lad Pulled Into River.

Windsor, Aug. 20.—Harold Gibbons, the eight-year-old son of John Gibbons, was pulled into the river by a carp, or some other powerful fish, while fishing from the dock at the foot of Feld avenue.

He went down in about 14 feet of water and being unable to swim, was drowned before his brother's eyes.

The body was recovered.

The brothers left home early in the morning, intending to spend the day fishing. They caught a number of small fish and were exulting in their luck, when Harold, in a spirit of childish glee, shouted, "Oh, Jack, I've got a big one." Harold tugged hard on the line, but there was more power at the other end, and he went headforemost into the water.

Not Murdered in Cemetery.

New York, Aug. 20.—With valuable information about the strength and operations of the Black Hand in Italy, Detectives Tony Vacheys and John R. Crowley, of the New York Police Department, who went abroad after the assassination of Lieut. Joseph Petrosinto, in Palmero, in March, to continue an investigation the latter had begun, arrived here yesterday on the steamer Regina de Italia.

The detectives made a long report to Commissioner Baker, who said that it might lead to the detection of the assassins of Lieut. Petrosino, and that as a result of their visit may be working agreement with Italy which will be of great benefit in connection with Italian criminals who may in future sail for this country.

Dragged From Train Steps.

St. Thomas, Aug. 20.—Austin Taylor, aged 21, of Inwood, died in the hospital yesterday morning as a result of injuries received by being dragged from an excursion train near Courtwright last night. He was on his way home from Detroit and was seated on the steps of the rear coach swinging his legs. His foot caught in the cattle-guard fence and he was thrown violently to the ground. He was missed at Brigdon, and on backing up the train he was found unconscious beside the track. Taylor was a clerk in a store at Inwood.

The medical section of the congress elected Dr. W. K. Harrison of Chicago, president; George G. O'Connell of Chicago, secretary, and Dr. Elizabeth M. Hooper, treasurer.

TIMELY TOPICS.

An epidemic of what acts like acute indigestion is making many people in this city feel pretty seedy these days. The complaint hits you in the stomach and then gradually spreads to the head and limbs, causing excruciating pains. By the time it is working at high pressure the victim begins to wish he were asleep with his fathers. The complaint feels a good deal like sea sickness, but is about 1000 times as bad. It yields speedily to medical treatment, however. What it is caused by no one knows, and the victim doesn't care. He knows he's got it—that's enough.

HOW THEY DO IT IN MONTREAL.

(Montreal Star.)

Mr. Walter E. Hassam, of the Hassam Paving Company, Worcester, Mass., swears that he sold paving to our Messrs. Belanger and Brunet for $1.85 a yard, which these gentlemen then sold to the city for $2.45 a yard. When he charged $1.60 a yard they charged the city $2.30. Joseph Chartier, paving contractor, swears that he laid pavement for Messrs. Belanger and Brunet at $1.85 a yard, for which these gentlemen collected $2.45 a yard from the city. He had himself tendered to the city; but, though he was the lowest tenderer, he did not get the job. It is said that there are people in the city, beside Messrs. Belanger and Brunet, who want to continue this method of civic administration. It would be interesting to know their reasons.

Tough Trio From Tweed on Trial

PLEADED GUILTY TO STEALING A BOAT AND A PIG — WILL BE SENTENCED NEXT WEEK.

About the end of last month, three tramps made things very lively in the vicinity of Tweed. It was stated that they imitated Tom, the piper's son, and stole a pig, also stealing a boat to carry the porker off in. In their playful way the pirates were shooting off a revolver, and one of them got it in the neck—the bullet, that is. Then the majesty of the law stepped in, the three bad men were arrested and brought to the County jail. This morning they were on trial. Three pleasant-looking young men they were, too, with rather a reckless look about their faces. Their names were given as Charles Howard, George Acomb and William Crashly. One of them is a decided brunette, a mulatto, in fact.

The lads pleaded guilty to stealing a boat and a pig, and Howard pleaded guilty to having a revolver in his possession illegally.

Magistrate Masson reserved sentence until a week from to-day, as he wanted to consider the case and find out something of the antecedents of the young fellows. Crown Attorney Anderson prosecuted.

Three Cents a Day.

WHAT IT COST ONE MILLIONAIRE TO LIVE.

Cleveland, August 17.—Three cents a day is what living costs Valentine Christ, millionaire, who owns more Cuyahoga county land than any other man. The 3 cents go for his three meals a day. Some days he eats meat. Then he spends 5 cents. His other expenses are nothing, as he lives rent free in a tiny house on Bond Court, N.E., which belongs to his sister. His clothes cost him little or nothing, because his sister patches the old ones and he gets along on those.

"People eat too much in summer," says Christ. "They make hogs of themselves. I don't see how they can have any comfort eating so much."

Christ is worth more than $1,000,000, but carries no money — never more than $5 at a time. He owns more real estate than any other man in Cuyahoga county. He has no one dependent upon him and has no protege upon whom to bestow his money when he dies. He is 69 years old and a recognized force in the Cleveland world of finance. Bank presidents have visited him in his little back yard.

"I don't see why you make such a fuss over every little bill I run up. Before we married, you told me you were well off."

"So I was. But I didn't know it!"

Gambling--Dominion Government Interfering.

“Book-making,” and other kinds of gambling during horse racing, had become so common and injurious to the wellbeing of society in Ontario, during the reign of the Ross Government, that public sentiment called loudly for its suppression, but not until the present Government came into power was there any successful attempt made to stamp out the evil.

The present Attorney-General, on assuming the duties of office, set his officials at work, with the result that the book-making gambling houses in Toronto were closed, and those who continued to practise their gambling profession were, and are still being, punished.

A charter had been granted by the Ontario Government, incorporating “The York Riding and Driving Club,” which did not live up to its obligations as defined in its charter.. This complaint was made by those who were active in their endeavors to suppress gambling, and the Ontario Government, upon investigation, finding the complaints borne out by evidence, cancelled the charter.

Upon this being done, the parties who had had their Ontario charter cancelled, applied to the Secretary of State of the Dominion Government for a Federal charter, incorporating them as the “Metropolitan Racing Association,” thus giving the guilty parties power to continue and carry on the work of “book-making” and other horse race gambling, which the cancellation of the Ontario license had deprived them of doing.

This interference with, and setting at naught, the anti-gambling policy of the Ontario Government created no little condemnation of the Dominion Government for this unwarrantable interference with what is considered the exclusive rights of a province to so govern it in the interests of morality and the good of the people.

The defence of Ministerial organs is that the Federal charter given to the Dufferin Race Track Company was issued by subordinate officials, and not by the Ottawa Government itself, and the Under-Secretary of State, Mr. Mulvey, in an interview, is reported to have stated that “the Federal “Government had no right to scrutinize the personnel of applicants for “letters patent.” Both of which excuses are not founded on fact, nor in accordance with the law.

No letters patent can be issued by a “subordinate.” All applications for a charter must be submitted for approval or rejection to the Secretary of State, who has the power to grant or refuse the charter, and it is his duty to investigate the personnel of the incorporators and the purposes for which the charter is sought.

This attempt to shield the Ministry by shunting the responsibility upon a “subordinate” is not only subterfuge, but an attempt to shield a Minister who did that at which the moral sentiment of the community revolts.

It is, however, but a repetition of attempts to shunt the responsibility of wrong-doing on the part of a Minister upon an underling.

When the Government was charged, during an election campaign in Oxford, with having appointed Jackson, who played so villainous a part in a contested election case in that county, to an important office, it was stated, by one of the Ministers that it was a Departmental act, of which the Government had no knowledge at the time, which statement was absolutely untrue, as was proven when a return was laid before Parliament, containing the Order-in-Council which had been passed making the appointment, based upon the recommendation of a Minister of the Crown. Poor “subordinates” are, whenever it is possible to do so, made the scapegoats upon which to father the wrongdoings of their superiors in office.

What course the Ontario Ministers will take in defence of their rights to govern the province in the interests of morality in the stamping out of the gambling curse to both old or young, is not known.

Nude Doukhobors With Women's Corpse on Cart

Following is another disgusting specimen of the class of immigrants that the present Government have used the people's money to bring into the country.

It may well be asked, if we spend money to bring them in, would it not be better to spend double the amount to send them out, or compel Clifford Sifton to go and live among them. The following despatch is illuminating:

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 16.—A letter has been received here from Fort Pelly, Sask., from C. P. B. Dundas, showing an amazing case of depravity among the Doukhobors of that district. The letter states that a farmer in the Swan River district, near Benito, while out driving, met a procession of nude Doukhobors, mostly women, dragging a cart on which was the corpse of an old woman. When they halted they took the corpse from the cart, carried it a few yards from the road, dropped it on the ground, and then coolly returned to their village.

Eventually the policeman and settlers interred the remains. Up to date no move has been made to punish the offenders.

ARCHBISHOP'S REFERENCE TO PARISH PRIEST AS SERVING POLITICAL PARTY.

Montreal, August 17.—The intimation by His Grace the Archbishop of St. Boniface, in an address to a large number of his clergy, that Rev. Father Berube, parish priest of Venda, Sask., had placed his pen at the disposition of the Liberal party, in order to deceive public opinion for a little more than 30 pieces of silver has naturally caused no little commotion in this French and Catholic Province of Quebec.

For months past Father Berube, who came from the Quebec district, has been sending letters to The Soleil and The Vigie of the ancient capital, showing that Catholics of the west are fairly well off in educational matters and especially advocating the three western provinces as a profitable field for French-Canadian emigration.

The policy has, however, incensed the majority of the western clergy and they sent an indignant protest to His Grace of St. Boniface against the claims of the parish priest of Venda.

Mgr. Langevin, in replying to this document, congratulates the clergy for their protest and says, “Be a thousand times blessed for behaving so earnestly for the good of the cause. You proved in fact, how faithful is the Catholic priesthood when it inspires thoughts of faith and true patriotism, instead of putting its pen at the service of a political party to deceive public opinion for the sake of a little more than 30 pieces of silver.”

Women Want Relief From Motor Cars.

“WOMEN OF ENGLAND” ASK THE QUEEN FOR PROTECTION.

London, Aug. 18.—A petition to the Queen against motor cars is being signed by “the women of England,” at the instance of the Road Union. The petition says:

“We women, of England, humbly beseech your majesty to help us to get some relief from the motor cars. We are sure your majesty cannot know how much we suffer from them. They have made our lives a misery.

“Our children are always in danger, our things are ruined by the dust, we cannot open our windows, our rest is spoiled by the noise all night.

“If they could be made to go slow through the villages, it would be a great thing; but we are only poor people, and the great majority of those who use motor cars take no account of us. We do not know what to do, so we appeal to your majesty to use your great influence on our behalf.”

This Happened in Dear Old Kingston.

Whig, Aug. 19.— A young couple occupied a bench out on the breakwater. Just as it commenced to get dark, the trio waxed very warm, in an argument over some matter, and the people living in the neighborhood say that there was a very lively time for a while. The girl accused the fellow of burning up some of her mother's letters, and this appeared to be the cause of all the trouble. The talk waxed hot at times, but the two appeared to be so interested in the debate that they did not realize that other people were near and could hear all. The row continued for fully an hour, when the two finally made it all up, and the scene ended with a hugging match.

THINKS FERRY IS BEDROOM, NOW IN COT AT BELLEVUE.

MAN WHO SAYS HE IS DR. FARWELL, OF ELMHURST, ACTS ODDLY IN PUBLIC.

Describing himself as Dr. George D. Farwell, of Elmhurst, L. I., a middle aged, well dressed and refined appearing man, was removed to Bellevue hospital from the ferry house at the foot of Barclay street, New York, where he caused consternation by his peculiar actions.

After placing his raincoat, his undercoat and an umbrella on a bench, he untied his shoes and removed them. Women nearby were shocked. Their outcries roused the ticket agent.

“Put your shoes and coat on,” the latter thundered. “Do you think this is a lodging house?”

“Sir,” said the doctor, “this is my bedroom. I resent your presence here. Get out.”

The ticket agent was unable to persuade the man that it was a ferry house instead of a bedroom, so he summoned another employee and had him call a policeman and an ambulance. Policeman Miles, of the Church street station, called Dr. Ames from the Hudson street hospital. He said he believed the man to be temporarily out of his mind.

When they tried to get him out of the ferry house they had a lot of trouble. He would not move until they showed him a pillow in the ambulance. Then he believed the ambulance was his bed and got into it. It took him to the psycopathic ward at Bellevue.

A Birthday Party.

Master Dawn Smith gave a birthday party to his little play mates yesterday afternoon. The afternoon was spent in songs and games, and at 4 o'clock, the bus came down and took the youngsters for a drive around the park and other parts of the city. About 50 in number they all enjoyed this very much and returned to their homes about 7 o'clock, wishing Dawn many more such happy birthdays.—Com.

Wrights Have Many Tricks Up Sleeve.

FLYING MACHINE MEN SAY THEY CAN PERFORM WONDERS IN THE WAY OF AERIAL NAVIGATION.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—Officers of the army and others in Washington who have watched the Wright aeroplane and who are interested in the work of the brother inventors of Dayton, are wondering just how much the two aviators can do with their machine. That they have not exhausted its possibilities is generally conceded, and there is reason to believe that the brothers have ideas for the development of the machine, of which they have said nothing, that will keep them in the front ranks of aeroplanists for years to come.

During the last few months the foreign aviators, as well as several Americans, have made great progress with various types of machines, but the Wrights do not consider that they have been at all eclipsed. In the recent tests at Fort Myer, the Wrights made no effort to do more than was required by the specifications in their contract with the Government. Time and again Orville might have remained in the air for much longer periods than he did.

One of the things which indicates that the Wrights are not telling just what they can do is the fact that Wilbur said that they could fulfil a contract requiring a machine to rise and land in the water and fly four hours at a rate of 40 miles an hour, with two passengers on board. This statement came from Wilbur Wright when he was questioned by a representative of the Navy Department. Such a performance would be far and away the greatest thing an aeroplane has ever done, yet Wilbur was confident that his machine could do it.

That the Wrights have several attachments for the machine which they have not yet found it necessary to use is certain. Among other things, according to the understanding here, is a device for automatically keeping the machine on an even keel.

It will probably be a week or ten days before the instruction of army officers in the art of flying the Wright machine is begun.

LETTERS OF CONDOLENCE.

Be Brief and Try to Express Your Sorrow Naturally.

To the majority of persons there is no more difficult social duty than that of writing letters of condolence, and many shrink from it. Yet those who are in sorrow so greatly appreciate messages from their friends that no effort to write such a note should be considered too irksome.

As a matter of fact, the writing of such letters should be no effort, for every word should be spontaneous, coming straight from the heart to comfort those afflicted. These letters differ in tone and in length according to the degree of intimacy one has with the person to whom one is writing. To formal acquaintances the correct form is to send one's visiting card, on which one writes at the top of the card "Deepest sympathy" or "Our deep sympathy for you and yours" when you wish to include their family and your own.

Letters of condolence should always be written on white note paper with black ink. Tinted paper for this purpose is incorrect, while colored inks for social usage are obsolete. When penning such a note write legibly, for the mind and the eyes of the reader will be under a great strain, and it is a kindness to avoid any possibility of taxing them.

Try to express sorrow naturally, just as you would talk, and do not endeavor to say much, for a few rightly chosen words will adequately carry the feeling. It is usually most comforting to the bereaved to hear the lost one praised, so always try to put in your letter some tribute. Recall kindnesses done by the one now dead or any personal thing you can think of, and when you are writing of some one with whom possibly you had not a personal acquaintance think of things you have heard others say and quote them with sincerity, for they will be a comfort and help toward the consolation to which you are seeking to contribute.

It is most thoughtful when writing to persons in affliction, after expressing one's sympathy, to offer one's services in any way that might be useful. There are often little things others can do for friends until the first shock passes and life resumes for them more normal conditions.

In writing always make it evident that you are more than ready to do these acts; but, having offered, do not press yourself upon them, for to do so would be tactless and intrusive. Some persons are sensitive to the invasion of their privacy, so it is well not to be overzealous in one's desire to help.

Mrs. Fiske's Work For Animals.

Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske finds time in all the activity of her stage duties to work for the cause of kindness to animals. Every year she sends a subscription to a humane society in Milan, Italy, and just now she is distributing pamphlets urging the better treatment of horses in lumber camps. She is sending these pamphlets throughout this country and Canada. She says horses in the camps are practically without protection and that the lumbermen need instruction in caring for them. The actress frequently distributes pamphlets on the humane treatment of animals to drivers of horses in the streets. She never fails to do this when she sees a man cruel to his horse, always carrying a few pamphlets.

Canadian National Exhibition

TORONTO

HORSES AT THE FAIR.

Everything Points to an Immense Exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Horse entries are coming in so fast at the office of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, that the success of that department promises to be more pronounced than ever before.

The prizes given for speeding in the ring aggregate $4,000, and that in itself is a guarantee that the fastest harness horses in Canada will again be found in the races on the afternoon of August 30th and 31st and Sept. 1st and 2nd.

In Clydesdales everything points to an entry that will exceed last year's show, when they were there in numbers and quality that cannot be equalled anywhere on the continent. Hackneys are growing better year by year and the show of them is excellent, while Toronto is a centre for hunters and jumpers of the very highest class; the competitions in this line excite almost world-wide interest.

In harness horses there is always a great exhibit, while the pony classes have been enlarged and extended in keeping with the growing popularity of the children's pets.

TREASURES IN ART.

Will be a Feature of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

Famous pictures from the leading art galleries of Europe will again be a feature of the Canadian National Exhibition. The permanent agent cables that he has secured many of the leading pictures of the year, and that the list is coming by mail. In addition to this there will be an exhibit of art photography by the leading art photographers of England, Germany, France and Italy, and a graphic art exhibit by the leading illustrators of New York, including such men as Frederick Remington, Maxfield Parish and Charles Dana Gibson.

GOODS WHILE YOU WAIT.

Process of manufacture an interesting feature of Canadian National Exhibition.

The process of manufacture department is always one of the most interesting features of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and this year it promises to be far more extensive than ever before. In all there will be about forty industries at work showing just how shoes, silk, cotton goods, prints, and many other of the articles you use every day are made. It is impossible here to name more than a few of the exhibitors, but here are some well worth looking up.

The United Shoe Manufacturing Co., Montreal, manufacturing ladies' and gents' boots and shoes, showing the different stages from the cutting out of the leather to the finished shoe.

Merchants Rubber Co., of Berlin, demonstrating the manufacture of rubber shoes, showing every process from the crude rubber to the finished boot.

Davis & Henderson, manufacturing and printing envelopes.

The Canadian Silk Co. weaving silk and badges with photos on them.

Gundy, Clapperton, cutting glass, showing the process in which the fine quality of cut glass is produced.

Shredded Wheat, showing process in which their products are prepared and made portable and palatable.

Dominion Textile Co., Montreal, showing process of manufacture of fine cotton goods, prints, etc.

SHEEP AND SWINE.

Sheep and swine come in for a large share of attention at the Canadian National Exhibition. The best in Yorkshires, Berkshires and Tamworths fill the pig pens at the big Fair, while in the sheep pens are, Shropshires, Cotswolds, Leicesters, Oxford Downs of the first quality. All the best that Canada and the United States can produce are found in this department. That the exhibit is a large one is shown by the fact that permanent pens have been built on the grounds for 700 sheep and 600 pigs. Then there is poultry and pet stock enough to fill a building 220 ft. by 60 ft.

The Department of Agriculture is putting on a display of wholesome and diseased meats at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, and will send two lecturers from Ottawa to tell the people how to discern the good from diseased meats. This should be of interest to cattle men, as well as meat producers.

EXPLODING SUBMARINE MINES.

Ships to be blown up on the Waterfront at Exhibition Grounds.

The submarine mine which plays such an important part in naval warfare will be part of the military display at the Canadian National Exhibition. These hidden guardians of every port in war time will be laid in front of the Exhibition grounds and every day at 5 o'clock a ship will be blown up by one of them. There is nothing more spectacular than what happens to a ship when it runs on to one of these hidden dangers of the deep.

EXHIBIT

of specially selected plants and seed taken from seed plots of members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, Toronto Industrial Exhibition, Aug. 30 to Sept. 13, and Canada Central Exhibition, Ottawa, Sept. 10 to 18 inclusive. With a view to giving greater publicity to the work which is being done in Canada by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association in the improving of cultivated plants, and in order that a medium may be provided through which the officers of the Association may come in touch with a greater number of those who are specially interested in the problem of crop improvement, arrangements have been made to place a special educational exhibit of selected plants and seed in the Agricultural building of each of the above mentioned Fairs. The exhibit will be in charge of the Secretary or some other officer qualified to discuss the general work of the Association. It is to be hoped that a large number will take advantage of this opportunity to learn more of this important movement.—L. H. NEWMAN, Sec. C.S.G.A.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITS.

All the provinces will be in line with exhibits in the Provinces building at Canadian National Exhibition this year. Each Provincial Government is at work on a display that will do justice to its territory, and the gold and fruit of British Columbia, the golden grain of the prairies from Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba, the various products and minerals of Ontario, right down to the best coal and farm products of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, will form one of the many features that makes the Fair truly National in character.

CORPS VS. CORPS.

Real Live Competitions in the Military Competitions at the Canadian National.

The Military Display and Tournament at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, will have more features of real interest this year than anything of the kind previously attempted in Canada. In such competitions as the Victoria Cross and wrestling on horseback, corps will be arrayed against corps, the Royal Canadian Dragoons stationed at Toronto, against the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery stationed at Kingston. The rivalry between these corps is very keen, so much so that the men are also anxious to mix things up a bit with a single stick in the Balaclava Melee, if the permission of the officers can be obtained. However, the officers have not yet decided. Some think a few hard knocks would not hurt the men, while others are inclined to think that the competition would resolve itself into something too much like actual warfare.

COMEDY IN FIREWORKS.

"The Battle of the North Sea" and "The Siege of Kandahar" are the features but by no means the whole of the fireworks display at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. In addition there are 62 distinct numbers on the fireworks programme and they include everything that can be imagined in pyrotechnics. And in these numbers comedy has its place. For instance a Punch and Judy show is one of the numbers. Another number pictures a boy fishing. A big policeman comes along and orders him away. Another boy seeing this brings on a giant firecracker, sets it behind the policeman and fires it off—result a big policeman kicking on the ground and boys disappearing around the corner.

IMMENSE BANKS OF FLOWERS.

The decorative floral display will again be a feature of the Floriculture department of the Canadian National Exhibition. These immense banks of flowers which cover 500 square feet of floor space make one of the beauty spots of the entire Fair. The premiums for this exhibit alone total $1,110.00, a sum that guarantees plenty of competitors.

DAIRY EDUCATION.

Proper Care of Milk to be Demonstrated at the Canadian National.

The educational features in connection with the Dairy department of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, promise, to be of unusual interest this year, not only to farmers, but to consumers of milk in cities and towns as well. The demonstration work and lectures in the Dairy amphitheatre will be under the immediate charge of Mr. Geo. A. Putnam, director of dairy instructions for the Province, and the Dominion Department will also furnish a man to give some definite instruction along the cow-testing line.

The proper care and handling of milk will be one of the subjects dealt with, and it will be accompanied by demonstrations of milk testing as well as charts showing the value of cow-testing associations.

The Model Military Camp at the Canadian National Exhibition will be fitted with hospital tents for men and women and all casualties on the Exhibition grounds will be handled by the Army Medical Corps which will form part of the permanent corps in the Model Militia Camp.

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

simulate a passion in the hope of inducing the reality to come and abide with them, as spiritualistic mediums detected in frauds explain their deception by declaring that they wish to set an example to the spirits by these pre-arranged manifestations. This was no experiment with Di Loria self-development had never been a cult with him. He was simply possessed by her. Waking and sleeping, coming and going, he lived only in a dream of her. It was not that he thought constantly of her; it was rather a passionate consciousness of her existence. When he was in her presence he moved about in a sort of exaltation, blest yet restless: when he was away from her he fell continually into those trances of retrospect and anticipation which every lover knows and comes to count among his choicest joys.

He thought he had seen a great deal of the world. "But I did not know it held anything like this," he said to himself.

He travelled widely in his time, but had never cared to remain long away from his own city, which he loved, individualizing it into a personality after the fashion of Italians, though the old palace down there in the crowded heart of it had remained closed, except for short intervals when his position compelled him to open it for the splendid and rather solemn festivites which Naples expected of his race, since the death of his beautiful mother.

Her brief life had opened in a villa on the hill looking towards Puzzuoli, where her parents had often sought refuge from their palazzo, as gloomy and vast as that of the Di Loria, and at their decease it had become her property. It was a very ancient place and after her marriage her husband had remodeled it almost entirely in the Pompeian style, calling it in the graceful Sicilian fashion by her name the Villa Giulia. It was an extremely beautiful house, dignified and noble within, the rooms of people who make their home in the open air, from prince to peasant, and perhaps all the more cheerless in its splendour because no mistress walked with the gentle pride of ownership through the light and lofty chambers.

It was approached by a long road that wound up the steep hill, revealing a new beauty at every turn, and ended at last before the grand entrance at the back, the front of the house extending down the cliff for two stories and offering from its marble loggia a wonderful view of the bay, the city, and the surrounding country. The stucco which covered the stone of which it was built was of a deep red color, the Pompeian red that has kept its hue in the buried city and shines out upon the walls, hidden for eighteen centuries and uncovered but yesterday, as clearly as though just laid on as the spade revealed them.

The sun was dazzling on the windows that faced the sea and the white pillars of the logia as the Winters and Mrs. Starr drove up the winding way at six o'clock one bright day in March; but the steps where their host stood waiting to welcome them and the garden at the back of the house were in deep gloom. Is there anything in the world more charming than these old gardens in Italy? So formal and so neglected, so stiff and stately with their winding ways and fantastic hedges, so wild and luxuriant with riotous vines and untended flowers. The white shape of carven goddesses gleam out from deep greenery; approach them, and see how tenderly they smile through the creeping veil of moss that time has cast about their beautiful bare limbs and over their bending heads. There are fallen marbles about their feet, broken and weather-stained. Perchance among them may be a little hand from yonder fair arm caressing the shattered helmet of that hero down the dim aisle to the right, whom fancy builds from the fine torso that is all that is left of him. There is always a fountain, though it sends no feathery spray aloft to wave in the bright air and then break and fall with a musical clatter upon the dark and shining surface of the water in the basin; only a thin silver ribbon winds its way slowly over the stone lilies; and the pretty wondering face of the nymph that once bent forward to catch its charming reflection now looks up through drifting weeds and the tiny waves ripple over where it has fallen. Perhaps there is an old sun dial too, set in a tangle of myrtle. Eheu, fugaces labuntur anni! How many have bent above it, scarce heeding that another hour of their little span has gone. Our shadow falls across it to-day; to-morrow that also will have vanished with the rest. But who heeds this, or, heeding, believes it, in Italy?

Di Loria looked out on such a garden as he came down the shallow steps to greet his guests. The deep red of the walls behind him made the best posible background for his slender figure and dark and radiant face. Not one of the marble gods that lurked in the emerald shade beyond, reanimated into the abundant physical life of the old Greek colony, could have expressed more simple joyousness than was given in his gesture and smile; but those who know love only as a function never looked out from such musing eyes, sad with the consciousness of good and evil, and soft with the sympathy that is the chief virtue of our time. A great dog was by his side, and the creature had a heavy pink rose with a long red stem thrust through his massive silver collar, and bore his grand head as if fearful of injuring the fragile blossom that affection had placed there.

"Leo remembers you, Mrs. Starr," said Di Loria, as the dog, after a mute survey of the party approached Rhoda and laid his black muzzle against her arm with a short deep bark of recognition and satisfaction.

"Ah, my friend Leo! And how is he? That gorgeous flower suits him, I think."

"He is adorned in your honor," said Di Loria, gravely.

"I may venture to tell him that I think he looks very well, then," said Rhoda, smiling. "I almost feel that a personal remark is an infringement of Leo's dignity."

"He is not at all an educated beast that dog," aid Di Loria. "He does not understand English, my poor Leo; but if you smile at him like that, Madame, he will know quite well how far you honor him. He has eyes, if not learning, and it will recompense him that he has to bear this flower. He has no knowledge of such vanities but he will endure it since I placed it there, and he will permit no one else to withdraw it."

The walls of the villa were frescoed without in gay figures, accurately copied from the Pompeian paintings preserved in the Musco Nazionale. They were graceful and light as the originals, and their lines of blue and black and the singularly clear and delicate yellow used in these pictures stood out in bold relief against the ruddy background. It was curious to

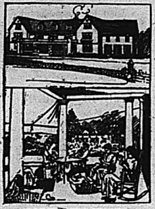
SCHOOL FOR MOTHERS.

An Institution Which Gives Needed Instruction to Young Wives.

A train out of the Grand Central station, New York city, for Hartsdale recently carried some interesting passengers. They were tenement house mothers, some of them scarcely more than girls, and each had a two-weeks-old baby in her arms. They were for the most part factory girls who had jumped from the workroom into marriage and knew little about taking care of babies. The faces of the babies were white and wan. Occasionally children of two, three or maybe four years tagged at the heels of the mothers.

Had you asked the women where they were going they would have said "To school," not to a school like those near their city homes to which the older children go, but to a school for tenement mothers which George H. F. Schrader has started up among the hills of Hartsdale, New York state. It is called Caroline Rest, in memory of Mr. Schrader's mother.

It is not only a sanitarium where young mothers can go to rest and recuperate; it is also a school where the ignorance that kills some 5,000 newborn babies each year in the New York tenements can be overcome by knowledge of a scientific sort. It was two years ago that a cottage was secured among the hills of Hartsdale for the establishment of Caroline Rest. Here some ten young mothers were domiciled and cared for. Amid healthful surroundings they grew well and strong again, and their babies thrived.



CAROLINE REST SANITARIUM.

Now the cottage has been replaced by a picturesque English structure which accommodates thirty mothers and their children. There is a wide veranda where the convalescing mothers may sit beside the big clothesbaskets in which, comfortable and happy, the babies rest. As you enter the house there is a reception hall in which on dull days, before a cheerful fire in the big fireplace, the mothers can sit. A sun parlor is another feature of the place, and there is a nursery for the older children.

It is the schooling which these mothers get that is to help them most. There is a well defined course followed by the pupils, a curriculum as carefully planned as that of a normal college.

On the day a mother arrives with her baby she is simply allowed to rest and adjust herself to her new surroundings. The next morning, if she is able, she gets her first lesson, which consists of how to wash the baby.

"You must remember," explained the nurse in charge, "that many of the mothers who come here are little more than girls themselves and have gone right from the factory into their own home and motherhood with no more preparation than a child. One young mother I have here now is only fourteen, and you can imagine how much she knows about bringing up her child.

"The first thing the mother is taught is the use of the bathtub and basin. It seems almost incredible that it should be necessary to teach this, but you know in many of the tenements the use of the tub is not considered necessary.

"After learning how to wash the bathtub and other utensils the mother is taught to bathe and dress the baby under supervision. She is instructed in the care of the icebox in which the milk is kept and sees how all the dishes used to prepare the baby's food must be sterilized. Preparing the barley mixtures and food comes next.

"It happens very frequently that a young mother cannot come to Caroline Rest unless she brings some of the younger children with her. So these, the runabouts, as they are called, are also looked over, and if any trouble exists it is used as an object lesson for the mother, so that she may avoid a repetition of it in the little new baby she brought with her.

"One of the features of Caroline Rest is that the time of the mother's stay is unlimited. She can remain two, three or six weeks, as the need may be, and some have remained three months."

Pitted Dates and Cheese Are Delicious.

Pitted dates masked with cream cheese which had been mixed with minced nuts were dressed with mayonnaise and served on lettuce leaves at a luncheon party recently. The dates are more tender if they are scalded with boiling water and allowed to soak for a few minutes before they are pitted. Dates for any purpose whatever are better treated in this way.

ATHLETICS.

How Alfie Shrubb Got His Start.

Many are the stories which have been written of how famous runners have from practical poverty been suddenly plunged into the depths of wealth. Of Dorando Pietri it has been told how the pastry cook ran for miles to neighbouring villages in his native Italy, to deliver an order, and only then conceived the idea that he could travel at a rapid pace. Of St. Yves that he was once earning tips in a London cafe and later as a chauffeur in Paris, when he put on the spiked shoes to beat them at the Marathon distance; and of the others similar tales could be told.

The runners who have been before the public the present year have for the most part put on the shoes at some spasmodic time only to find that there was a livelihood in the game—and a big one at that.

Of them all, however, the story of Alfred Shrubb's sudden rise to fame is the most remarkable and has the others faded in a thousand ways. Here it is:

When Alfred Shrubb was "discovered," he was a bricklayer's laborer, employed to carry bricks for the building of Christ's hospital, near Horsham, Sussex, Eng.

A fire occurred a few miles out in the country one night, and a number of young men of the Horsham Harriers, ran to the scene of the conflagration. The field gradually spread out, and one of the Harriers found a stranger keeping him company. "I must shake this chap off," the Harrier said to himself, and quickened his pace. The stranger kept jogging along beside him, however, and some distance before the scene of the fire was reached the Harrier pulled up. The stranger coolly asked him what was the matter, but the Harrier was breathless and speechless. When he was sufficiently recovered to speak, the runner gasped, "Who are you? I am supposed to be the best runner in this district, but you can lick me." "Oh, I can't run," was the reply; "my name's Alf. Shrubb."

Shrubb then trotted on to the fire, which he reached several minutes ahead of the other runners. Shrubb did not think much about the incident, and went on carrying the bricklayer's hod and mortar.

But the harrier soon looked him up and induced him to take up running. He immediately took a foremost place in the ranks of English amateur runners, and within a year was amateur champion at four miles. In the next three or four seasons he made a clean sweep of the British championships and records from two to fifteen miles. On one occasion he won the amateur championship at one mile, but his best time for that distance was 4.19, compared with the professional record of 4.12 3-4, and the amateur record of 4.15 3-4. A mile, however, was always below his best distance, just as the Marathon course is above it.

Shrubb's peculiar methods in middle distance races were always disturbing and provoking to his opponents. He would start a four-mile race at the speed of a quarter-miler, and when he had established a lead of 30 to 40 yards would slow down and then sprint again. This process he used to repeat all through the race, and finish up with another quarter-mile sprint in the last lap.

After he took up running, Shrubb's admirers set him up in a cigar store at Horsham, which was supposed to supply him with the funds for his training and travelling expenses.

The rules of the English A. A. A. do not allow sport promoters to pay travelling expenses or appearance money, and every now and again a number of amateur cracks get suspended and professionalized for receiving expense money. Shrubb, after making a trip to Australia and New Zealand, with the consent of the A. A. A., was found to be getting financial assistance of which the association could not approve, and was forced into the professional ranks.

SPORTING NOTES.

Toronto has sold its star catcher, Fred Mitchell, to the New York Americans, getting $4,000 and two players in exchange. He will remain with Toronto during the present season.

Torontos and Tecumsehs will cross sticks to-morrow, and seats are going like hot cakes. It promises to be one of the greatest assault and battery events on record.

A FEW HELPS FOR BUSY WIVES.

Butter brushed over the nose of a pitcher will prevent milk or cream dripping on the tablecloth.

When burned with hot grease, apply flour (not water) to the wound and it will not leave a scar.

Ammonia should not be used near a fire, nor should the bottle be left uncorked, as it is inflammable.

Apply the white of an egg with a camel's hair brush to fly specks on gilt frames and they will disappear.

In using hair tonic the hair should be divided into strands and the tonic applied to every part of the scalp.

Soutache braid makes good laces for the baby's bootees, and it is also useful for lacing corsets and the chemise.

If a shirtwaist has to be raised at the shoulders lay a small tuck in the pattern across back and front at centre armhole.

When paring fruit, grease the first finger and thumb before paring fruit or vegetables, and there will be no stain on them.

Our Toy Soldiers--For War or Peace?

TORONTO GLOBE GETTING READY TO DO THE DUNDONALD ACT ON GEN. FRENCH.

(Hamilton Herald.)

By all means let it be understood that General Sir John French, when he comes to Canada for the purpose of reorganizing the Canadian militia, must not be allowed to lord it over the Militia Department and dictate terms to Sir Fred. Borden. By all means let our precious Autonomy be insisted upon, even in shrill and strident tones if need be. But it is to be hoped that some better reasons can be found for keeping General Sir John strictly in his place than the reasons advanced by the Toronto Globe. "The ideals of the Canadian militia," says that journal, "are civilian, not military. Its purposes are peace, not war. Its chief executive is a Minister of the Crown, not an official of the army. Its supreme control is vested in the civil Government, not in the military council. Its organization, development and maintenance, all its equipment, and all its regulations, are for the service of the people, for the defence of the people's rights, and the safeguarding of the people's freedom, not at all for anything of glory or reward for the militia itself."

And it follows, therefore, that in the reorganization of the Canadian militia the sacred principles of Canadian Autonomy must be strictly respected.

"In the name of the Prophet—figs!"

Is it true that the ideals of the Canadian militia are civilian and not military, that its purposes are peace and not war? Is not such a claim nonsensical? To say that the ideals of a military organization are not military, and that it does not exist for purposes of war is surely no compliment to that organization. If its ideals are unmilitary, it had better be disbanded. But everybody knows that its ideals are military, and that it exists for purposes of war. Why do the militiamen carry rifles and practise shooting with them? Why do they drill? Is it merely for amusement or exercise—or is it done in order that they may be prepared for battle if war should come? And their ideals as militiamen, are they not ideals of military efficiency? Citizens they are as well as militiamen; but while their ideals as citizens are civilian, their ideals as militiamen are military.

But the fun of it is that the supposedly distinctive features of the Canadian militia mentioned by the Globe to distinguish it from the regular army of Britain are just as true of the British army as of our militia. The chief executive of the British army is a Minister of the Crown; its supreme control is vested in the civil government; its organization, development and maintenance, etc., are for the service of the people, for the defence of the people's rights and the safeguarding of the people's freedom.

The fact is that the Globe's sonorous sentences about our peaceful and civilian militia mean nothing in particular and were written merely as a warning to General French that he had better not try to come Dundonald over the Canadian military authorities. If the warning is needed, the effect of it ought not to have been weakened by a lot of Miss Nancy sentiment, which is sure to make Sir John smile if ever that veteran soldier reads it.

HUMANIZATION CURE.

DOLL MEDICINE PRESCRIBED FOR A CHILD WHO HAD NEVER HAD ANY TOYS.

Gertrude B. came from a county poorhouse and was passed over to the Children's Aid Society in Philadelphia. The society put her in a boarding-house, with several other children. In both of these places she had shown herself a menace to the other children, biting and slugging them on the smallest provocation.

When Dr. Witmer first saw her, as he passed through the laboratory where she was waiting, he thought her a mental and moral degenerate, but on examining her found to his surprise that her mind was a good one. Suspecting that her moral nature might be different from the character she had been given, he got out some toys and a doll. The little girl went almost wild with joy—she had never had toys in her life. She showed the normal human instincts here, at any rate.

Now, the physician whom the Children's Aid had called in gave it as his expert opinion that Gertrude was a mental and moral defective, dangerous to keep with other children. Dr. Witmer's diagnosis was: "Imaginative, active, self-reliant, purposeful—a valiant little soul, fighting like a rat in a corner against the conditions of poorhouse life." So, in spite of the physician, Dr. Witmer admitted her to the hospital school and put her on the humanization cure, her first medicine being a doll of her own. In two weeks the cure had worked such results that she was entered in the public school.

It is said of some society ladies that they sleep in more clothing than they wear at fashionable dances.

Farmers Smiling; Crops Look Good.

FESTIVE AGRICULTURISTS FEEL MUCH MORE JOYFUL NOW THAN THEY DID TWO WEEKS AGO.

"I tell you," said a farmer whose domicile is not far from this city, "we are feeling a lot more joyful over the crops than we did two weeks ago." And by the way they talk these days, the farmers are all pretty well satisfied with the outlook. The hay crop is fair, they say, and barley, oats and other grain good. Corn threatens to beat the record in many places, while stone fruit will be very plentiful. Of course, as a gentleman on the market pointed out, every farmer is a born pessimist. Everybody else's crops are always better than his. But, as a matter of fact, they all seem fairly cheerful this year.

Gets a Big Liner For Bermuda Trips.

With the announcement just made to-day that the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company would begin a New York to Bermuda service next winter comes the news that the New York and Bermuda Steamship Company, which ran the Prince George to the island resort last season, would put on a larger and faster steamship this year. It is predicted that next winter there will be the largest rush to Bermuda in the history of the islands.

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company will place in the service the Orotava, a 6,000 ton steamship, which was fitted up recently at the yards of Harland & Wolff, Belfast, Ireland. This steamship has been in the company's Australian service for several years, and will accommodate 300 first cabin passengers, the only class that will be carried.

A Trenton Wedding.

The marriage took place at Trenton on Monday, August 16th, in the Church of St. Peter-in-Chains, by Rev. J. J. Connolly, of Mr. Fred. McFadden, of Peterborough, to Miss Anna L. Filion, of Trenton.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Lulu Filion and Mr. L. Le Clair, of Brockville, ably assisted the groom. The bride was attired in a cream Empire gown with rose point lace, and large black hat. The traveling gown was of taupe shade trimmed with copper. The happy couple left on a trip to Montreal and Quebec City. On their return they will take up residence in Peterborough.

Out of town guests present were Mr. J. McFadden, Calgary, Miss McFadden, Peterborough, and Mr. Joe Irwin, Chicago.

Filled Every Position.

Edwin E. Horsey, general manager of the Lake Ontario and Bay of Quinte Navigation Company, has been connected with that steamboat company for the past sixteen years, and has filled every position in its gift, having risen from clerk and purser to general manager. Mr. Horsey became purser of the old steamer Hero, in 1893, and continued as such until that popular steamboat was burned, in 1901. During the seasons of no navigation in those eight years, he was clerk in the company's office. In 1901, he was appointed assistant general passenger and freight agent, and in 1902 succeeded to the position of general passenger and freight agent. In 1904, he became traffic manager, and retained that position until 1906, when he was appointed general manager on the decease of Charles F. Gildersleeve, the organizer and head of the company. Mr. Horsey is a popular steamboat official and has enlarged the company's business materially.

GETTING YOUR CHILDREN READY FOR SCHOOL—DO NOT OVERLOOK THEIR EYES.

Perfect and easy vision is necessary to stand the strain imposed upon them by their many school duties. Eye Strain uses up an excessive amount of nervous energy and causes the child to become tired and disinterested in its work. Properly Fitted Glasses have released many children from the bondage of eye-strain and made them happy and energetic scholars. Do not ignore frequent complaints of headache, tired or aching eyes, but let us make a careful and scientific examination, and if necessary supply the Proper Glasses. There is no truth in the frequent statement, "I do not like putting glasses on children, because they may always have to wear them." The reverse is the truth, by putting the Correct Glasses on the child during the growing time in many cases they outgrow the error entirely and are able later to go without glasses, whereas if neglected too long they will always have to wear them without getting as satisfactory results even by wearing the glasses. Charges moderate. Consultation free.

Mr. Northrup Made a Hit in Halifax.

HAS A CLEAR-CUT, GRACEFUL AND FORCIBLE STYLE, SAYS THE HALIFAX HERALD.

Halifax Herald, Aug. 18: Halifax had an opportunity last night of hearing one of the best speakers in the House of Commons and the north end was particularly favored, for it was in the A. B. C. hall that W. B. Northrup, M.P., made his address.

Mr. Northrup proved himself equal to all that had been expected of him. He has a clear-cut, graceful and forcible style. There is no ambiguity about his language, and he drives home his points by apt and powerful illustration.

Halifax was fortunate in the opportunity to hear Mr. Northrup. With his wife he was on his way to Sydney on a visit, half holiday and half business. Mr. Crosby prevailed on him to stay over a day in Halifax and speak. He will leave for Truro this afternoon and to-morrow proceeds by the morning express to Cape Breton. Yesterday he was the guest of Senator Mackeen at the North-West Arm. In the afternoon he was over to Dartmouth to see the maritime tennis championships.

Wedding Party Had Their Woes.

Kingston, August 18. — Never go to a wedding in a motor boat, especially if you are one of the contracting parties. Early this morning a launch left Garden Island containing the bride-to-be, her father and bridesmaid, the future groom and his best man. They were going to Wolfe Island to be married. Everything went merrily until about half the distance was covered, the engine balked and the parade halted, and halted indefinitely. All that the engineer did could not remedy the damage, and the bridal party were adrift in the waters.

Finally the steamer Wolfe Islander hove in sight and threw out a line. This was soon made fast and once again the party were on their way. Just when everything was going nicely, the heaving line broke and once again the important ceremony was delayed, and to make things worse, it commenced to rain, right down on the fine new dresses and hats.

Once again the big steamer rounded to and this time threw out a large rope, used for making the boat fast. This was attached and the party started off again to the strains of the wedding march whistled by a young man on the hurricane deck of the ferry boat.

Cleared $1300.

The gross receipts at St. Michael's picnic, we are told, were about $1700. Of this $400 went for expenses, which were very heavy. A net profit of $1300 is thus left. Everybody is pleased, particularly Father Spratt, who is delighted with his first picnic experience in Belleville.

Dog Couldn't Swim.

THE SCHOOL BOOK TRADITIONS WERE REVERSED IN THIS CASE.

Mr. Fred Schultz, better known as "Dutchie," deserves the attention of the Royal Humane Society, having, through his courage and presence of mind, averted what might have been a very deplorable accident last night in the harbor. A very valuable dog was accidentally knocked into the water and Mr. Schultz promptly threw off his coat and rescued the animal. Such heroism is very rarely shown and should be properly rewarded.—Com.

That Diamond Ring Has Been Returned To Rightful Owner.

AFTER MORE THAN TWO MONTHS, SUDBURY JEWELLER GETS BACK SPARKLER WHICH WAS STOLEN FROM HIM.

It will be remembered that, about two months and a half ago, a hack driver in this city, at the station, bought a ring for a quarter, from a man who, it was said, had just got off a train. The ring changed hands several times, and was eventually found to be of considerable value—$125 as a matter of fact. The story of a man getting a $125 diamond ring for 25 cents got into the papers, and then it came out that a Sudbury jeweller had been robbed of the ring on June 3rd. He wrote to the authorities here, and, after a good deal of red tape, has at last been handed over his property. County Attorney Anderson, of course, wanted to guard against any mistakes, and he now expresses himself as perfectly satisfied the ring belonged to Jeweller Orr, of Sudbury, who has taken a statutory declaration identifying it.

Was Local Option Beer Over Strength?

JOHN RYAN, OF FRANKFORD, IS CHARGED WITH DISPENSING TEMPERANCE FLUID WHICH MADE A MAN WALK TANGLE-LEGGED.

John Ryan, of Frankford, ran up against the license authorities recently, and his case was up in the local police court. Frankford, as our readers know, is now a local option village. It was charged by the Crown that Mr. Ryan had been dispensing a temperance fluid, known as local option beer, which was alleged to be intoxicating. At all events, the Crown, it is said, has a witness who, after imbibing something less than a barrel of it, was in the condition known to the hoi polloi as "corned." He is the main guy of the prosecution.

The Crown, in the persons of Provincial License Inspector Ayearst and local License Inspector Walker, was represented by County Attorney Anderson. Mr. Morden appeared for Mr. Ryan. At Mr. Morden's request the case was enlarged.

REMOVE SOURCES OF EVIL.

Dr. Phelan, of Kingston, Addresses Prison Experts.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 20.—The Congress of American Prisons elected officers, including:

President, Amos W. Butler, Indianapolis, and Vice-President Lieut.-Col. A. G. Irwin, Stony Mountain, Man.

The National Prison Physicians Association elected officers as follows: President, Theodore Cook, jr., Baltimore; Vice-Presidents, John Gerin, Auburn, N.Y.; Walter M. Thayer, Clinton, N.Y.; Secretary, Daniel Phelan, Kingston, Ont.

The Indiana plan of operating upon imbeciles and confirmed criminals was heartily indorsed by Dr. Daniel Phelan of Kingston, Ont., in his annual address as President of the Prison Physicians Association before the American Prison Association here today. Dr. Phelan said:

"Not only do I suggest the adoption of energetic means to lessen the number of the already existing criminals and degenerates, but also the removal as much as possible of the more remote sources of the evil. Immoral literature, places, exhibitions and pictures inevitably have an evil effect upon the young mind, and especially upon naturally weak ones."

As to Art Stencilling.

So easy the merest youngster can do it, yet not too simple to interest grown-ups—that is what it is. Simply lay the designs on the material, put on the colors, and there you are.

And the best part of it all is that the designs are really artistic—pretty, even in their crudeness. In fact, their very simplicity is the chief charm.

Use unbleached muslin, burlap, crash, whatever you choose. And you may make scarfs for tables, bureaus or chiffoniers, hangings of all sorts for summer homes, pillow covers or any number of pretty little articles.

SCHOONER GOES DOWN

Eleven Men Are Drowned Off Halifax Harbor.

Gloucester Fishing Vessel Oronoco Sinks in Fair Weather and Only the Five Men on Deck at the Time Manage to Escape—Dories Went Down With the Ship.

Halifax, Aug. 20.—Eleven men were carried down in the wreck of the Gloucester schooner Oronoco, which capsized twenty-five miles off Sambri, near Halifax, yesterday morning.

The names of the lost are: William Meuse, Tusket; William Vanemburg, Argyle; Stephen Delong, Tusket; Howard Whitehouse, Argyle; Willoughby Vanemburg, Argyle; William Hatfield, Argyle; Charles Shaw, Argyle; John Meuse, Eel Brook; Peter Walsh, and John Walsh, Placentia, Newfoundland.

The Oronoco was six years old, and was built at Essex, Mass. She was a fast sailer and a good sea-boat. She left Gloucester, Mass., on Aug. 3rd, and called at Argyle, N.S., where two men were shipped. On Wednesday morning at 5 o'clock the wind was southeast, blowing a fair breeze. When the 6 o'clock watch was called, and when Stillman Hubbard, James Shaw, James Vanemburg and Ernest Stanley went on deck, Captain Larkin was at the wheel. The first watch was still on deck, and had not gone below. The jib-sheet was off too far, and the captain brought the vessel up into the wind, and she was hauled to windward and caught in the anchor stock. She paid off and commenced going down, turning on her beam ends. When half full of water the Oronoco went down very rapidly, and in three minutes no part of her was to be seen.

Five dories went down with her, and all the survivors, five in number, got into two dories. Both dories rowed to windward to try and pick up some of the other men who were below at the time of the disaster, but saw nobody. They picked up three pairs of oars for each dory, and seats and buckets, and everything was made ready to head for land, which they reached late last night.

They landed this morning, one at Chester Iron Bound, and the other at Little Tancook, reaching Lunenburg at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

The captain is overwhelmed by the loss of the ship and so many of his crew, who went down without a chance for their lives. The accident is one of the most peculiar in the history of marine disasters.

Short Circuit Kills Ten.

Lecco, Italy, Aug. 20.—Through the breaking of a highly charged electric light wire at Olgirate which created a short circuit and set on fire the insulation in all houses supplied with the current, ten persons were killed and twenty seriously injured by ignoring the danger and attempting to extinguish the fires or cut off at the current with switches.

Passengers Landed In Small Boats.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 20.—The SS. Margaret, from Halifax for Sheet Harbor and Cape Breton, struck on Thrum Cape Shoal, outside the harbor, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning in a heavy fog. Passengers, 35 in number, were landed on McNab's Island in boats and came up to the city on military transports. The steamer Margaret is owned here.

Bye-Election Long Delayed.

Ottawa, Aug. 20.—There is no truth in the report that there will be a federal bye-election in Ottawa during the month of October. Sir Wilfrid Laurier sits for one of the Ottawa seats and Quebec East, but as he cannot elect to sit for Quebec East until after the House meets, there will be no election before December or January. A member of House sitting for two seats can resign for both at any time, but cannot elect to sit for one except when the House is in session.

Turkey and Germany Fraternize.

Constantinople, Aug. 20.—Schefket Pasha, commander of the first and second and third army corps, has accepted an invitation of Emperor William to assist in the aproaching German army manoeuvres.

A BEAUTY HINT.

How to Improve the Sallow Skin Without Medication.

The lucky possessor of a peach and cream complexion need not bother her head about what she wears or what she eats, but the girl of orange hue must consider both dress and diet if she would not resemble an exhumed mummy or a lump of saffron.

The sallow girl should look to her liver rather than to powder for lightening her complexion. A half lemon in a glass of water morning and evening and several quarts of plain water between will paint the cheeks better than the rouge pot.

Coffee must be cut off the sallow girl's list; so also should strong tea and too much chocolate. Rich foods, too many sweets and, above all, hot breads should be shunned.

Fruit in season and out is the boon of the yellow hued. Stint on everything else before you cut down your allowance of oranges and apples from the daily menu. The only possible exception in the fruit line is seedy berries, which are often too acid and clog the intestines. Quite as important as diet is becoming dress. Some girls with a skin like a clay bank persist in wearing ecrus, purples and greens.

Reds can generally be worn by the sallow girl, most shades of blue and, above all, a soft rose pink. The fancy for brown which is prevalent with sallow women, while a better choice than ecru, does not give enough contrast unless high lights are there in whites.

White never fails to be becoming, as it seems to clear up the muddiest skin. It must be pure white, however, without a tinge of cream.

The woman with olive complexion will find the narrow line of black velvet ribbon that is now worn with evening gowns a positive boon. The black well up against the face—the band should be worn high on the throat—tends to whiten and clear her skin and makes possible a frock of a bad color. Gold beads should be charily worn by the sallow girl. Certain tones of gold are hideously unbecoming, though the pale lemon tint is not out of the question.

One cannot lay down hard and fast rules as to color. To say blue is becoming does not mean Alice or porcelain tints, nor does the same shade of blue look well on every sallow person.

There is but one way to definitely know what can be worn. Test it in every light. Do not trust to your own judgment, but have with you an unbiased friend who is honest enough to say what she thinks.

Let no clever person tempt you by flattery into thinking you can wear with impunity colors that would try a milk and roses skin.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

When doing fine hand work keep a saucer of cornstarch near by, occasionally dip the fingers into it and wipe them with a soft towel.

A great amount of crossbar goods are used in women's underwear. Being so durable, it is highly recommended. There are medium heavy kinds and one variety more dressy because of the sheer material. This is, strange to say, generally embroidered, although nightgowns are usually lace trimmed.

When sewing many women place a needle in the machine and use that one needle for all kinds of work with all kinds of thread, from No. 50 machine thread to the very finest. This makes an ugly stitch, often a thread loop from time to time. Always use a fine needle with thread used to tuck fine lingerie. The stitch is smoother, and the goods do not have the large holes made by an extra large needle.

Charming little bootees of white kid are made for the baby and embroidered with the featherstitch in pink or blue silk. The patterns for the diminutive boots are the same as that used for the knitted slippers of older people. First the tiny sole is cut, then the upper. The one is sewed to the other, the seam is fastened at the heel, and the top is bound in ribbon. The feather or brier stitching is then put all around the seams and just below the ribbon binding, and baby's shoes are finished.

An excellent way of making children's bib aprons is by using the regular yoke patterns, cutting the back deep enough so that a narrow piece of the goods comes under the arm. Instead of the same depth yoke in front, cut the material as long as the child's dress, rounding the goods at the side if you prefer. Join the back yoke to the front piece, cut the sleeves and sew in. Face the yoke, neck and sides with bias strips of the material. Two buttons will be sufficient for the back. When finished you will have a bib that not only entirely covers the front of the child's dress, but also protects the sleeves.

Prizes at a Bridge Party.

How quaint are the Saxony china baskets or pots with remarkable rims of French gilt from which festoons of roses hang in contrast to the pure white of the china! These were the prizes at a recent bridge party, and in each bloomed a sturdy little plant of pink bachelor's buttons, as pretty a flower as one could wish to see in its springlike suggestiveness.

Where "Uncle Tom" Was Written.

The old Kennedy homestead at Covington in which Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote the first chapters of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is to be torn down.

The house was built in 1787, with loopholes and lookouts. The heavy oak doors and window shutters still bear heavy indentations made by tomahawks, and dozens of arrowheads are still imbedded in hewn log sides.

WOMEN CLIMB ON ROOF

Suffragettes Baulked in Daring Plan in Glasgow.

Militant Suffragists Cause Several Disturbances Throughout Britain —Several on Top of Adjacent Building Hurl Bricks Through Window of Hall When Haldane Is Speaking in Liverpool.

London, Aug. 21.—There were suffragette disturbances at several political meetings in the British Isles last night.

The women made determined efforts to invade St. Andrew's Hall, Glasgow, and a crowd of their sympathizers came into violent conflict with the police, which resulted in riotious scenes.

Secretary for War Haldane, while addressing a meeting at Liverpool this evening was greatly disturbed by a number of suffragettes, who took up a postion on the roof of an adjacent building and showered bricks through windows of the hall in which the meeting was being held. Seven of the women were arrested.

At Glasgow, three rain-soaked and benumbed but still valiant suffragettes were this afternoon dislodged from the roof of St. Andrew's Hall, where the Earl of Crewe, secretary of state for the colonies, is booked to speak to-night.

Strict orders had been issued to exclude all women from the meeting, so the suffragettes decided to break into the building through the trap door on the roof.

In the middle of the night the three women secured a ladder and climbed to the roof, where they hid behind a chimney waiting to put their plan into operation.

When they were discovered they were nearly perishing from wet and cold, but they declined to come down. Much difficulty was experienced in removing them from their perilous position.

Injunctions Refused.

Welland, Ont., Aug. 21.—M. German, K.C., M.P., to-day made application to restrain the F. H. McGuigan Construction Co. and De Muralt & Co., sub-contractors, from entering upon the property of Louise Felker and erecting their towers and poles or doing other work thereon in connection with the hydro-power transmission line.

On behalf of the township council of Gainsboro, application was also made for an injunction to restrain the contractors from erecting the hydro-electric transmission line on the highways of the township.

Both applications were refused, his honor taking the ground that the case had no features of emergency.

Consumption in Mail Matter.

London, Aug. 21.—(C.A.P.)—Giving evidence before the postal commission at Sydney, New South Wales, Vice-President Phillips of the Letter Sorters' Association, stated that during the last twenty years eighty per cent. of the deaths among letter sorters had been due to tuberculosis. The men had contracted the disease after they entered the service. Mail matter coming from every part of the world necessarily included a vast amount of infected material. Consumptives licked the stamps on the envelopes, and a letter might come into the sorting room with enough germs to poison the whole staff.

There are 752 kinds of flowers found in the arctic regions.

Marengo.

At the battle of Marengo the French army was virtually defeated, and while Bonaparte and his staff were considering their next move Dessaix suggested that there was yet time to retrieve the disaster. Napoleon rallied his men, renewed the battle and won a great victory over the Austrians, though the unfortunate Dessaix lost his own life on that field.

A Wise Precaution.

A wise teacher has taught her pupils to make paper cornucopias for drinking cups instead of using those found in public places. Folding paper drinking cups come in packages at very small prices and are a possibility not only for traveling, but for the shopper, who often goes thirsty through the morning or afternoon rather than drink from the cups at the fountains.

A Townsite Is Located.

Private Persons Lay out City Seven Miles From Cochrane.

Piece of Property at Place Where Transcontinental Crosses the Frederick House River is Cleared and Streets Run through—Government Takes Best Lots For Itself—Offical Does Not Foresee Big Place.

Cochrane, Aug. 20.—At the point where the transcontinental railway crosses the Frederick River, about seven miles from here, a new townsite has been surveyed and will be placed upon the market immediatly.

Th location of the townsite is chiefly due to the enterprise and energy of private individuals, as the Government had not intended to have a town at this point. The Government retained one-third of the future townsite, and in addition certain blocks of the surveyed townsite for special purposes. There is a series of streets running north and south, numbered First to Eleventh, and the two on the river front are named River street East and West. Across the town run North street, George street, Frederick street, Centre avenue, King street, Queen street and South street.

The Government has reserved two out of every six of the 1,800 lots. The Government also reserves a block of 36 lots in the choicest part of the town, near the station, for public buildings, schools, churches, hospitals, etc. At the only available place along the river frontage where it is possible to land logs for milling purposes, or that might be suitable for a mill-site, 48 lots have been reserved. For the purpose of developing a small water-power on the river, 27 lots have been reserved. There is also a reservation of 66 feet along either bank of the river. The Government also reserves the bed of the river, the islands in the river and all the water-power privileges.

The Transcontinental right of way is doubled to 200 feet where it passes through the centre of the townsite, the total area of which is 261 acres. The lots as a rule measure 33 x 120 feet, but some ranges are 125 feet deep.

The Government lots are scattered over the townsite, eight or ten in a block, and a great many of the best corners are taken. One of the Government officials said that the Government had certainly got the choicest lots.

"While the site is a nice one for a town," remarked one of the Government officials, "there is no chance of it becoming a lumber centre. The railway bridge and tracks are 75 feet above the bed of the stream, with high banks on either side.

"There is good farming country all around, but no mines or minerals in that vicinity. A town may build up from the argicultural interests around. It is all level ground and high above the river, the banks of which are steep."

"On the Metagami River, 25 miles west of the Frederick House Crossing, there is another good point for lumbering interests.

Held Up For Tax.

Sarnia, Aug. 21.—Several of the harvesters bound for the Canadian Northwest, who took the route via Chicago, had an unpleasant experience at Port Huron, where the United States demanded the four dollar head tax apiece. Some of the men were refused passage through the United States altogether, and were turned back by the immigration inspectors. A few returned home, but others went on west through Canadian territory.

New Steamer Under U. S. Register.

Montreal, Aug. 21.—The Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Co. will have its new boat now being built at Detroit registered under the United States flag.

Such is the decision which has been come to in regard to the reorganization of the company's service, and this is done to extend the service and to escape the vexatious delays over the coasting laws.

Babe Swallowed Carbolic.

Sarnia, Aug. 21.—The two-year-old son of Harold Ellenor, Bunyan P.O., Sarnia Township, got hold of a bottle of carbolic acid that had been uncorked for use in dressing another child's injured finger, swallowed the contents, and died while being driven to town. Mr. and Mrs. Ellenor are ill in the hospital here with typhoid fever.

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 21.—Oscar McLellan, 16 years of age, employed by the Rock Co., manufacturers of explosives, had returned from work with a particle of explosive on his clothing. The Canadian Associated Press understands that General French will make only a short stay in Canada. He will visit the chief places of interest, if time permits.

The Dominion police have been notified of the arrest by the mounted police at Regina of Ole P. Holtane, aged 50, a fugitive from Norwegian justice. He is wanted in Norway for forgery.

Rev. Carl S. Jones, associate pastor of the Northwood Ward avenue Congregational Church, Detroit, disappeared after preaching a sermon at his church on Aug. 1. His relatives think that hard work may have unsettled his mind.

W. G. Clement of Gibraltar, Ont., was seriously, if not fatally, injured on W. H. Babington's ranch, near Medicine Hat, Alta., where he was employed. Clement was sent out for horses, and thrown from an animal which he was riding.

Heart Is Dislocated.

Toronto, Aug. 21.—Suffering from a dislocated heart, Frank Thomas, 23 Hillsboro avenue, is in St. Michael's Hospital. The complaint is, as a rule fatal, but the doctors say Thomas will recover. It will be the first one on record that did not cause death.

Two weeks ago Thomas entered the hospital, complaining of a severe pain in his chest. Dr. Norman Allan attended him and found his heart had moved over to the right side.

About two months before Thomas contracted a cold, and his left pleura cavity filled with pus, forcing the organ out of place. Dr. Allan pumped out the inflamed matter, but the heart stayed where it was. It seems to be performing its function properly now. Though lodged beside the right lung, it does not affect his breathing.

Suicides While Despondent.

Toronto, Aug. 21.—With a 38-calibre revolver grasped firmly in his hand and a great gaping hole in his head, the body of a man who had given the name of F. Brown, but who is believed to be W. Foley, was discovered in the Nottingham Lodging House at 52 Jarvis street by a fellow-roomer early yesterday morning. Coroner McCollum decided that suicide was evident, and that an inquest was unnecessary.

Despondency over ill-health is the motive attributed, as the man was comparatively well-to-do, having over $1,000 in various banks. He had been a bush ranger, trapper and Cobalt speculator. Upon him were found military discharge papers bearing the name Foley. He was a man of about 50 years of age. The body is at the morgue.

To Get Good Settlers.

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior, has returned from England, with good news concerning immigration projects. There is little immigration so far to Canada from the southern part of Ireland, as the movement from there continues to be in the direction of the United States. This is largely due to the fact that the passages are usually paid by friends and relatives who have established themselves in the United States. Canada stands to get most of her continental immigration in the future from Holland, Belgium and Scandinavia, countries whiah supply the finest class of settlers.

Young Actor in Jail.

Windsor, Aug. 21.—The matrimonial plans of Walter Pilson, aged 20, a nickelodeon actor from Toronto, were rudely interrupted by the Detroit police when Walter was arrested on a charge of having money belonging to Peter D. Campbell in his possession.

Campbell, who runs a saw mill back of Chatham, Ont., went to Detroit yesterday, and fell in with Pilson, who was to marry a waitress, who played Campbell for some honeymoon money. When searched Pilson had $34 in his possession. He is still locked up, though Campbell refuses to prosecute.

At the risk of giving prominence to an important-er-paper, we will mention the case of the Kingston Standard, which is supposed to be Conservative, yet defends the Ross rifle, the same costing much more and being much less efficient than the service arm. Now the Standard grows hysterical over the Imperial British army, mooted in despatches as likely to be the outcome of the Conference on Empire defence. The aim, as we understand it, is to give all Colonial troops, Canadians among them, the same training as British troops get. Discussing the matter, the Standard says:

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier can be depended upon, however, to check any attempt of this kind. He has put himself on record as opposed to militarism."

As a Conservative journal the Kingston Standard doesn't seem to be up to the standard.

BILIOUSNESS, DIZZINESS VERTIGO AND PAIN IN THE BACK.

Owes His Life to the Curative Powers of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Lack of exercise and overwork were the causes that combined to almost kill Samuel S. Stephens, jr., one of the best known and most influential citizens in Woodstock. In his convincing letter Mr. Stephens says:

"A year ago I returned home after a long trip, completely worn out. I was so badly affected by chronic biliousness, so much overcome by constant headaches, dizziness that I despaired of ever getting well. I was always tired and languid, had no energy and spirit, found it difficult to sleep for more than five hours. My appetite was so fickle that I ate next to nothing and in consequence lost weight and strength. I was pale and had dark rings under my eyes that made me look like a shadow.

"It was a blessing that I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. In one week I felt like a new man. The feeling of weight and nausea in my stomach disappeared. My eyes looked brighter, color grew better, and best of all I began to enjoy my meals. The dizziness, languor and feeling of depression passed away and I fast regained my old time vigor and spirits. To-day I am well—thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

The regular use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills keeps the system clear, healthy and thereby prevents all manner of sickness. One pill when retiring will make you feel like new. For health strength, comfort and good spirits there is no medicine like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Beware of substitutes and don't let any dealer palm off some other pill on which he can make more money, 25c per box, or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

10,000 Plants for Making Bogus Money.

READY FOR OPERATIONS IN UNITED STATES AND CANADA —ARE WATCHED TOO CLOSELY

Detroit, Mich, Aug. 19. — Chief of Detectives John Wilkie, head of the United States Secret Service Department, arrived in Detroit last night, on a tour of inspection from coast to coast. He states that he is investigating general conditions. Speaking of the work of his department in connection with its recent activity in the suppression of counterfeiting, Chief Wilkie made the rather remarkable assertion that there are at the present time no less than ten thousand counterfeiting plants in this country and Canada ready to begin operations at a moment's notice. The reason they are not doing business at the present time, Chief Wilkie explained, was on account of the almost constant surveillance maintained over them by the American, British and Canadian Secret Service Departments. Every counterfeiter is known, and his movements are at all times closely watched, so that before even the preliminary steps toward getting out counterfeit money could be taken, the counterfeiter and his plant would be seized.

Whist Saved Life.

The game of whist has been responsible for many a strange incident since its introduction into the world: but this is surely the most strange of all:

In order to keep his wife from collapsing under an excessive dose of morphine, G. G. Gallagher, of Des Moines, persuaded her to engage with him in a two-hour game of whist, thus saving her life. After the laudanum had been taken from the woman's stomach by physicians they prescribed this method of keeping her from going to sleep. She had always been fond of whist, and was immediately interested in the game. It was a game against death, and the husband played with beads of nervous perspiration standing on his forehead.

No one ever knows the value of a good game of cards, says the Ottawa Free Press, until the necessity arises for some diversion of the mind from worries.

AUCTIONEER GETS $50 AND $100 OFFERS FOR $1,000 and $5,000 AUTOS.

Such low bids were made for the purchase of the rolling stock of the bankrupt Auto Transit Company, some 45 double-deck automobiles, at the receiver's auction sale this morning that it is probable the lot will be put up and sold to one bidder after the sale is concluded.

The auctioneer could get no more than $50 and $100 for autos which were appraised at $1,000 and $5,000. —Washington Times.

SINCLAIR'S

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

step from this classic entrance into a modern interior, for no attempt to make the inner part harmonize with the outside had been made. The first first square hall bore some resemblance to the atrium of the Pompeians, but the great salon beyond it was furnished stiffly in the French fashion of fifty years ago. Nothing could make this an interesting room, not even the excellent works of art which adorned it, and they were glad to walk through it, and the seemingly endless suite like it, wherein their footsteps echoed on the shining marble floor, to a small octagonal room at the end, which Di Loria had made his special retreat from the loneliness about him as others make a retreat from too aggressive companionship.

It was a delightful apartment, though even her was a look of formal order, hastily imposed on what had been familiar confusion. The walls were lined on six sides with books, nearly all Greek, Latin and Italian, as Rhoda, who had gravitated to them as a bee to honey, observed with disappointment, though the volumes scarcely needed an internal recommendation, being covered with the exquisite beauty and finish which is a specialty of Italian binders. They were well worn, despite their delicate covers, and in several instances where the workmanship was especially fine, were protected by outside cases of shagreen. The remaining two sides of the room were entirely composed of plate glass, now opened outward upon a loggia which marred the general effect of the architecture, but made an ideal open-air parlor. It was also decorated with Pompeian paintings, over-run with trailing vines, and commanding the best view of the bay. There were marble tables set here, and a deep marble bench ran around the loggia on three sides, stopping at the vine-wreathed railing. On these were placed velvet cushions of a faded rose-color, while the tables bore a weight of fruit and flowers and some curious, deeply chased silver cups grouped about crystal flasks of ruby and golden wines.

"How perfect!" cried Rhoda, leaning over the balustrade and looking down at the silver slopes of the olive-covered hills beneath.

"Di Loria," said Regy, "you are certainly Prince Charming, and this is an enchanted castle."

Mrs. Winter said nothing. She had folded her hands on the marble before her and was looking off to the mountains resembling in hue the throat of a turtle-dove. She let them chatter their young praises, but some grave and simple words of Homer were in her own heart: "Even an immortal coming would admire it when he beheld, and would be delighted in his mind." But when she spoke at last it was only to say, as she dwelt on the creamy light:

"I suppose that is what Taine calls the 'blonde haze.'"

"Is it not a happy phrase!" said Di Loria vivaciously. "It causes one to pardon him that he compared our gulf to a marble vase purposely round to receive the sea."

"That is a purely Gallic conception," said Rhoda. "The Frenchman honors nature when he compares it to art.'

"He has a great feeling for the art, always,' said Di Loria apologetically.

'I am afraid I have always had a secret sympathy with his comparative view,' said Rhoda, 'but then I have never seen nature at her best until now—or art either," she added.

"You should have seen Vienna first, Rhoda," said Regy. "You won't care for it after this."

"Why do you go there so soon?" said Di Loria.

"We have friends there. Mrs. Winter's sister lives in Vienna.

"Oh, I remember now!"

"Rhoda," said Mrs. Winter abruptly, "have you heard from Eugene since Saturday?"

She was sorry when she saw the cruel crimson flush invade Mrs. Starr's cheek, but she had spoken with intention. She felt it right that Rhoda's relation to Merriam should be made known to Di Loria, though she did not fully share Regy's apprehensions with regard to her affections, and was too much imbued with the popular idea of Italian unsubstantiality to have much fear for Di Loria. Also, she told herself there was an unsuitability about such a combination which even her long experience failed to discern as the favorable argument which most matrimonial arrangements have proved it. Di Loria seemed to her so light and bright, as sunny and youthful as her own Regy, despite the virile intensity which always showed at the slightest appeal to his national feeling. And she could never imagine Rhoda as a happy woman, for all her assertion of untried powers in that direction. Sweet she was, strong she might be, but happy, as these volatile Southerners were, never. She and Eugene were best fitted for each other, grimly appreciating the pains of a world darkened by their respective temperaments.

"Eugene?" said Di Loria, with an almost pleading grace of apology. "But I wish I might ask more of this one of whom I hear so much. He is not your son, dear Madame?"

"No, Regy is all I have of my very own, but—"

"She is as fond of her nephew, Eugene Merriam, as she is of me," interrupted Regy, with a warning glance at his mother.

Now if any one but Regy had been responsible for that interruption and glance, Mrs. Winter would have finished her statement and informed Di Loria that Merriam was Regy's cousin and Rhoda's fiancee, for she had both courage and obstinacy. But these sturdy traits melted into meek compliance where her boy was concerned, in all but matters of vital principle, and she did not yet feel this to be involved.

Di Loria was instantly satisfied. There had been more uneasiness under that apparently careless question than the most acute observer could have gleaned from his bland manner. After a little mild wonder at the amazingly frank intimacy existing between young Mr. Winter and Mrs. Starr, he had concluded that such easy friendships between men and women were among the many agreeable American customs not yet fully known to him, and that Mrs. Winter's nephew should be on an equal footing with her son in Mrs. Starr's regard could not seem strange to him. The quick suspicion that oddly accompanies the simplicity of the Italian character had been stirred when he noticed, with the ready perception of his nation and the readier apprehension of a lover, that it was always of Mrs. Starr that questions were asked of this much-mentioned Eugene, and he had waited with the tenacious Italian patience for the opportunity when he could ask for information without seeming to force it.

"Of course when a man may receive news of his friends through a young woman, an adorable young woman, he will prefer this to hearing from his aunt. An aunt is to be honored always, and this lady has the charms of a Signorina in her ways, but it is not the most diverting relationship," he said to himself artlessly.

"Why have you never brought us out here before, Marchese?" asked Rhoda. She had become very pale.

"When you have honored my poor house before it has always been for so short a time,' 'answered Di Loria. "Now that I am so blest as to have your company for the whole evening, we may afford to spend some part of it here."

Regy had thrown himself down on a pile of the velvet cushions, and cast one hand above his head. The other caressed the shaggy crest of Leo, who received this trifling attention with dignified urbanity. Nothing could have been lighter, easier, more absolutely purposeless and pleasant than Mr. Winter's whole air and expression; nevertheless his next remark was the result of deliberate calculation.

"Mother, Rhoda, we shall not feel in the least like going away on Thursday."

He addressed the ladies, but his eyse were steadily fastened on Di Loria's face.

Di Loria turned quickly, with a startled movement. "Pardon—I seem to ask so many questions to-day, but—but is not this most sudden? You did not think to go so soon yesterday. You had no thought to go North until it was more warm."

"We are only going down to Amalfi for a week," said Regy lazily. "I thought we had mentioned it to you. We have no idea of going North at present."

He turned his eyes away to the shining sea, and wound a long spray from the vine that clambered through the white balustrade about Leo's noble neck. He had seen what he wanted to see.

"How heavy that fragrance of or-

Bold Burglar Stole Mr. Taylor's Pants

MIDNIGHT MARAUDERS WALKED AWAY WITH THREE PAIRS FROM STORE AT STATION—FRONT DOOR BROKEN IN.

There was a burglary near the station last night, or early this morning, and though the thieves' loot was not very valuable, it might have been more so had not the bad men been disturbed in their operations.

The robbery, which took place in the store of Mr. Henry Taylor, is supposed to have taken place between 12.30 and 1 o'clock this morning. It seems that a G.T.R. employee, while going home from work, saw the store door was open. He notified the police, who had passed that way a quarter of an hour before, and found everything all secure.

The police got to the scene of the burglary in double-quick time, and notified Mr. Taylor. A careful search showed that only three pairs of pants were missing, but it is believed that the fact of the thieves being interrupted was all that kept Mr. Taylor from being a heavy loser.

Entrance was effected by breaking the front door lock with an iron bar, which was found near by.

There is no clue to the thieves.

Labor Day Road Race

The second annual road race between Trenton and Belleville, inaugurated by the Deacon Shirt Co. as a Labor Day event, will take place next Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 6th. Owing to the cup having been won by Harry Palmer, Trenton, the race will be from Belleville to Trenton this year, and it is hoped that some of the fast runners will bring the cup back to Belleville.

It is proposed to make the starting point on Commercial street, at the junction of Charlotte street, continuing along the Trenton road through Trenton to the Firemen's Park. The start will take place at 1.15 p.m.

It was thought best to start on top of the hill, in order to avoid the same, but, to continue through to the Firemen's Park, Trenton, as there is to be a great celebration that day in Trenton, under the auspices of the Trenton Fire Department.

Fuller particulars will be announced later.

All entries to be registered and fees paid to Mr. Wilkes, Physical Director, Y.M.C.A.

30-HORSE POWER VOICE LANDS TAR IN POLICE GRIP.

BRITISH SAILOR MAN, IRATE, SAYS NO "PEELER" WOULD HAVE TREATED HIM SO ROUGHLY.

"I've sailed the seven seas and all the oceans," said Captain Joe Watson, of the British tramp steamship Winkfield, in the Oak street station—where he was taken by Policeman Bracken for making a disturbance at the Park Row entrance to the Brooklyn Bridge at New York on Wednesday—"but I've never had to endure police persecution like this."

The Captain hails from Upton Park, Essex, England — No. 160 Plashet road. According to Bracken, the captain was drawing a crowd and had to be put into a taxicab and brought to the station, in company with a young woman who called herself Mary Gluckstein, of No. 551 West street, Brooklyn.

Watson was irate at his arrest and declared that no "peeler" had ever treated him so roughly.

But Lieutenant "Bull" McCarthy, who was on the desk, knew that he was wrong. "For 'Bull' has travelled the road. He went to the defence of the finest by assailing the English "bobbies."

"In your country," he said, severely, "if the "copper" puts up his finger all London stops. You are complaining because you were locked up, eh? You are lucky that you were not battered up," and with that consolation Lieutenant "Bull" sent him to a cell. He was later taken to court.

There Captain Watson caused great commotion by talking at the top of his voice. His deafness forced Magistrate Corrigan to shout out in order to be heard and for a time there was a duet of roars.

The sailor man explained to the court that he had had a dispute with a taxicab chauffeur, who had brought them to the bridge after stopping at the wrong place. The young woman with him, he said, was the daughter of an old friend. He was returning with her to her home when the question of fare came up, and with it a large crowd to listen to the captain's deep sea voice.

Magistrate Corrigan discharged both and asked if they could find their way to Brooklyn without further trouble. He protested that he couldn't, and Policeman Bracken volunteered to guide him as far as he could.

In summing up the results, Captain Watson said he had lost his umbrella, he had seen the inside of a New York cell, the work in a court and of a New York taximeter. It was valuable experience, he thought.

As he left the court room he remarked in a thirty horse power voice that he had saved his gold watch from the wreck.

"A valuable watch, Captain?" they asked him.

"Worth $10,000," answered the mariner, gravely.

Good Market To-day.

There was a very good market today, and the display of vegetables and early fruit was enough to gladden the heart of a lover of good things. But know this that in the last days perilous times shall come. Men shall be lovers of money, boastful haughty, disobedient to parents, heady, highminded, puffed up, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof. Now have there arisen many antichrists, whereby we know it is the last hour. Hear the gospel of the Grace of God, Bethel Hall, Sunday at 7.

Now that the winter is over, everyone is becoming interested in league baseball, or one of the many summer sports. In order to keep our readers in touch with all live sporting events, we have made arrangements with THE NEWS, Toronto, whereby we can offer both THE NEWS (daily) and The Intelligencer for one year for $4.00. We can fully recommend the Sporting Page of THE NEWS as being accurate, complete and up-to-date. Special correspondents report all the Eastern League baseball games and no sporting event of any consequence on this continent is omitted from its columns. Photos of the players, runners and "snaps" of games, etc., make the page particularly attractive. Send for sample copies and see for yourself. A postcard to our office requesting samples of THE NEWS will be promptly attended to. tf

Many a man's idea of clothing comfort is the kind his wife won't let him wear.

Occasionally a man is so absent-minded that he pays his gas bill the day before it is due.

We wonder if the Lord loves a cheerful giver as much as the cheerful giver loves himself.

If a man never told a lie it's because no young mother ever asked him what he thought of her baby.

When you hear a girl speak of a young man as being a bear—well, you can draw your own conclusions.

KIPLING SEES DISASTER.

Predicts Trouble as a Result of Present Social Tendencies.

National disaster from present-day tendencies of the National Government is prophesied in a long poem by Rudyard Kipling, which the Morning Post prints.

Describing the citizens of an imaginary state, "The City of Brass," he tells how they started to "decree a new earth at a birth without labor or sorrow."

Their administrative ideas are thus described:

They said: "Who has hate in the soul?
Who has envied his neighbor?
Let him arise and control both that man and his labor."
They said: "Who is eaten by sloth?
Whose unthrift has destroyed him?
He shall levy a tribute from all because none have employed him."
They say: "Who has toiled? Who hath striven and gathered possession?
Let him be spoiled; he hath given full proof of transgression."

They razed their ramparts to convert them into pleasure grounds, encouraged rebellion in their colonies, flung away the Imperial possessions their forefathers gained, scouted faith and endeavor, and derided the idea of restraint.

Nemesis comes when they are steeped in self-satisfaction in the form of a hostile host, and the poem concludes:

The eaters of other men's bread, the exempted from hardship,
For the hate they had taught through the State brought the State no defender,
And it passed from the roll of the nations in headlong surrender."

A Fading Art.

The art of carving is disappearing among the Maoris of New Zealand. There is no demand for war canoes now, except from world's fairs and Paris expositions. In the olden days, the chief's house, the storehouse, and the posts of the village stockade were ornamented with carved figures. But the rainy climate of the country and other causes have been fatal to these monuments. One must go to the museums to see specimens of this fading art.

The "haka" is the war dance or call to arms of old Maoriland. Stripped to the waist, the men arrange themselves in two files and begin to chant in a low tone, a woman giving them the time. They turn right and left, stamping and waving their arms, till they work themselves up to a prodigious pitch of fury expressed by rolling eyeballs and deafening roars. Standing to one side, the woman "leader" urges them on to the climax. They give one thundering stamp, and thrust out their tongues as far as they can. This was the supreme act of defiance to the foe. In the olden days it was no light matter to attend a "haka." Then each warrior brandished a heavy greenstone club, and once heated to the pointed of battle frenzy, would hardly cool down, even at a play "haka," without clubbing somebody just to keep his hand in practice.

His Lucky Donkey.

The costermonger's love for his donkey was demonstrated recently at the People's Palace, Mile End road, London. Nearly 200 donkeys, carefully groomed, with their owners standing by them in their Sunday best, were exhibited under the auspices of Our Dumb Friends' League.

Many of the costermongers declared that they would not part with their little animals for untold gold. "Here's the foundation of all my little fortune," said William Witt, an East End coal dealer, as he stroked his sturdy prize winner, Lazy Lightning. "Five years ago I was dead broke; I borrowed 30 shillings to buy my little pal here"—patting the donkey again.

"First my donkey carried coal from street to street on a barrow; but gradually my trade grew. Now I've got three little shops, and a farm out in the country. But it was the donkey that turned my luck and put me on the right road. Out at the farm there's a nice green field, with shady trees in it. As soon as this show's over that's where my donkey's going, to end his days just doing nothing but enjoy the green grass—and rest."

Many prizes were awarded to the best-groomed donkeys. A challenge cup and a set of harness, given by the Queen, were won by Jenny, a smart little donkey that pulls the barrow of a wood and coke hawker.

Cinematograph In Central Africa.

There seems to be no limit to the ramifications of modern inventions. No sooner does anything establish itself in the favor of the public than it bobs up serenely everywhere. Who would have thought, for instance, that the cinematograph, popular and entertaining as it is, would have appealed to the wild and woolly native of Central Africa? Yet a letter from the office of Superintendent of Buildings at Zoomba, Nyassaland, assures me that this is so. The venture is successful, too. Mr. Hackett, of Frome, Somerset, is the intrepid pioneer, and the letter I have received states that "his exhibition has attracted the natives by the thousand." They call Mr. Hackett the "witch doctor," and he is still proceeding into the interior, "with a convoy of 40 Kaffirs to carry provisions, outfit, etc. —London Answers.

Historic House for Sale.

Smallfield Place, Burstow, England, which is associated with the life history of Anne Boleyn, is to be sold by auction by Messrs. Knight, Frank & Hutley. The house is considered to be the most perfect example of domestic architecture in Surrey. Smallfield was given by Lord Burghurst to John de Burstow as an acknowledgment for assistance received from him when thrown from his horse in the French war in the reign of Edward III. The "priests' hole" is still there, and the house is in a wonderful state of preservation.

Looking For Jobs.

No less than 2,400 applications were received for thirteen vacancies under the Surrey (Eng.) County Council the other day.

VISCOUNT KITCHENER.

A Brief Biography of Soldier Who May Visit Canada.

General Horatio Herbert, first Viscount Kitchener of Khartoum—who has just completed the great work he undertook in 1902 of reorganizing the British Indian Army—was born on Midsummer Day at Ballylongford, in the County Kerry.

During his exceptionally brilliant military career the retiring Indian commander has asserted himself with characteristic confidence and unbending will, and Lord Kitchener must be accounted one of the most strenuous soldiers that the British Empire has ever possessed.

Coming of a military family, Lord Kitchener passed thirty-eight years ago from Woolwich into the Royal Engineers. Since then his career has been one of scintillating brilliance, for "K. of K."—as he is now often called "for short"—has been to the fore in many expeditions and campaigns, and has "built himself an everlasting name" for thoroughness in the profession of arms.

A veritable "glutton for work," he assisted in the Palestine survey in 1874-78, and that of Cyprus of 1878-82.

Then he was sent to Egypt, and entrusted with the command of the Khedive's cavalry and the remodelling of the native army. Having effected this to his own exacting desiring, he, as Sirdar, conducted a vigorous opposition to the forces of the Khalifa. He found it necessary to build a railway to Omdurman before he finally broke the power of the prophet, annihilating the Khalifa's army in 1898.

By this time he had reached the rank of major-general and been made a K.C.B., and he came home covered with Egyptian honors, to receive the thanks of the British Parliament, a peerage, and a grant of £30,000.

In the year following, when matters seemed to be going wrong with our forces engaged against the Boers in South Africa, Lord Kitchener was sent out as Chief of Staff to Lord Roberts. Here, again, he distinguished himself for determination and dash in combination; and when Cronje had been circumvented at Paardeberg and the British flag hoisted in Pretoria, he was promoted to the commandership of the forces in South Africa on Lord Roberts' return to England.

Kitchener brought the long campaign to a close. Again the gallant fighter and fine organizer was thanked by Parliament, given a further £50,000 from the country's public purse, and raised in the peerage to a viscounty.

As a full general he was sent out in 1902 to India as Commander-in-Chief, with practically a free hand to reform the army of our great Empire of the Orient. His ideals of duty brooking no civilian interference in matters military, Viscount Kitchener soon came into conflict with the then Viceroy, Lord Curzon, and the friction ensued in the resignation of that able statesman in 1905.

Since then Lord Kitchener has practically been permitted to have his own way at headquarters in India; and on the completion of his task in the Orient, he is credited by some with hankering after overthrowing the influence of the non-military element in the War Office for good and all.

Barrister's First Brief.

My first brief I have the best of reasons for remembering particularly clearly. I was engaged for the defence in a case of robbery. Two men, the prisoners, had seized the prosecutor on the platform of Shrewsbury Station, and while one of them held his arms the other quietly rifled his pockets.

They were caught red-handed, and I had a brief to defend the prisoner who had held the prosecutor by the arms. I made the obvious defence. I urged that it was vindictive to sacrifice two victims to justice when one would suffice, that the distinction between the two prisoners was manifest, and as the one I defended had not taken any money at all it was impossible to pretend that he was as guilty as his companion.

To the amazement of everybody, not excepting the chairman—who had been careful in his summing up to sweep away my sophistries—the jury made the distinction I suggested to them, and returned a verdict of "Not guilty" against my prisoner.—"Reminiscences of Mr. A. C. Plowden," in The Strand Magazine.

A Pageant of Priests.

Pageants have so far illustrated the history of a single town or city, but the one held recently in the grounds of Fulham Palace, London, was unique. It depicted the growth and history of the Church of England.

It was split up into a number of episodes, and, beginning with the publication of the Edict of Emperor Constantine, came right down through the ages to the acquittal of the Seven Bishops in 1688. A final tableau, representing the church "throughout the world," concluded the gigantic spectacle.

The grounds of Fulham Palace, lent by the Bishop of London, were well fitted for such a purpose.

The spectators were housed in a grand stand, 394 feet in length, 90 feet in depth, and covering an acre of ground. In addition to a large royal box, there was seating accommodation for 6,750. His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury performed the opening ceremony.

An Amiable Violinist.

Robert Browning and Joachim met one evening at a friendly gathering in London. The violinist had "obliged" without satisfying certain ladies, who entreated the poet to obtain from him another solo. Browning, feeling the delicacy of his task, discharged it diplomatically and spoke, as sometimes he wrote, so as to conceal his thoughts, while the violinist, not understanding, bowed and smiled and did not play.

As they left the house Joachim asked, "What did you mean just now?"

"Oh," said the poet, "I wanted you to give us some more music."

"Then, why did you not come and say, 'Joe, old boy, give us another tune?'" returned the amiable violinist.

RAIN SPOILS PAGEANT

FIRST DAY OF CHURCH SPECTACLE PROVES RIDICULOUS.

Bad Weather Mars Effect of Great Historic Object Lesson in London—Mud Bedraggled Saints and Monks Make Scene of Reverence Almost Comical—Retrospect of Church is Given by Huge Company.

After many months of hard work, of enduring enthusiasm, and of those little troubles which are inevitable in a great assembly of amateur actors, the English Church Pageant a few days ago gave its opening performance.

Alas! the elements were not propitious. The day was the worst we have had this summer—cold, rainy, utterly dismal. It was most unfortunate, because the pageant depended so much on the weather, not only for the comfort of actors and audience, but for its propriety.

The colors wanted the sun to bring out their richness and harmonies. All the colors on the field were dimmed and drabbled by the dank, dull atmosphere which clung about the actors. Instead of the joyousness and gaiety of those living pictures of medieval crowds on the green field, with its encompassing trees in heavy foliage, there were rather somber effects of poor people in unfamiliar garments, bedraggled in the heavy rain, and moving through the mist. This somber tone was deepened as the afternoon wore on and the light failed.

Then, too, the weather robbed the pageant of some of its revenue and dignity. It made some of the scenes fall from the sublime very near to the ridiculous, because the sympathy of one's imagination was shocked a little by the sight of saints and monks paddling about the soddened field, and getting into position at the wings of the open-aid stage under the shelter of umbrellas. Roars of laughter greeted an episode in which British virgins were chased by savage Saxons with long spears, when, on the slippery, slushy ground, "Jill fell down, and Jack came tumbling after."

The great choir, gowned and hooded in medieval garb, were bound to abandon the dignity of history, and to commit wilful anchronisms in the full sight of the audience, and they sang the old litanies and dirges under a very forest of umbrellas.

In many ways the pageant itself, in spite of the bad weather, which tried hard to spoil it, was full of interest and supremely successful. The huge stand, with accommodation for many thousands of people, was packed to the last seat, and the enthusiasm of the audience, among whom were hundreds of clergy, was not to be damped. And the pageant pictures in the field rewarded them. Undoubtedly there was an appeal to the imagination, to the eye, and to one's sense of reverence, in this pictorial drama representing by living figures in vivid scenes the history of the old Church of England. The very field on which this drama was played is historic ground. The moat of Lambeth Palace was dug out many centuries ago, and on the field which it surrounds many great scenes, many most vital episodes in the history of our church and country, have been really enacted by men strong in spirit, whose flesh has long since gone to dust.

Thinking of that and of old things half forgotten, it seemed to one that the people on the pageant ground yesterday, vague as they were in the dank mist, were the ghosts of those who once played their parts and went their way to death and bequeathed their ideals and purpose to those who followed on this soil of England.

The prelude, with St. George in the silver-shining armor, and with the early British saints, Alban and Ninian, David and Patrick, stirred in one's memories of the dream-stories of the dawn of Christian faith in Britain—legends made true only by tradition and by a few old stories here and there.

The first scene of "The Publication in Britain of the Edict of Constantine. 313," is not recorded in history, but at least it was a reminder of the Roman occupation of Britain and of the little bodies of Christians, scattered outposts of the Faith, who lived between the rule of the Roman gods and of the Druid nature-worship, and to whom a liberal emperor granted freedom of religion as to all citizens of the empire. That was all a ghost-story yesterday, but one which took one's imagination back to the dim half-light of the early world.

And so as the scenes followed—the visit of St. Germain of Auxerre to the British Christians who had fallen into heresy, the founding of Iona by St. Columba, the coming of St. Augustine to the Saxons, who had driven the British to the West and destroyed the Christian outposts, the conversion of those Saxon people who were truly the first of the English, and the strong and real foundation of the Church in England—one had before one on the field a drama, full of color, in which one saw, as on an illuminated scroll of history, the foundation of the faith of our fathers.

One was shown the influence of monasticism in England before and after the Conquest, and the martyrdom of Becket reminded one of the long struggle between the Church and State—marked not once or twice only by brutal injustice and bloody tragedies, inevitable, perhaps, in a conflict between the spiritual and the temporal power, each seeking to break down the other's prerogatives, each claiming perhaps more than was due.

The episode of Magna Charta was to prove that the old Church was sometimes, if not always, on the side of liberty. The later episode of the suppression of the monasteries and the establishment of the Reformed Faith proved one thing to one man and one thing to another, according to his religious convictions and his knowledge of history.

BEFORE TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

Rural Mail Delivery.

A telegram to the Toronto Globe from Ottawa, of the 17th inst., no doubt inspired, says:

> "There have been about one hundred rural mail delivery routes established in Canada since the inauguration of the system last autumn. The majority of them are in Ontario and Manitoba. The demand for free rural mail routes is less active in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces than in other parts of Canada."

What, it may fairly be asked, has been done towards establishing rural mail delivery in the old settled parts of the County of Hastings?

Is it to be understood that this extension of mail service, of whatever value it may be, is only for Grit constituencies, or constituencies which are doubtful? It would seem so. The County of Prince Edward, for instance, where this so-called "free rural mail delivery" played no unimportant part just before and during the last Dominion election. It would appear that no Conservative constituency "need apply." The day of reckoning may soon come. The sooner the better.

Canadian and Yankee Silver.

The Royal Mint at Ottawa has not coined a great deal of money, and there is complaint that American silver is flooding the country. The Government has pursued a vacillating policy in this matter. Some years ago it brought down legislation to encourage the banks to ship back silver to the United States. The Act seemed to work well enough, but for some reason it was discontinued after a year's trial, only to be re-enacted at the last session. It is an accommodation to American tourists to have their own money taken at par and merchants naturally seek to accommodate them where a sale is in sight. Were Canadian silver coins accepted at par throughout the United States, the result would probably not diminish the output of the Royal mint. But, except along the border, our coins are only accepted in the United States at eighty per cent. of their value, and this naturally has the effect of reducing to the minimum their circulation in that country. The silver coins of both countries are only worth as bullion forty per cent. of their face value. The seignorage of profit made by the Government on coining silver is quite large, and there would be a greater coinage and of course a greater profit if all the fractional silver used in Canada came from our own mint.

A National Figure.

A national figure in Canadian politics is Dr. Sproule, of East Grey. The Doctor entered the House in 1878 and is only outranked in length of service by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Paterson and Hon. John Haggart. One would infer that he must be a good doctor when he has retained his health and strength after more than thirty years of continuous Parliamentary service. He has seen many strong men break down under less strain, for the life at Ottawa taxes the strength and saps the health of many members. Dr. Sproule does not save himself, but is unremitting in his attendance upon the House and the Railway Committee. Although the head of the Orange Order, he is generally popular with the members from Quebec. He has thoroughly mastered all the details of Governmental administration and is probably better posted upon the rules and precedents of the House than almost any other member.

Cold On The Chest.

HAD SUFFERED FOR WEEKS—USED FOURTEEN DIFFERENT REMEDIES WITHOUT EFFECT.

CURED QUICKLY BY "NERVILINE."

No stronger proof of the wonderful merit of Nerviline could be produced than the letter of Miss Lucy Mosher, who for years has been a well-known resident of Windsor, N.S.

"I want to add my unsolicited testimonial to the efficacy of your wonderful liniment, "Nerviline." I consider it the best remedy for a cold, sore throat, wheezing, tightness in the chest, etc., and can state that for years our home has never been without Nerviline. I had a dreadful attack of cold, that settled on my chest, that fourteen different remedies couldn't break up. I rubbed on Nerviline three times a day, used Nerviline as a gargle, and was completely restored. I have induced dozens of my friends to use Nerviline, and they are all delighted with its wonderful power over pain and sickness.

SHE CAN'T PLEASE ALL.

The Many Trials of the Girl Who is Advised.

There are some women who never give their friends much anxiety. Whether or not they are any stronger physically than some of their sisters, people seem content to take them and their welfare pretty much for granted. "Oh, to be in that favored class!" says the girl whose friends just love to worry about her.

She is one of many. You know the type. They are, as a matter of fact, rather reckless in matters pertaining to their health. They are too busy doing other things, but they have the unfortunate failing of "looking frail." They are thin instead of stout, pale instead of rosy, and when tired their eyes have the strange propensity of looking like the proverbial burnt holes in a blanket.

By common consent it seems to have been agreed upon that they need tending and constant watching.

If a chance friend mets one of them on the street she would blush to miss the chance of recommending her pet cure-all.

"I tell you what you ought to do," says the robust person. "You just get into the habit of taking egg and milk three times a day and you'll look like another person."

The next time it is cod liver oil that is just what she needs, and again it's horseback riding three times a week or massage that would do wonders for her.

The solicitous interest of a batch of friends would be trying enough to put up with if they didn't all insist upon proffering advice profusely.

One can't be taking eggnogs and eating juicy steaks and lying down and taking walks in the fresh air all the time. One hasn't time to attend to so many matters, and, besides, sometimes they conflict.

"The waist you sent looks very well on me," writes one girl, "especially when I 'stand up straight,' as Lucile is always thumping me on the back and commanding me to do.

"I strut about looking very smart in my new blouse and very well pleased with myself and my straight, upstanding position until Jane comes along and admonishes me to relax. 'Child, relax. You must relax,' she chants solemnly.

"It's really quite a problem to know what to do, for I'm strong on making them all happy, but I can't be standing up straight and relaxing and throwing back my shoulders and lying down for a little rest all at the same time—these dear 500 friends, if only one could please them all, but how can it be done?"

HOME HINTS.

When ivory handles have turned yellow rub them with turpentine and it will restore their color.

To prevent wooden pails or tubs from shrinking when not in use paint them over with glycerine.

Coarse salt sprinkled on the floor occasionally before sweeping is said to be a good preventive of moths.

If the juice of a fruit pie runs out, try putting a small funnel of white paper in the center of the upper crust.

Try washing the hands with a little sugar added to the soap. This greatly increases the cleansing power and will remove dirt and chemical stains in a wonderful manner.

If when salt and flour bags are emptied you will put them in the clothes hamper to be washed and boiled out, you will always have a supply of jelly strainers. The salt bag is just the thing for the odd glasses of jelly made all during the season.

It is a great mistake to use fine glass tumblers for lemon squash or other beverages which are required to be very highly iced. If they are employed, however, the precaution should be observed of placing them to steep for some little time in cold water before filling them with the iced drink.

Gives Studio Teas For Pet Cats.

Desire to attract attention probably is just as strong among American women writers as it is among their sisters in France, but in this republic they do not dare go to the length of wearing men's clothes, which have been adopted recently by ambitious penwomen in France. The law there being lenient, these literary lionesses are permitted to stride down the boulevards garbed in fur trousers. But in America this is not possible, and women of letters must have recourse to other methods. An eccentric writer who bears a high sounding title delights, when receiving guests, to wear diaphanous drapery and repose on a lounge. Sometimes she shuts her eyes, and the guests may have the pleasure of gazing on sleeping beauty. Society seems to have discarded freak performances only that "intellectual queens" may take them up. A pretty young writer in Washington, whose father has an official position, gives studio teas for the pet cats of her friends, and the company spend hours solemnly selecting the proper shade of ribbon to make a neck ruff for a particular pussy.

Fatal Vacillation.

Cultivate firmness of purpose. Without it, though your talents are high and your opportunities wide, your life record will be "nothing done."

Who is the one among your friends who has arrived? Is it the show girl of school days, the girl who could do many things well, but rarely knew what she wanted to do? The successful one is the girl of whom you can remember nothing save her pertinacity.

No girl succeeds who does not set her mind along a certain line and stick to it, though difficulties mount and temptations to turn aside are strong.

AT THE BEEHIVE

Chas. N. Sulman.

THE cost of living is an important thing in most homes. You may have to figure closely in these matters. A little extra on a barrel of flour may look big to you.

But there is a difference between spending money wisely and spending it foolishly.

Sometimes it is economy to spend instead of to save. It is in the case of Royal Household Flour.

Those few extra cents a week, that give you

Royal Household Flour

in preference to inferior flour, buy health.

Nothing contributes so much to the food you eat as flour, and therefore nothing should be more carefully bought. Ogilvie's Royal Household Flour is the whitest, cleanest and most nutritious flour that's milled. It is the only flour that is absolutely pure.

Ask your grocer.

Take Your Pick While the Picking is Good

Could you use another suit at a price? We believe you can and will, after you learn the value of the suit and the price that will buy it. We're going to do some great stunts in the way of suit selling and have taken all broken lines of Men's Suits which have been selling all season for $6.50, $7.50 to $8.50 placed them by themselves and now offer them to first comers for just

$5.00

We want no carry overs and of course to do this we must be willing to accept a loss. We would rather count the money than carry the stock. If your size should be missing from one line you are sure to find it in another.

We have placed a few in our South Window look at them and match them if you can.

GETTING YOUR CHILDREN READY FOR SCHOOL—DO NOT OVERLOOK THEIR EYES.

Perfect and easy, vision is necessary to stand the strain imposed upon them by their many school duties. Eye Strain uses up an excessive amount of nervous energy and causes the child to become tired and disinterested in its work. Properly Fitted Glasses have released many children from the bondage of eye-strain and made them happy and energetic scholars. Do not ignore frequent complaints of headache, tired or aching eyes, but let us make a careful and scientific examination, and if necessary supply the Proper Glasses. There is no truth in the frequent statement, "I do not like putting glasses on children, because they may always have to wear them." The reverse is the truth, by putting the Correct Glasses on the child during the growing time in many cases they outgrow the error entirely and are able later to go without glasses, whereas if neglected too long they will always have to wear them without getting as satisfactory results even by wearing the glasses. Charges moderate. Consultation free.

Some Warm Criticism For Mr. J. J. B. Flint

"HONESTY" ASKS HOW LONG HE IS TO BE ALLOWED TO MISRULE THIS CITY—INCONSISTENCY ALLEGED.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—When the school question was up, Mr. Flint said we could not afford schools because we had to have "Sewerage," he killed the school question.

When the question of sewerage came up, he immediately started to "knock" it. He now states that he and his benchmen have killed this proposition and glories in it.

Congratulations to the 100 property owners who refused to sign his petitions.

On or about the 6th of June last, Mr. J. J. B. Flint entered into an agreement with the City, part of which reads as follows:—

"The party of the first part (J. J. "B. Flint) will support and vote for "any sewer system which the City pro- "poses to have adopted for Dundas "street, and will not sign any peti- "tion opposing the construction of a "sewer on said street, but will, if re- "quested, sign a petition or request "for the construction of a sewer upon "said street," etc., etc.

yet the gentleman comes out over his own signature in the papers proclaiming the fact that he has signed a petition against the construction of a sewer on Dundas street. "Consistency, thou art a jewel!" Mr. Flint apparently thinks as little of the best interests of the citizens of Belleville as he does of the sacredness of the agreements into which he enters.

How long is this gentleman to be allowed to rule, or misrule this city?

One who believes in "HONESTY."

Gruesome Relics Point to Tragedy

DISAPPEARANCE OF GIRL IN FRONTENAC COUNTY PROBABLY MEANS A TRAGEDY.

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 20.—Pieces of human hair scattered about the woods with torn shreds of a woman's dress, indicate that the disappearance of Miss Eliza Ellen Woodcock, of Cross Lake, near Arendale, is going to have a tragical solution. The hair and clothing were found four miles from the Woodcock house on the shore of Beaver Creek. Friends fear that her body may have been thrown in the creek, and it will be carefully searched.

Since Thursday night a week ago, searching parties have been scouring the woods and various explanations have been offered as time went on, and no trace of the woman alive or dead was found. The gruesome discoveries just made are expected to lead to the finding of the body in the vicinity. Foul play was suspected from the first, for there was no apparent reason for suicide. Miss Woodcock, who is about 35 years of age, was last seen standing at the doorway of her house. No strangers had been seen about the place, and there is no clue to the cause of the crime, if so it proves.

Found Not Guilty of Stealing Bearskin.

Before Judge Reynolds at Brockville Thursday morning, Sarah Giles, who was arrested near this city, was placed on trial charged with the theft of a bear skin from Gordon Eyre, with whom she resided for several years. The complainant swore that it was an out and out theft while the defendant testified that she applied the proceeds of the sale of the skin on an execution for a water bill which Eyre had neglected to pay. Under these circumstances Judge Reynolds discharged the accused.

OBITUARY.

MR. CHARLES H. KYLE.

After making a desperate fight for life against that fell disease, typhoid, Mr. Chas. H. Kyle, for many years proprietor of the Kyle House in this city, died at 10 o'clock last night. He had lingered for some considerable time, but hope was practically abandoned some days ago. Deceased was a son of the late Samuel Kyle, and succeeded his father as proprietor of the hotel. He was unmarried. Surviving relatives are a mother and sister, Mrs. Gribbie, who lives in this city. The late Mr. Kyle was a warm-hearted gentleman, and had many friends, especially among the travelling public. He was an Anglican and a Conservative.

A strange coincidence was the fact that Mr. Kyle died on the anniversary of his birthday, he being just 46 years of age. He was a member of Moira Lodge No. 11, A., F. and A.M., for the past 13 years.

GEO. S. JOHNSTON.

A well-known character in this city and vicinity passed away at 6 o'clock last evening, in the person of Mr. Geo. S. Johnston, for many years County Constable, who died at his late residence, College Hill. He had been ill for several months, the cause of death being senile decay. Deceased was in his 80th year. He leaves a widow but no family. The late Mr. Johnston was a Methodist and a Liberal in politics.

Was Maurice Ryan An Innocent Man?

RUMOR IN SUDBURY THAT JOSEPH RYAN, ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN MURDERED, IS IN VERMONT.

The following despatch relates to two men who were well known in North Hastings:

Sudbury, Aug. 20.—Is Joseph Ryan alive and was Maurice Ryan hanged an innocent man at North Bay on June 3, after having been found guilty of the murder of his brother?

These are questions which arise out of an autograph signature on the walls of Whitefish station, pointed out to a Sudbury man yesterday. The inscription reads:

"Joseph Ryan, Rutland, Vermont, June 19, 1908, westbound."

It will be remembered that at the trial of Maurice Ryan for the murder of Joseph Ryan, a letter was introduced, said to be from Joseph Ryan to his brother James, which had been mailed from St. Albans, Vermont, where a sister lived. The defence also had a witness who swore that he had seen Joseph Ryan at North Bay on February 19, 1908. At the trial the defence also contended there was nothing to prove that Joseph Ryan was dead.

Maurice Ryan protested his innocence to the last, and when asked at his trial by His Lordship Judge Latchford if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed replied: "I know nothing of the crime, my lord, and would like to have my counsel speak for me." His lawyer, G. L. T. Bull, made application in vain for a stated case, and Ryan went to the gallows on June 3, his last words being, "I am innocent."

The autograph at Whitefish station is there with hundreds of others. There is no hoax about it being put there. It was accidentally discovered by the station agent and roadmaster, and still the names and the fact of the Vermont part of it may be a mere coincident.

The murder took place in the woods of New Ontario and was unwitnessed. The body was not found.

Great Day In Madoc

There will be a great day in Madoc on Wednesday next, August 25, when the Gatherin' o' the Clans takes place, under the auspices of the Madoc Sons of Scotland. The Madoc Scots never do things by halves, and this year they will try to set a new record. There will be a great programme of sports, Highland piping and dancing, Marathon races, etc., and the famous 48th Highlanders' Band, of Toronto, will furnish the best of music. It should be, as the advt. in another column says, the outing of the season.

At first, I took five tablets a day, but now I take only one tablet every two days. I am now entirely well, and thanks to "Fruit-a-tives," I give you permission to publish this testimonial.

GAVE ALDERMAN $500

Elevator Agent Testifies to Giving Bribe in Montreal.

Julius Barrit Says He Left $200 and Later $300 on Desk in Office of Ald. Lesperance For Help Rendered in Getting Contract—Considered It His Duty to Give a Bribe—Other Witnesses.

Montreal, Aug. 21.—At the sitting of the royal commission yesterday afternoon, a witness swore that he had left $500 in the office of an alderman as a return for the support he had received in selling the city the new large passenger elevator that was installed in the city hall last year.

When the last witness of the afternoon, Julius Barrit, of Cote Brothers and Barrit, was called, only a few had any idea of the evidence to come.

At first he was reluctant, but it was drawn from him that he had laid, first $200, and later $300, on Ald. Lesperance's desk in return for services Alderman Lesperance had rendered for him.

"I considered it my duty to give that man money," explained the witness. "Later on, I thought he deserved more, and I gave it to him."

Not a word, however, had passed between the two about the money, the witness said. Ald. Lesperance had not returned the money, Mr. Barrit added, in reply to Commissioner Cannon's question.

At the session in forenoon, Ernest Belanger of the Modern Paving Company, admitted that his company generally made sixty cents a yard gross out of all their paving for the city. Belanger only got 10 cents a yard of this, and Brunet was given the other 50 cents a yard.

Four Die in Auto Crash.

Seattle, Wn., Aug. 21.—Three young women and one man, the driver of the automobile, met death, and two young women narrowly escaped a similar fate here last night when a large touring car, going at a high speed, crashed through the railing of the long trestle over the tide flats.

The dead are: Miss Agnes Cowan, Miss Maggie Paul and Miss J. Colvin.

Miss Mary Paul and Miss Kate Hiscock were rescued by a boatman, who heard their cries, and found them clinging to the wrecked car.

Get $10,000,000 Contract.

Prince Rupert, Aug. 21.—The Grand Trunk Pacific has awarded to Foley, Welch & Stewart a new contract for the second section east of Prince Rupert. It will be 140 miles from Copper River east to Aldermere. This leaves a gap of less than 500 miles and contracts for this may be let before the end of the year.

The new contract is for approximately $10,000,000. There are several long tunnels, one-half mile in length. The line will cross Skeena by a cantilever bridge, 16 miles below Hazelton.

Curtain Saved Theatre.

Brantford, Aug. 21.—The Grand Opera House erected one year ago, and formally opened for the second season last evening, had a narrow escape from destruction by fire shortly after 6 a.m. yesterday. The fire is supposed to have broken out from a match or cigar dropped on the stage. The large stage was completely gutted of scenery and fittings. The fireproof curtain between the stage and the auditorium saved the latter.

Mother Kills Children.

East Grand Forks, Minn., Aug. 21. —Mrs. Anton Strause, mother of six children, residing at Tabor, 10 miles northeast of this city, killed her one-year-old daughter and three-year-old son, chopping off their heads with an axe. She then ran to the nearest neighbor to borrow a gun to shoot her other four children who were working with their father in a field. The woman was released from the state asylum three months ago.

Car Men May Yet Strike.

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Street car employes of the west and northside lines have refused to ratify the recent agreement, and demand a strike. International President Mahon has been telegraphed for. The objections are that the new men will not reach the maximum wage scale of 30 cents an hour during the term of agreement, three and one-half years.

To Keep Out Bad Fruit.

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—Mayor Hopewell will bring before the next meeting of the Ontario Municipal Association on Sept. 1, 2 and 3, the question of fruit inspection before its entrance to a city. The fruit division of the division of agriculture are also supporting the move and urging it upon the mayors of the chief cities of Canada.

SECRECY IS BEST.

Hon. G. P. Graham Says I. C. R. Cannot Buy to Advantage.

Montreal, Aug. 21.—"There is no better state-owned railroad on the continent than the Intercolonial," was the remark of the Hon. G. P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, who has just returned from a study of the railway and canal systems of Great Britain and the Continent. He is to make a report to the Government on the comparison between state-owned and corporation-owned roads. Long hauls and sparse population were adverse factors in Canada. Passenger rates were the same as here, but freight rates higher.

"The chief drawback to the Intercolonial," he said, "is that the details of all expenditures are made public. Every little tender is made public and contractors get a chance to force up the price. In Germany these details are not given out and the management is able to get an advantage in buying. The roads are discussed in the Landstag, but these details are not asked for. Give us less publicity and we can make the Intercolonial pay and pay well."

While in England he had an intimation from one of the largest firms there that they would be ready to build the Quebec Bridge.

The canal system he found hardly up to ours. There were no free canals, as in Canada.

An Open Verdict.

Simcoe, Aug. 21.—Emery Shelley was not even implicated by Coroner W. A. McIntosh's inquiry into the cause of old Michael Hall's death, the jury finding that deceased met death from a bullet fired by some person unknown.

The decision was, however, in accord with Crown Attorney Slaght's presentment of facts, and which inclined rather to charging young Shelley with criminal negligence.

George Neilson identified the rifle as the one stolen from Blacksmith Paul's shop, where it had been sent for repairs. He had once killed a hawk with it at 192 yards.

Constable Ables said the boy had expressed a wish to see Mr. Hall's body before going to jail, and he took him over. The boy showed no emotion.

Magistrate Murphy remanded Shelley to jail for eight days.

C. P. R. After Crops.

Bangor, Maine, Aug. 21.—A strenuous war for the control of the railroad business in Northern Maine is being waged by the Bangor and Aroostook and the Canadian Pacific systems.

Potatoes and lumber are the chief commodities in the traffic which these companies are reaching out for, and last year the Canadian Pacific handled at least 42 per cent. of the entire export crop of potatoes.

That the potato business in Aroostook County is worth striving for by the transportation companies is evidenced by the fact that this county produced more potatoes than any other territory of its size in the United States, and probably in the world. Last year the shipments amounted to 15,000,000 bushels. This year the acreage has been doubled.

Disturbance in Mexico.

Mexico City, Aug. 21.—Special news despatches from various parts of Northern Mexico agree that the situation throughout that region is one of much political unrest. The Government has the situation well in hand. The trouble centres about the personality of Gen. Bernardo Reyes, Governor of Neuvo Leon, and formerly Minister of War.

One of the most dangerous elements is the alleged called meeting of all the clandestine lodges of Masons throughout the Monterey Region, who have pledged themselves to support Reyes.

President Diaz is a 33rd degree Mason.

Attempted to Break Jail.

Montreal, Aug. 21.—Ten prisoners made an attempt for liberty at the Bedford Jail, at Sweetsburg, Thursday night.

The men were about to be locked up for the night by Acting Turnkey Scott, who is 78 years of age. The prisoners beat the old man over the head and so injured him that he later had to go to the hospital. His cries for help brought High Constable Boisvert, who, with his revolver, cowed the prisoners into submission. The plot was evidently all arranged, as a rope was found hanging outside a window.

TWO LADS MEET DEATH

Sons of Weston Presbyterian Minister Drowned at Wawa.

John and James Hamilton Perish in Lake of Bays and Their Brother Henry Only Escapes After a Hard Swim—Former C. P. R. Conductor Loses His Life at Schreiber While Out Canoeing With a Friend.

Toronto, Aug. 23.—John and James Hamilton, sons of Rev. R. M. Hamilton, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Weston, were drowned near the Wawa, Lake of Bays, Muskoka, on Sunday.

Henry Hamilton, twin brother of John, saved himself by swimming ashore.

The three boys were in a canoe when it upset. James and John were expert swimmers, but they locked themselves in a deadly embrace and sank, while Henry struck out for the shore, which he reached safely.

The double drowning occurred two or three miles from the Wawa, near which the Hamilton family have been camping for a couple of months. Mrs. Hamilton went up with the boys when the season opened, and Rev. Mr. Hamilton joined them about three weeks ago.

James was 15 years of age, John and Henry, the twins, 17. Another brother, Gordon, aged 19, is purser of one of the boats of the Niagara Navigation Co., and did not go with the other members of the family to Muskoka.

Drowning at Schreiber.

Fort William, Aug. 23.—Geo. Ross, for some sixteen years C. P. R. conductor on the east end, but latterly a butcher of Schreiber, was drowned yesterday a few miles east of Schreiber. He was out with Crown Timber Agent Oliver of Port Arthur in a canoe and upset. He leaves a widow and six children.

Two Women Drowned.

Smith's Falls, Aug. 23.—A double drowning occurred at Jasper, six miles from here, Friday afternoon, the victime being Mrs. Harry Stephens, aged 28, and her sister, Miss Jessie Jones, aged 21, of Syracuse, N.Y., both of whom were visiting in the village at the home of Mrs. James O'Neil.

About 3 o'clock the ladies went out in a boat to fish in the small creek, and three hours later were found dead by a boy.

Found Body at Lewiston.

Lewiston, Aug. 23.—The swollen body of a man was taken from the river here last evening. It is supposed to be that of Augustus Spohr, 18 years of age, who while swimming in the river near the Maid of the Mist Landing on Monday last, was swept into the rapids. He was last seen alive near the spot where Capt. Webb lost his life, and afterwards his body was seen floating in the Whirlpool.

A Narrow Escape.

Newport, L.I., Aug. 23.—Four men had a narrow escape from death late yesterday afternoon when the 51-foot cabin launch Allegro caught fire and burned at a point about three miles east of Brenton's Reef lightship. Thrown into the water by the capsizing of the tender in which they had taken refuge from the burning launch, the four kept themselves afloat for nearly an hour until rescuers arrived.

Three Killed in Auto Races.

Indianapolis, Aug. 22.—Three more lives were sacrificed Saturday in the mad speed carnival which has inaugurated the great Indianapolis motor speedway.

One mechanician and two spectators paid the penalty of their lives to satisfy the extreme desire for speed.

The fatal accident came when a National Car, driven by Charles Merz, in the three hundred mile race lost a tire and crashed through a fence into a group of spectators, spreading death and destruction in the wake of its wild plunge.

The dead are: Claude Kellum of Indianapolis, mechanician in the National Car; Ora Joliffe, Trafalgar, Ind.; James West.

True bravery is shown by performing without witness what one might be capable of doing before all the world.—La Rochefoucauld.

Big Barn Burned.

Woodstock, Aug. 23.—Fire, which started from a mysterious origin early Saturday, destroyed the fine bank barn of Ex-County Councillor T. E. West, on the eastern outskirts of the city, with all of the season's crops, four horses and other stock. Insurance $2,000. It is thought that a tramp set fire to the barn.

Former Toronto Man Killed.

Windsor, Aug. 23.—James Wilcox, aged 35, unmarried, employed as a yard conductor in the yards of the Michigan Central at West Detroit, was crushed to death between two cars Saturday night.

Wilcox came to Detroit two years ago from Toronto, where he has a sister, Miss Nellie Wilcox.

Change in Telegraph Rates.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—The Postal and the Western Union Telegraph Companies announced Saturday that they have postponed until Dec. 1, the application of the new rule making cipher messages payable at the rate of five letters to the word, instead of ten, as at present.

FOUR SLAIN IN RIOT.

Deputy-Sheriff and Three Troopers Killed at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 23.—After almost a day of quiet, rioting broke out last night at the plant of the Pressed Steel Car Company, Schoenville, a suburb, in which one depty-sheriff and three state troopers were killed.

Shortly before 9.30, a mob of strikers gathered in front of the swinging gates of the stockade, and began a concerted attack. The state troopers resisted and in the melee Harry Exeter, a deputy-sheriff, 50 years old, was shot and killed by a supposed strike sympathizer.

In an effort to arrest a man picked out of the crowd as the one who did the shooting, State Trooper Smith was killed by a revolver bullet.

Two other troopers on foot were also shot and killed, falling into the arms of their comrades.

The state troopers then opened fire on the mob in a volley for the first time since the inception of the strike.

Six strikers fell to the ground at the first round, three of them reported fatally wounded.

The members of the mob then opened fire with rifles in return. Several troopers are reported to have been wounded.

An ambulance which was carrying the wounded troopers to a hospital was later attacked and the driver was forced to flee. The frightened horses plunged through the crowd, knocking down several persons. A detachment of troopers drove the ambulance to the hospital.

Among the seven casualties reported was that of Harry Eckley, an expoliceman serving as a deputy-sheriff, whose only relative, a sister, is said to live in Toronto. The information comes from Jack Laroque, one of the escaping Canadians, who fraternized with him at the plant.

The King Nearly Mobbed.

London, Aug. 23.—King Edward was assured by the authorities that he would not be molested at Marienbad this season, but he was so badly mobbed the first day that he had serious thoughts of leaving immediately. The nuisance has been mitigated somewhat since, but it is still pretty bad, and the officials are constantly kept on the qui vive by visits of the King's suite.

Edward is walking much more than usual and is playing croquet daily to the satisfaction of his physicians. This year among the ladies most acceptable in the King's entourage is Maxine Elliott, the actress.

The King is leading the simple life at Marienbad, rising at 8 a.m. to drink the waters, while walking to the golf course, after breakfast giving three hours to correspondence and state matters, then after a simple lunch more walking, a little croquet, more waters, an early dinner and to bed at 11 or thereabouts.

Baku Is Bankrupt.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 22.—Baku, the rich oil magnates' capital, is municipally bankrupt.

For three years the oil companies, a majority of which are Swedish, English and Belgian, have been pressing the Russian Government to compensate them for the destruction of their property, amounting to $15,000,000, during the recent revolutionary uprisings. Their charters entitle them to be protected, but the Government now pleads force majeure.

The companies who own all the property on Baku, have therefore stopped paying local taxation. The schools are closed and the teachers are begging charity. The city employes are unpaid and have gone to look for work as harvest hands.

600 Men at Rockcliffe.

Ottawa, Aug. 23.—When the Dominion Rifle Association opened to-day it is probable that more than six hundred markamen will be at Rockcliffe ranges. This is by far the largest entry in the history of the meeting, the previous record being 437. Sixty cadets are taking part, and every Province in the Dominion will be represented.

An interesting couple from Chatham are Pte. J. W. Smith and Lieut. Neil Smith, father and son. The former has been to Bisley twice and the latter three times.

Major W. C. King, of Bowmanville, is here for the twenty-sixth year in succession.

Wellman Fails Again.

Second Airship Dash to the Pole Ends in Disaster.

Chicago Newspaperman Finds Favorable Opportunity and Starts Big Dirigible From Spitzbergen, But Provisions Get Adrift and After Thrilling Ride Balloon Comes to Earth— No More This Year.

Camp Wellman, Spitzbergen, Aug. 15, via Hammerfest, Aug. 23.—Walter Wellman's second attempt to sail over the North Pole in a balloon has resulted in failure. The giant dirigible balloon, America, in which Mr. Wellman and his party of three set out upon their perilous flight to-day met with a mishap after it had proceeded about 32 miles from the starting point.

Mr. Wellman and his party succeeded in making a landing without injury to any member of the party and returned to this point on board the steamer Fram, which also towed in the disabled balloon.

After a long preparation and waiting for favorable weather, the opportunity came to-day, and Mr. Wellman decided early in the morning to make the start. It was 10 o'clock in the morning when the great airship was brought out of its shed and the daring explorers took their places in the car. When the anchors were cast loose, the airship ascended beautifully, the engines were set in motion and everything seemed to work to perfection. The big air craft was manoeuvred for some time and answered the helm perfectly. Then its head was turned to the northward and it set out at a speed of 25 miles an hour.

Suddenly, after having covered some 32 miles, the leather guide rope to which was attached a thousand pounds of provisions and stores, broke away. The accident occurred just as the airship was nearing the pack ice off North Spitzbergen.

Released from this great weight, the airship shot upwards at a terrific pace until it was at a great height above the clouds. The pilots succeeded, however, in bringing her down near the ice and commenced their flight southward against a strong wind. The airship proceeded slowly southward to the edge of the pack ice, where the steamer Fram was anchored.

After much difficulty a tow rope was gotten aboard the Fram, which started immediately to tow the airship to Spitzbergen. The strain was so great, however, that it threatened to tear the car to which the rope was attached to pieces, and Mr. Wellman finally decided to bring the airship down to the surface of the water.

But the ill-luck of the expedition was not yet at an end. Just as the airship had reached the landing stage and everything looked favorable for its rescue without serious damage, a sudden gust of wind caught the big inflated bag broadside on and snatched it away from its tow lines. It was carried careening over rough ice hummocks for some distance, and then it exploded.

Mr. Wellman will return to Norway next week. He says the airship was not seriously damaged and can be repaired, but that any further attempt this year is impossible. He is enlaring the balloon house to accommodate a longer and more powerful ship for future use.

U. S. to Get Preference.

London, Aug. 23.—Rear Admiral Bucknam Pasha, naval adviser to the deposed Sultan Abdul Hamid, and formerly a steamship commander in the Pacific mail service and later in the employ of the Cramp Shipbuilding Company of Philadelphia, was in London Saturday.

England and Germany, he said, were rivalling each other in trying to obtain concession, but the Government, fearing the latter's political influence, will give America preference.

Playwright Is Arrested.

New York, Aug. 23.—Theodora Gerard, the "cigarette girl" in a comic opera, who caused the arrest of George F. Brownson-Howard, the young playwright and magazine writer, at the stage door of a theatre last night on complaint that he had threatened her life and forced her to give him a ring, regretted her action when the case came up in police court Saturday and sought to call the whole thing off.

Fatal Fight Over Dog.

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 23.—Reese Huck, a prominent farmer, was shot to death and four others were probably fatally wounded in a feud fight growing out of a controversy over a dog, at Huntersville, 12 miles from here, last night.

Dropped Lamp, Started Fire.

Brantford, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Fred Marks, 111 West Mill street, dropped a lighted coal oil lamp on the floor in the kitchen Saturday night and the fire destroyed the rear part of the brick structure. The woman escaped unhurt.

To Chart the Seven Seas.

New York, Aug. 23.—Starting out to chart the seven seas, the non-magnetic yacht Carnegie glided from Theboe Basin, at the foot of Twenty Third street, Brooklyn, in tow of a tug, shortly before noon Saturday.

The Carnegie, the first ship of her kind, was constructed at a cost of $125,000 for the use of the department of terrestrial magnetism of the Carnegie Institute, of Washington, D.C. She was built for the purpose of surveying oceanic areas and determining distribution of magnetism in those areas, in connection with similar work undertaken on land by the institute and the Government.

Lynched.

Fitzgerald, Ga., Aug. 23.—Henry Taylor, the negro accused of murdering Mrs. Josh Vickers and her eight-months-old baby, was taken from a sheriff's posse and lynched Saturday near McRae, Ga. It is stated that Josh Vickers, the woman's husband, has been arrested on suspicion of being connected with the crime.

Alpine Death Roll.

London, Aug. 23.—The Alpine season is now in full swing and is bringing the usual toll of death and disaster. Six cases of death or disappearance were reported Saturday.

There have been sixteen other deaths since the beginning of the month, while fourteen were reported in July.

Regiments Must Give Notice.

Ottawa, Aug. 23.—A militia order issued Saturday contains notice that in future when militia corps or detachments desire to visit points outside of Canada application must be made to headquarters not later than 30 days prior to the date on which it is proposed to make the visit.

Operated on Booth's Eye.

London, Aug. 23.—Gen. William Booth, who returned to London from the automobile tour because of the effect on his eyes, underwent an operation Saturday afternoon. The surgeons found one eye badly poisoned.

The general bore the operation well, and is now as comfortably as could be expected.

35 Million Barrels of Apples This Year.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 22.—Thirty-five million barrels, or 12,000,000 barrels more than in 1908, is the estimated apple crop of the United States and Canada this season, according to Ren H. Rice, secretary-manager of the second National Apple Show in Spokane, Nov. 15 to 20.

NEW ZEALANDER ON ENGLAND.

Sir Robert Stout Delivers a Sharp Criticism on Old Land.

Sir Robert Stout, ex-Premier and present chief justice of New Zealand, has very definite ideas of the consequences of England's failure as a world-power. Sir Roberts knows the Antipodes as a man who has spent nearly all his life there, going out from the Shetland Islands at the age of 14, and returning to Great Britain for the first time now at the age of 65. He also knows New Zealand as one who has been chiefly concerned in building up the Island Dominion.

In an interview with the navy builder of 1885, Wm. T. Stead, he declares that England suffers chiefly from slackness, and illogical views. The non-Conformists, for example, wish to disestablish the church, and at the same time establish religion in the parish school.

Laborers are very slack in their methods, and three men are needed to do the work of one. The young Englishmen are not equal to the New Zealanders and the farms are not well cultivated. There is lack of enterprise, care and energy on the part of the manufacturer. As a result Americans captured the best part of the New Zealand trade. The habit of fuddling, on which $800,000,000 a year are spent in England, is another source of national weakness noted by Sir Robert.

"We hope there will be no war," said the New Zealander, "and if war should come we hope Britain will be victor. But do not make any mistake about it. If by any disaster any foreign power were to dictate a peace in London which transferred New Zealand to the conqueror, the next day we should hoist the Stars and Stripes, the only other flag save that of the Union Jack under which New Zealanders would live."

Sir Robert should pay a visit to Canada.

Monday.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY.

Duke of Buckingham assassinated, 1628.

Treaty of Prague signed, 1866.

Joint High Commission met at Quebec, 1898.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Many estimable people went on the annual exodus to Rochester. It is not likely that any latter-day Moses will have to perform any miracles, in order to quench the thirst of the pilgrims in the Flower City.

Somewhere in this old world there may be nicer weather, and prettier girls and cooler churches, and greener grass, and lovelier flowers, and better times, than in Ontario, but our name is Thomas, and we're from Missouri. Anybody who doesn't throw up his hat and cheer because he's alive in this favored land these days must have something crooked in his moral makeup somewhere.

Now there's the lower bridge, it's helping the dentists a lot these days. Cyclists who ride over it have the filling in their teeth jarred loose.

Those songs of joy we hear these days are being sung by the school children and their teachers, who will buckle into work again two weeks from to-morrow.

OUR WORRIES, AS SEEN IN KINGSTON.

Belleville is concerned with the medical inspection of the Public school pupils. This costs money, and Belleville was not supposed to be flush at the present time.

THE PICKLING SEASON.

Trenton Advocate: The Indian list is more or less of a farce, if we can judge of its results in Trenton. Every day we are treated to the spectacle of an Indian gloriously pickled.

What free trade has done for England. The agricultural rents of England have declined by $90,000,000 since 1881. The value of estates of over 30 acres has declined by $25 an acre. Thousands of acres of once arable land is now in pasture and the laborers who worked it have drifted to the towns. The army of the unemployed grows, and yet free trade is glorified as a practical economic system.

The Laurierites say we are to have a Canadian navy. Here is a specimen of what it means: The contract for the armor-plating alone of the new British battleship Colossus calls for 2,000 tons. The value will be about $1,000,000.

TRAVELLERS RETURN.

(New York Telegram.)

They're coming back on every steamship. Each one has the same old tale. "Oh, it's all right over there in spots, but we're awful glad to be back again in 'Gawd's country." But why in thunder do they go over year after year? There's a prize for the best answer to this?

According to a writer in The Lancet, the British medical authority, forty per cent. of the British school children are addicted to the daily use of alcohol in some form. This is probably a slander, and of all the weird things said about poor old John Bull, it is about the worst. The Lancet will soon be as yellow as a Hearst organ.

King Alfonso is reported to be anxious to go to the front in the fight with the Moors. Probably he'd just as soon do that as take turns in running the royal nursery.

Yankees Coming on Yachting Cruise.

At a meeting of the cruise committee of the Frontenac, N.Y., yacht club it was decided to hold the first annual cruise of the Frontenac Club on Sept. 6th, 7th and 8th, inclusive. The fleet, on the morning of the 6th, will set sail for the Bay of Quinte.

Three days and two nights will be spent on the cruise, returning on the afternoon of the 8th. The cruise will be in charge of Acting Commodore J. W. Friend, Capt. A. Johnson, of the flagship Rebemar, will be the acting fleet captain.

The fleet will anchor nights near some of the towns in the Bay of Quinte section, so that passengers on yachts without sleeping accommodation may be cared for at the hotels. It is planned to hold a similar cruise each year.

Hundreds Went on The Annual Exodus.

The annual exodus to Rochester, under the auspices of the Foresters, took place on the 21st and 22nd, and was largely patronized, hundreds of people taking advantage of the opportunity to go and visit relatives and friends who had left here in days gone by. The excursionists were favored with ideal weather. It is said the excursion was never more largely attended than this year.

Tough From Tweed Made Escape From The County Jail

SCALED THE WALL WHILE GUARD'S BACK WAS TURNED ON SUNDAY EVENING — LOOKS AS THOUGH CONDITIONS SHOULD BE CHANGED IN JAIL YARD.

George Ayoub, one of the tough trio who pleaded guilty to stealing a boat and pig in the vicinity of Tweed, will not be here for sentence when Magistrate Masson gets ready to deal out justice to the three young men, who were, last week, remanded for a week for sentence. The reason is that George, while taking the air in the jail yard last night, in company with the other prisoners, heard the call of the wild, and, while the guard's back was turned, climbed up on to the roof of a porch in the southeast corner of the yard, thence from one window to another to the roof, along that to the east side of the building, down to the top of the wall, and thence away. When the guard returned and counted noses, George was missing. The way he escaped was easily seen. The Intelligencer was shown the yard this morning, and it could easily be seen that the stunt would not be a difficult one for an active man. No ropes, blankets, or other Jack Shepherd paraphernalia were used.

An alarm was at once raised, and the police immediately began a search for the escaped prisoner, but no trace of him was found. He was not in prison garb, being on remand. The fugitive is 24 years of age, and says his home is in Toronto.

Great Britain's Object Lesson to the World.

The adoption of the new South African Constitution Bill by the British House of Commons is accompanied by the announcement that the Prince of Wales will go to South Africa next summer to inaugurate its inception. To the Montreal Star this appeals as an act of Imperial diplomacy which will be appreciated by the people of South Africa, as they must be gratified by the attitude taken toward their union measure by both parties in the House of Commons. Mr. Balfour is quite as enthusiastic as the Ministers; and there is on all sides a disposition to permit the South Africans to enjoy the utmost freedom in dealing with their own problems and difficulties.

Says the Star: "The Imperial Parliament feels quite rightly that it is not called upon to express an opinion as to whether or not the new Constitution handles all the matters of issue in the way it would prefer. These are questions for the men on the spot. This is the basis of union upon which the various elements in South Africa have agreed, and to attempt to change it in London would be like flinging a brick into the cogs of a delicate machine which has just begun to revolve. Nothing short of a proposal which would imperil British connection with the new Federation would justify interference by the British Parliament.

"The fact that nothing of the sort is dreamed of shows how far British statesmen are from infringing upon colonial autonomy. At times Canadians talk as if they feared that their hard-won self-government—which has stood unchallenged for more than half a century—were menaced by "Downing Street," or some other branch of the Imperial Government. But if the South Africans, whose constitution is still in a fluid state and who are actually in London submitting their proposals to the Imperial Parliament, are to be left entirely free from Imperial interference, how much more secure must be a prosperous and established colony which has managed its own affairs for six decades and which has slowly and resolutely broadened the scope of its self-government until it covers practically the entire field?

"The new Federation in South Africa will start upon its journey amidst the best wishes of the entire Empire. It bears a mighty responsibility upon its shoulders — a responsibility that will increase as it takes under its wing the unsettled districts to the north which Cecil Rhodes painted a British red. It is now in the position which Canada occupied when its four eastern provinces were just coming together, and when we had not yet bought out the Hudson Bay Company nor dreamed of provinces beyond the vast inland sea of Superior. Problems confront the South Africans from which we were free—notably the immense colored population in the midst of which it must work out its destiny. But they have taken up their task at a better time, and they will feel more promptly and vividly the shoulder-touch of their fellows throughout the Empire.

To Europe, the spectacle must be little short of miraculous. Here is a community which less than a decade ago was torn with war. British soldiers were fighting their way across the dead of Boer commandos into the capitals of the Boer Republics. To-day Briton and Boer are united in establishing a free, self-governing British colony under the flag of the Briton and under the possible leadership of the Boer. The Transvaal has self-government already, with a Boer Premier, and the leading General who fought against us in the war is now the honored guest of the Imperial capital. In fact, the acceptance of the situation by the Boers has been a commonplace of our colonial history for some time, and our attention must be pointedly called to the constitutional miracle which this South African bill represents before we appreciate it."

Modern Robinson Crusoe Found By Shackleton Ships

A WAYFARER FOUND LIVING ALONE ON A SOUTH SEA ISLAND.

London, August 21.—The homeward voyage of the Nimrod, the vessel of the Shackleton expedition, has been marked by the discovery on Macquarrie Island, nearly 600 miles south-west of New Zealand, of a modern Robinson Crusoe—a solitary inhabitant and two dogs.

The Nimrod, under the command of Captain J. K. Davis, left Sydney on May 8, and, says Reuter, in accordance with Lieutenant Shackleton's instructions, proceeded south in order to visit Macquarie Island and search for certain charted groups of islands, the actual existence of which was doubtful. Macquarie Island was discovered in the early part of the last century by a colonial sailing vessel. It is twenty-one miles long and five miles broad, and is the home of countless myriads of penguins, sea-birds and seals.

A visit was paid to the south-east point of the island and some specimens collected, and then the Nimrod proceeded along the coast northwards. As she drew near Nugget Point, from which a reef of rocks extends for some distance seawards, two huts were seen on the shore and also the wreck of a vessel high and dry on the beach. In his report Captain Davis says:

"Suddenly, to our surprise, a column of smoke rose from the smaller of the two huts. As we had heard nothing of anyone living on the island, this was extraordinary. Presently with the glasses, we could make out the figure of a man standing at the door of the smaller of the huts watching our approach. We came to anchor, and the boat was lowered and headed for the shore.

"The man now walked down to the beach, accompanied by two little dogs. There was a heavy surf, but our Crusoe-like friend, after pointing out the best landing place, walked into the water and assisted in beaching the boat.

"We soon ascertained that his name was William McKibben, and that he had been a member of a party which had visited the island in the previous season in order to obtain seal and penguin oil. When the season was over and the party's vessel was filled with barrels of oil he had elected to remain on the island by himself in order to collect oil for the following season. He did not mind the loneliness at all."

Captain Davis found that four islands or groups of islands shown on Admiralty charts do not exist. He proceeded to Monte Video, and is at present on his way to England.

Battleship as Target.

Paris, August 21.—Wrecked by the disastrous explosion of March 12th, 1907, the battleship Iena, now lying off the island of Porquerolles, near Toulon, is being used as a target by a shore battery and three cruisers during the next few weeks.

The cruiser Conde began the firing on Wednesday. Shells of various destructive power were used, the object being to test the effects of the explosives on the Iena's armour.

The experiments will also prove the effect of the asphyxiating gases liberated by the explosion of the new French naval shells. For this purpose a number of live sheep and oxen were shut in the turrets of the dismantled battleship. After the shells had been fired the artillery committee on board the Conde visited the Iena to see what had been the effect. The results were kept secret and it is not known whether the animals survived.

Some of them had microphones attached to their bodies, with electric connections to instruments on shore, so that the effect of each explosion on a living organism might be noted.

Doctors Condemn Oily Liniments.

THE PUBLIC ARE WARNED TO BE CAREFUL OF THESE STRONG SMELLING OILY LINIMENTS CONTAINING HARMFUL ACIDS, AMMONIA, ETC.

Many people have clung to the old-fashioned idea that a thick, greasy liniment is the best kind. Doctors say not—and they know.

Recently a number of these white oily liniments were analyzed, and they were found to contain an enormously high percentage of harmful acids, and such irritating chemicals as ammonia, etc. For the moment they may cause a warm sensation when first applied, but their continued use never cures rheumatism, and only deteriorates the skin, sets up inflammation and causes endless trouble.

When a doctor warns you to quit using a white, oily liniment—do so. He knows that a thick liniment can't penetrate, can't sink through the pores and reach the seat of pain.

When asked his opinion a few days ago, Dr. Roberts stated that he considered a strong, penetrating, pain-subduing liniment, such as "Nerviline," to be superior to any of the white ammonia liniments. In his twenty-five years of practice he had witnessed cases of rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago that simply would not respond to ordinary treatment—but Nerviline cured them. The same physician also spoke of the great advantages of keeping a preparation like Nerviline in the house always, because of cramps, diarrhœa, stomach disorders, earache, toothache, headache and such minor ailments. Nerviline is a first class cure. There is scarcely an ache or pain, internal or external, that Nerviline won't cure. In thousands of homes no other pain-relieving medicine is used. Fifty years' continued success and the endorsement of the profession are proof that Nerviline is the liniment for the home.

Any good druggist or dealer can supply the large 25c. bottles of Nerviline.

A GUARANTEED CURE

For Indigestion and Dyspepsia

There is no hesitation or quibbling about the claims which the Coleman Medicine Company make for their wonderful "Little Digesters". They come out straight with the statement that "Little Digesters" will positively cure even chronic Indigestion or Dyspepsia, as well as Heartburn and Sour Stomach.

They GUARANTEE "Little Digesters" to cure. If they fail, you get your money back, promptly and without question.

Of course they would not make such positive statements, or give such a guarantee, if they had not proved, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that "Little Digesters" WILL CURE.

"Little Digesters" do it simply and naturally, too, by helping out the weakened stomach—supplying just what it needs in the process of digestion, and enabling it to assimilate the food. Soon the whole system regains its vigor, and the stomach needs no further help.

"Little Digesters" are put up in little red boxes, sold for 25c by your druggist, or mailed by the Coleman Medicine Co., of Toronto. 29

A Bowel Medicine.

PREVENTS CONSTIPATION, APPENDICITIS, KEEPS COMPLEXION CLEAR, ASSURES SOUND HEALTH.

Two Remarkable Cases Described by Hugh Cameron of Folger Station, Ont., Proving the Merit of DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS.

"I am quite an old man," writes Mr. Cameron, "it being sixty-six years since I left my native town in Scotland. In that time I have witnessed much sickness and suffering. One case I recall occurred with a neighbor who I heard was about ready to die with appendicitis. I went to see him and found he had been ordered to the hospital weeks ago for an operation. But he put it off and I found him in bed suffering agony—four days had elapsed since his bowels moved. Having used DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS regularly for 25 years I knew they would help him and I gave him three pills. In two days he was around, and I know that ever since, this man has enjoyed excellent health and simply because he used Hamilton's Pills three times a week. No case of constipation can possibly go uncured if treated with Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

✦✦✦✦✦✦✦✦✦✦✦✦

'In my own family we use practically no other medicine but Dr. Hamton's Pills. To keep the digestion good, to regulate the bowels and maintain healthy action of the liver and kidneys no remedy I ever heard of is so dependable and so certain to do good as DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS. For the father who lives as I do, far from a doctor and a drug store, the knowledge of the power and wide usefulness of Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all family ills is very valuable. I have administered them for nearly every complaint for which they are recommended and in each case this honest medicine cured."

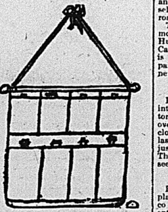
Signed, Hugh Cameron,
Folger Station, P.O., Ont."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are an old and proven cure for all disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels—good for children—good for old folks—just what everyone in poor health requires 25c per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

A MEDICINE BOTTLE.

Useful Present For the Friend Who Is Going to Travel.

A most useful present to make for the friend who is going to travel is the linen bag to hold bottles of medicine. Dull green, blue or brown linen would be suitable for the bag, which has two rows of four pockets each. The lower pockets are deeper and hold the larger bottles. These are stitched on by machine and have an oblong strip of the material for the bottom, so that the bottles set in nicely.



MEDICINE CASE.

A piece of tape is fastened to each pocket and also to the bag, which allows the pockets to set forward a little. The top of the bag has a casing through which is run a wooden rod, while tape is attached to each end to hang up the bag by, and the whole bag is bound with the same tape. The upper pockets are set in with small box plaits.

A PERFECT DREAM CITY.

London on a Glorious Day of Sunshine and Blue Sky.

The following pretty description of a sunshiny day in London appeared recently in an English publication:

London was yesterday a city of gold and green and white. Golden sunshine in the streets and parks, green foliage on every tree upon which the sun shone down, white buildings, newly built or newly painted, with clear outlines under a sky of Oriental blue. What dream-city could be more perfect than London on such a day?

Truly it was an unforgettable day—a day on which it is good to be alive, very good to be young when the spring calls to the blood and when perfume steals into the senses; good even to be old and to sun oneself in the memory of other spring days as golden as this.

The London season is beginning! Good words to those who have the leisure and means to play the game, the merry game of the social whirligig, good even to those who are merely lookers-on.

Yesterday the fun had begun. The King was in town, the court was in the capital, the servants of society had pulled up the window blinds of town houses and the sun was shining.

So the streets were very full of life at its best and brightest. Down Bond street and Piccadilly—the highways of the lucky ones—there was an endless tide of carriages, and the sun gleamed upon brightly polished panellings, flashed fire from the brass head lamps and metal work of magnificent motor cars, and glistened on the smooth flanks of good horses, which went dashing by as proudly as though there were no such thing as petrol.

Women were in the carriages and walking on the shady side, and one man sighed because he could not wear salmon pink, or Madonna blue, or walk in lilac beauty like these ladies who were the flowers of the London streets. Flowers, literally because all their hats were in full blossom, brought out by this brilliant sunshine, and from the top of an omnibus one looked down upon moving bouquets of roses and daisies and forget-me-nots, as though all the flowers in Kensington Gardens had been plucked as the garlands of England's fair women.

Yet the men did their poor best, yesterday, to do credit to the divine day. Old Bucks had put on white waistcoats, and young bloods in new silk hats—bright and beautiful things—had put yellow gloves upon their hands. The Green Park was a paradise, into which had slunk many poor devils, against whom the gates of this paradise were not closed. These Weary Willies had come out of the slums, for spring called to them also, and they lay, in lazy happiness and seedy clothes, like corpses on the emerald greensward, which was a carpet worthy of Kings.

A Cool Deadhead.

Mr. Oscar Asche, the London actor, who, with his wife, Miss Lily Brayton, is on his way to Australia—his native land—which he left eighteen years ago, remarked just before he set sail, apropos of the slump in theatres, that the deadhead is a destroyer of drama. "Once give a man a free seat for a play," he said, "and you, will have a difficulty ever after to make him 'pay to go in.' While I was touring with a certain highly respected manager, we were playing at a long-famous old playhouse in an ancient town. We had billed 'Macbeth' for the Friday night, but during that day the theatre was burnt down. For our next week there our chief contrived to borrow a playhouse a little way out of the district. On reaching there to rehearse on the Monday the manager received a letter saying that the writer had been given two dress-circle orders for the performance of 'Macbeth,' but as that play was not performed owing to the destruction of the theatre, the writer surmised that the manager would remit the money value of those orders."

Clever People Who Can't See.

The history of the past assures us that there are few, if any, departments of human knowledge in which the blind have not distinguished theselves, says The War Cry.

Two of the world's greatest poets—Homer and Milton—were sightless; while Dr. Saunderson, once professor of mathematics in the University of Cambridge, lost his eyesight when twelve months old, but, although his parents were poor, he advanced so greatly in knowledge that he became an expert Greek scholar.

Then, John Metcalfe, of Knaresborough, another blind man, became a champion swimmer, a musician, and an engineer, who distinguished himself in building bridges and making roads.

There still exists, we believe, a monument to the memory of Dr. Hugh James, the blind physician of Carlisle; while in Birmingham there is a blind man who cleans and repairs clocks, and has even constructed new ones.

Queen Victoria's Journals.

Lord Escher has been giving some interesting particulars of Queen Victoria's journals. There are said to be over 100 volumes of them, all written closely in a small running hand. The last entry is dictated and was added just ten days before the Queen died. The journals, it is said, will never be seen hereafter in their complete form.

Bernard Shaw's Next Play.

Bernard Shaw has written another play since "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet," says The Nation. It is entitled "Press Cutting, Compiled From the Correspondence and Editorial Columns of the Daily Press," and consists of an ironical discussion of woman's suffrage and universal military service.

England's Oldest Barber Dead.

Allen Batchelor of Guildford, England, who was reputed to be England's oldest barber, died recently at the age of 88. He claimed to have been patronized by kings, dukes, bishops, judges, policemen, politicians, publicans, "and sinners no end."

GOING FOR THE DOCTOR.

And Also the Reason Why He Was After the Medical Man.

"Yes, your honor," said the man who had been arrested for driving his automobile at an illegal rate of speed. "I admit that I was running thirty miles an hour, but I was going for the doctor."

"Oh, you were going for the doctor, eh? Can you offer any proof to substantiate that statement?"

"Yes. I can bring in the doctor himself as a witness, if necessary."

"Um! That ought to make a difference. The law is explicit, but we must grant that there may be extenuating circumstances. There have been times when the court would have been glad to run thirty miles an hour if the court could have done so. Certainly a man should not be held too strictly to the provisions of the law if he happens to violate it for the purpose of trying to save a life. The court is very strongly inclined to dismiss the case. Did you explain to the officer who arrested you that you were going for the doctor?"

"Yes, your honor."

"Officer, what have you to say?"

"Well, your honor, I asked him, when he said he was going for the doctor, what he was going for the doctor for."

"Yes. That was very sensible. What was he going for the doctor for?"

"For to take the doctor and two young ladies for a ride, as I found out unbeknownst to him."

"Thirty dollars and costs."

A COLLECTOR'S RUSE.

The Way He Secured a Rare Piece of Dresden Ware.

We should cultivate our fancy for old china as did the late Mr. Wertheimer, the art dealer, concerning whom there is a story that every bargain hunter should take to heart.

Wertheimer was one day passing through Mayfair when he noticed a sale about to take place of the "furniture and household effects of a deceased nobleman." He walked through the rooms where dealers were critically examining choice specimens of undoubtedly genuine Chippendale and Sheraton, interspersed among early Victorian furniture, his eyes apparently dwelling on nothing. But when the sale was about to commence he asked the auctioneer if he would take £5,000 for everything in the house.

The offer was accepted. "Now you can resell everything for me," said Mr. Wertheimer, "except this," and he took down from the mantelpiece a dirty ornament some nine inches high and put it into his pocket. It was a piece of the rarest Dresden, bearing the coveted mark of the wand of Aesculapius, which he afterward sold for £10,000.

How the dealers metaphorically kicked themselves for overlooking it and how they bid against one another in the chance of securing a similar treasure is still a tradition in Bond street.—London Chronicle.

She Makes a Suggestion.

"How beautiful and clean the horizon looks," said Polly as on the second day out she came up on deck and threw herself down in the steamer chair beside me.

"Well it ought to be," said I, looking up from my book. "The captain has been sweeping it with his glass for the past six hours."

"That reminds me," said Polly, turning two very grave brown eyes upon me. "Did you remember to bring that vacuum cleaner along with you, as I suggested?"

"No," said I unwarily. "I remembered to forget it, however. What on earth does anybody want with a vacuum cleaner at sea?"

"It was only for you, dear," said Polly. "I thought you would like to have your brains massaged with it occasionally."—New York Times.

The Minister's Tools.

No workman can do good work without sufficient tools. Books are the minister's tools. He must have them if he is to serve his people well. Yet many a minister's salary is so small that he is unable to provide the commonest necessities for his family and have enough left to supply himself with needed books. The church that makes it impossible for its pastor to buy books harms itself even more than it harms the minister.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

Etiquette.

In our republican atmosphere old fashioned etiquette has ceased to be necessary, but the word "etiquette" is suggested whenever one hears the phrase "that's the ticket," for "etiquette" is French for "ticket," and its present English signification sprang from the old custom of distributing tickets or etiquettes which contained the ceremonies, etc., to be observed at any formal event, exactly like our word "program."

An Alibi.

"Marriage is a lottery," quoted the wise guy.

"Oh, that's an antiquated idea," observed the simple mug. "Nowadays it's a game of skill."—Philadelphia Record.

Every man ought to be doing something more worthy of himself than just making a living.

It's just this way at an opera. The women go to see what the other women in the audience have on, and men go to see what the women on the stage have left off.

A small boy doesn't have a very good time at a picnic unless he requires the services of a doctor a few hours later.

In a recent divorce case a wife admitted that she thought more of a certain dog than of her husband. Naturally, this made the husband growl, but even this did not win back her affections.

Many a man is perfect,—in his foolishness.

Our hustling real estate man is a man of deeds.

In Toronto the other day, they kicked a man to wake him up. He reminds us of a Hamilton policeman.

One thing that bothers a lot of us is, "Why does neighbor so-and-so have so many friends?"

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

ange-blossoms is! I did not know this was the season for them," said Mrs. Winter. She was vexed with Regy, but did not show it.

"And I saw nothing but fruit as we drove up," said Rhoda. "I cannot yet believe Goethe's assurance that oranges and their blossoms may be seen in the same grove at the same time."

"You will see something more curious if you will come with me for a step, just a little step," said Di Loria.

Rhoda rose instantly.

'You would care for what I have to show and to find explanation for that odor, madame," said Di Loria, turning to Mrs. Winter. "It is not much, only strange to Northern eyes."

Mrs. Winter had reached for her cashmeres, but Regy arrested her.

'Thank you very much, Di Loria, but I must exert my filial authority. My mother is tired; she has been doing too much to-day. I will keep her company, for I don't believe you have anything better to offer than this small section of Paradise.'

'But I want to see it," said Mrs. Winter, looking at her son with resolute mutiny in her glance.

"That will arrange itself," said Di Loria, smiling. "Mrs. Starr shall go with me to assure herself and you that there has been no delusion of any kind, and when we come back you will see."

He spoke with gay unconcern, and threw Rhoda's wrap over his arm as they re-entered the octagon room.

"He is more clever than you are, mother," said Regy, with a little chuckle of satisfaction.

"I don't know that any remarkable degree of cleverness is required when it is a case of three against one," said Mrs. Winter, dryly. Then she colored and spoke with more vehemence. "Regy, you are doing a wicked thing."

"In seeing that you do not make yourself disagreeable? For that is all that your little stratagems would amount to. Do you suppose that you can check the course of true love, or nature, or whatever you are pleased to call it, by your presence on one occasion more or less? What will be will be. And it may as well be sooner as later."

"Do you realize that Mrs. Starr crossed the ocean with the purpose of marrying your cousin;"

"The means has always had a hearty approval which I grieve to find myself unable to extend to the end."

"Very well. The end will be the same. I know Rhoda. She is a fairly conscientious woman. She will do her duty, but it may be a duty thoroughly embittered. And all because of a man who cares nothing for her."

"There are none so blind as those who won't see."

"It is so much the worse if there is anything to see. I thought you had such a liking for this Italian. Why should you wish to make him unhappy?"

"Why should you wish to make two people unhappy for the sake of securing a doubtful blessing to one?"

"I will not talk with you," said Mrs. Winter, her eyes filling with indignant tears. "Eugene Merriam with all his faults is worth a hundred Neapolitan marquises. This man has everything he wants in the world—"

"Except Rhoda."

"He does not want her. And he would not know what to do with her if he had her. It would be most unsuitable in every way. But she is Eugene's one chance of salvation. And he is my dead sister's only child. I have loved him almost like my own. I can see him now as he looked more than twenty years ago, a wild, handsome boy, with the strangest fancies. And Mary was so proud of him."

"Dear mother," said Regy gently, "I understand your feeling. Naturally all your sympathies go out to Eugene. But I beg you to try to judge quite impartially. His relationship to us is entirely aside from the merits of the case. Do you think it exactly fair to use up any woman in saving any man?"

"What better thing could she do?"

"Well, nothing much better—for the man. But has she no right to her own life?"

"Yes, and having a right to it, shall she not bestow it in the best and noblest way?"

"I call it bad economy to expend a nice girl in rescuing a fellow who is not sure he wants to be rescued."

"Eugene will settle down—"

"And how about Rhoda during the settling process? I don't think we shall fancy her looks much at the end of it."

"A man of Eugene's talents is worth some sacrifice. But even if he had not the talent," said this fervent mother of an only son, "oh, my boy, would any brief period of romantic happiness be worth so much to a true woman as the consciousness that she has been the angel to one wandering soul?"

"Well, honestly, mother, I think it would. To a woman of Rhoda's type, mind you. I think you, for instance, don't enjoy personal happiness much, as she said that day on the train; you have the regular old-fashioned genius for self-immolation. You do not really let yourself go and have a good time clear through until you are suffering horribly for some one who is dear to you. Then it's all right; you dare to indulge yourself. But Rhoda—well, she has the same idea of benefitting her kind, and she'll do it faithfully at any cost, but how she will hate it!"

"There they come!" said Mrs. Winter nervously as the sound of laughing voices drew near. Rhoda and Di Loria stepped out upon the the loggia and Mrs. Winter looked at her charge in pained, almost unwilling admiration. It was one of Rhoda's good days. She was brilliantly handsome as she stood there, her head thrown back, the soft breeze sweeping her garments against her noble limbs until the whole beautiful woman's figure was outlined. She wore a gown of the wonderful color called "old rose," and its long, straight folds were rigid with an intricate embroidery of gold thread. The large cloak of deep brown velvet which she had thrown about her was pushed back, and the curves of swelling bust and rounded waist were clear against the seal fur which lined it. The scarf of Flemish lace had fallen from her bright dark hair, and caught in the great bold buckle that fastened the cloak. Through its meshes the gleam of the white neck might be seen and the rosy glow of the huge pink topazes in curiously wrought settings of Etruscan gold that caught the sleeves up from the fair arms to the shoulder. Sumptuous apparel was made for Rhoda and seemed now but the index of a splendid mood which possessed her. The deep eyes glowed with dark fire; her cheeks were aflame with mountain roses; her affluent hair seemed bursting from its heavy coils into a riot of waves through which the white ripple broke like foam. In her delicate, strong hands she held a bough broken from an orange tree, a long, curiously curved branch laden with amber fruit and snowy blossoms suggesting her own ripe youth, at

"PARADISE REGAINED"

THE TREE OF LIFE IN THE PARADISE OF GOD.

Pastor Russell Preaches In Syracuse on the Statement of the Christ to the Thief on the Cross—Elect Will Be the First Fruits and the Restored Humanity Will Constitute the After Fruits.

Syracuse, N.Y., Aug. 22.—Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, preached here twice to-day to large and attentive audiences. One of the discourses was from the text, "Verily I say unto thee to-day, Thou shalt be with me in Paradise" Luke xxiii, 43).

Paradise is another name for the Garden of Eden, the abode of bliss. It was lost through the sin of our first parents; but the gracious promise of our great Creator is that this condition of earthly bliss shall be re-established—not merely in a little corner of the earth, but that the whole earth shall become the Paradise of God. Heaven is God's throne and the earth is his footstool, and he assures us, "I will make the place of my feet glorious"—"in due time." How this will be accomplished is the Gospel message.

The Divine promise to Father Abraham, that all the families of the earth should yet be blessed through his Seed, includes the thought of man's full restoration to Divine favor—as before he sinned and before he fell; before Paradise was lost; before man came under the curse or sentence of death. The Jews hoped that Messiah would come and constitute their nation the earthly Kingdom of God and re-establish Paradise with Palestine as its centre. They expected that under his wise ministration, using their nation as his instruments, the Divine Law would extend to all and, by bringing all people into harmony with God, would gradually bring back all to the Paradise state.

It was in full harmony with this expectation that the dying thief asked the Lord to remember him when he would come into his Kingdom, the Kingdom whose dominion would establish righteousness in the earth, and thus convert the world, under Divine favor, into the Paradise of God. Our Lord's answer was that verily, truly, his request would be granted—the thief would yet be with him in Paradise. Paradise has not yet been established, because God's Kingdom has not yet come to earth and it delays until a certain work for the Church shall be accomplished.

It is not the Divine intention to make of the nation of Israel God's Kingdom in the highest sense of that word, though it will be actively identified with the heavenly Kingdam as its earthly representative. God is selecting during this Gospel Age a new nation, Spiritual Israel, from every nation, people, kindred and tongue. At our Lord's First Advent and subsequently he gathered from Israel such as were saintly and ready for the Kingdom; and since then he has been taking out from other nations enough to complete the foreordained number of the "elect" Church. These will constitute the Kingdom per se, and it cannot be set up or established in power until this election or selection shall have been completed and the "elect" "changed" or glorified on the spiritual plane by the power of the First Resurrection.

Paradise, or the Garden of the Lord, not only represents that earthly condition which will be restored for the benefit and blessing of the natural man, as the reward of his obedience to the rules of Emmanuel's Kingdom during the Millennial Age, but it also applies in a figurative sense to the glorious and heavenly position which God has in reservation for the Church. Thus we read in the Book of Revelation that the Lord has promised to the overcomers of the Church that "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God" (Revelation ii, 7).

This is a grandly beautiful and symbolic message and promise assuring us of the happiness and heavenly bliss in eternal life conditions of all who are faithful followers of Christ in the present age—walking in Jesus' footsteps in the "narrow way." The Book of Revelation pictures the history of this Gospel Age down into the Millennial Age and shows us Paradise re-established with the Heavenly City, the glorified Church, as its centre or capital. The River of Life is pictured as flowing from under the Throne. On either bank of its crystal waters of Truth and grace grow the trees of Life, after the manner of Eden of old. The future state will all be Paradise. The completeness of blessedness will first be manifested in the Church on the spiritual plane, and, secondly, it will be manifested in the Ancient Worthies on the earthly plane—perfected Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the holy prophets, the earthly representatives of the heavenly Kingdom. Gradually the paradisaical condition shall fill the whole earth. The wilderness shall blossom as the rose and the solitary places shall be glad and streams shall break forth in the deserts, as we read in Isaiah xxxv. The morally lame shall learn to walk in the paths of righteousness. Yea, they shall leap for joy, as they come to a knowledge of the grace and goodness of God. The world's eyes of understanding shall be opened and their deaf ears shall be unstopped, that they may hear and see the goodness and mercy, the justice and the love of our God. The willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land, but the evil doers shall be cut off in the Second Death. Gradually the boundaries will be spread abroad until, in the end of the Millennium, they shall include the whole earth. Gradually the numbers enjoying Paradise shall increase until, in the end of the Millennium, the entire race of Adam shall experience this blessed privilege of God's love and mercy through Christ.

St. Paul, like John the Revelator, was caught also to Paradise in vision and saw the glorious things of the future age, which he was not permitted to explain to us, because the due time had not yet come. Neither was John the Revelator permitted to reveal fully the particulars of the Paradise condition. He could merely give us a few symbolical hints or suggestions respecting the glories of Paradise restored.

We have already noticed that Paradise was lost by sin through disobedience of the heavenly command. Life and Eden bliss and Divine favor and fellowship were all lost to Adam and to us, his children, under the death sentence. There was no hope for any of us any more than for the brute beast, for while the latter was born to die, man, created with possibilities of life eternal, was sentenced to the loss of all. Indeed, under the demoralizing influences of sin and death we find many of the human family really more degraded than the brute creation and apparently less worthy of Divine favor. But God, rich in mercy, in the great love wherewith he loves us, provided for mankind a recovery from the sentence of sin and death, while he has made no provision for future life for the brute creation.

God's provision for man's recovery from the sentence of death is the story of the "Cross of Christ." Because a man had sinned the redeemer must be a man. Because the penalty was human death, the perfect man must die for the sinner's release from death sentence—to uplift the willing out of sin and death conditions up, up, up to fellowship with God and eternal life. Because the race of Adam inherited naturally his mental, moral and physical defects, therefore none of his posterity was worthy of eternal life. But, in the Divine arrangement, as Adam had involved all of his children and their Paradise home in the wreck of sin and death, so a redemption has been effected through Christ.

The great Work of Messiah will therefore be the restoration of the world to all that was lost in Eden and redeemed at Calvary. The work of restoration, St. Peter tells us, has been spoken of by the "mouth of all God's holy prophets since the world began" and will be accomplished by Messiah at his Second Coming (Acts iii, 21). But the Divine Plan changes not. Sin is still objectionable to God, will always be so. And the Divine sentence is that no sinner may have eternal life; hence the offer of Divine Grace is merely that all who will may have Divine assistance, resurrection, restoration, uplifting out of sin and death conditions to perfect conditions. But these things will be accomplished only in those who are willing and obedient. Only such shall eat the good of the land—the fruits of Paradise (Acts iii, 23).

Furthermore it is the Divine arrangement, and a just one, that any good and noble deed of the present life works a measure of character development which will be assistful in the future life, enabling the faithful the sooner to mount up in the full perfection of earthly life. Correspondingly every wilful sin, every violation of conscience and principle, works a defilement and impairment of manhood, which, likewise, will have its effect in the future life in the difficulty of rising out of degradation to the heights of Divine perfection and approved and everlasting life. If all mankind could appreciate these facts what an influence it would have in restraining, governing and developing self control and true manhood!

Does some one inquire as to why he who redeemed Adam, his Eden home, and all his race, and who proposes a restoration of all—why he has not begun this restitution work during the eighteen hundred years since the sacrifice of himself? The Scriptures answer that another feature of the Divine program is being carried out. The Lord is gathering the "elect" Church from Israel and all the nations to be Messiah's assistants in his Kingdom and the gracious work of uplift—resurrection—restitution. This "elect" Church class first selected is in the Scriptures called "A first-fruits of God unto his creatures" (James i, 18). The world of restored humanity will be the after-fruits.

The Scriptures exhort such as in the present time are blessed with the hearing ear to give heed to the special invitation of the elect. They exhort such as have the eye of faith to aspire to the crown of glory and joint-heirship that is now being tendered to a very select class. He that hath an ear let him hear. He that hath an eye let him see. So many of us as have been blessed of the Lord with the ear of faith, the eye of faith, let us rejoice therein with the blessed opportunity. Let us seek indeed to make our calling and election sure to this heavenly estate of glory, honor and immortality and joint-heirship with our Lord, the King of kings and Lord of lords!

Both the thieves crucified with our Lord lost their right to the original Eden or Paradise of God through father Adam's disobedience, as did we all. Both of those thieves were "born in sin and shapen in iniquity, in sin did their mothers conceive them," as with us all. Both of those thieves were redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, as were we all; for "Christ Jesus, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man." "He is the propitiation for our sins (the Church's sins), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." Thus, as we have seen, the Redeemer has made provision for both of those thieves, as well as for all of us—all of Adam's race—to be recovered from the sin and death conditions of the fall and to be restored to Paradise. The Church now called during this Gospel Age may reach the spiritual Paradise or highest condition of holiness and happiness. The two thieves and the remainder of mankind will have their opportunity during the Millennium. Their opportunity will be for a return to earthly life and perfection and happiness and an earthly Eden—world wide. How much grander a work will thus result from our Lord's death than we had previously supposed!

Let none suppose, however, that those two thieves will enter Paradise on the same footing. While both were guilty of robbery, they evidently were dissimilar in the condition of their hearts. The one was hardened, as evidenced by the fact that he could speak thus rudely to the Redeemer, whose face bespoke gentleness, purity and innocence of crime. Such cruelty implied a deep degradation of mind—implied that he was sin-hardened. And yet we must remember that others of the multitude standing by used similarly cruel language. And we must remember that there are many thieves who are not caught and many, perhaps, as morally wrong, as evilly intentioned, who, for fear of the consequences, never committed the wrongs. We can even suppose that some of the scribes and Pharisees and Doctors of Divinity of those days were in God's sight much worse than the impenitent thief—murderers at heart and in deed. Yet of the latter St. Peter declares, "I wot, brethren, that in ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers," when you crucified the Lord of glory.

Ignorance and superstition and inherited depravity all bore down upon the impenitent thief to a degree which we are not capable of properly estimating. The Lord will judge him—both thieves—all mankind. The penitent thief will unquestionably have a two-fold blessing. First he will be blessed because of his penitent attitude of mind; secondly, because of his faithfulness in expressing that penitence and mercy to our Lord in his distress. Our Lord declared that even a cup of cold water given to the least of his disciples will have its reward. Surely it will be in harmony, then, that the penitent thief will have a reward for his defence of the Master.

That reward will consist, first of all, in the blessing to his own heart through the action therein of the merciful sentiment. A reward will come to him in proportion to the exigencies of the occasion and the greatness of the One whom he loved. If the one who favors a righteous man will receive a righteous man's reward and the one who favors a prophet will receive a prophet's reward, surely the one who favored the Redeemer would receive a special reward, such as the Redeemer might be expected to grant.

The penitent thief manifested not only sympathy but honesty and it is entirely in keeping with the general teachings of our Lord's Word that the honest-hearted and the merciful have special blessings. Those blessings cannot reach them in the grave and it is not always that they reach them in the present life. Virtue is not always its own reward. Our Lord declares the Truth on the subject, assuring us that such shall be "recompensed in the resurrection of the just." That is to say, when the just, the justified, the Church, shall be resurrected in the First Resurrection and when then the heavenly Kingdom shall be established amongst men and the general awakening of the world from the sleep of death shall gradually follow—then every good and every evil word, every good and every evil act, will be recompensed—in Paradise. Let us be glad and rejoice that the Divine arrangement is an earthly Paradise, possible to every member of the race, and a heavenly Paradise, possible to every member of the spirit-begotten Church, and that the alternative of Paradise is not eternal torment but everlasting destruction—the Second Death.

Birthday Knight Criticized.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree tells a funny story of a day when he was "off his form" at golf. His first drive was a miserable foozle, and the actor as men do in such circumstances, turned to see how his caddie took it. "Did you ever see a worse drive than that?" he asked, but the boy remained silent. Sir Herbert's next stroke was no improvement on the drive, and again he appealed to his henchman with the clubs. "Did you ever see a worse player?" The boy was still silent, at which the actor's irritation increased. "Do you hear me?" he shouted. "Aye, I hear ye," came the gentle reply, "but I'm juist thinkin'."

Just Waiting.

An old gentleman, rather portly and clad in a somewhat youthful suit of light gray flannel, sat on a bench in the park.

"What's the matter, sonny?" he asked a small urchin who lay on the grass just across the walk and stared intently. "Why don't you go and play?"

"Don't wanter," the boy replied.

"But it is not natural," the old gentleman insisted, "for a boy to be so quiet. Why don't you run about?"

"Oh, I'm just waitin'," the little fellow answered—"I'm just waitin' till you get up. A man painted that bench about fifteen minutes ago."

A Serious Duke.

The seventh Duke of Northumberland, who is now sixty-three, displays not the least interest in sport, but is very studiously inclined, and quite at his happiest when engaged in literary or archaeological research. He is one of the trustees of the British Museum, and belongs to the Irvingite Church. As a man of business he is remarkably keen, and manages his vast estates, and particularly the ducal property round Alnwick Castle, with great astuteness.

Railway Towns Records.

A novel undertaking, whereby a record of the growth of the Canadian West may be kept, has been started by the Grand Trunk Pacific. Towns along the line will be photographed, and a duplicate taken yearly, so that a continuous record may be obtained and kept of each individual town from the time of its establishment. The record obtained in this way is expected to prove of much interest and importance in the future.

Descendant of Burns.

Mrs. Sarah Eliza Maitland Tombs Burns Hutchinson, the eldest direct descendant of Robert Burns, has just died at Cheltenham, aged 87. Mrs. Hutchinson was born in Bengal, but was reared at Dumfries by her grandmother, the poet's widow. During this time she sat for the famous picture known as "Bonny Jean and her granddaughter." Mrs. Hutchinson's family are the only lineal descendants of the poet.

In Madagascar, where kite-flying is a national sport, it is unlawful for anyone to fly a kite as high as those of the royal family ascend.

Expectations More Than Fulfilled.

Lucille, a carefully brought up little girl of five years, returned from her first party in glee. "I was a good girl, mamma," she announced, "and talked nice all the time."

"Did you remember to say something pleasant to Mrs. Appleby just before leaving?" her mother asked.

"Oh, yes, I did," was the enthusiastic reply. "I smiled and said, 'I enjoyed myself very much, Mrs. Applegate. I had lots more to eat than I 'spected.'"—Woman's Home Companion.

"Oh, no!" she responded sweetly. "I shall depend upon your letters from home."—London Tatler.

From Game to Game.

He was afraid to tell her right out and out that he loved her, so he began in a roundabout way, hoping she would catch his drift, then betray, by her confusion, her own feelings. He didn't dream but that she loved him, but thought that she, like himself, was afraid to demonstrate it.

"Heart trouble," she repeated. "Are you sure you've heart trouble, Alfred? You know indigestion is very like it at times."

"Oh, I know I've got heart trouble, all right. I—can't you see it yourself?"

"Why, how silly, Alfred! No one can see heart trouble. They have to feel it. Have you taken anything for it?"

"No, not yet. But I—I want to, don't you know."

"Then why don't you?"

"I—I would—that is, if I could get it."

"Can't you get it, Alfred?"

"I—I don't know."

"Have you tried?"

"No, not yet."

(Silence for two provoking moments.)

"Alfred!" (coldly).

"Y-yes."

Walking.

The ordinary man who is employed indoors throughout the day does not walk enough. He needs the fresh air and sunshine of the outdoors, and, no matter how tired he may be, a short time in the open air will rest him. If he has no opportunity to walk during the evening, he ought to do it in the morning. There is no better tonic than a two mile walk before going to work. Some business men who live some distance from their offices or stores walk down regularly every morning and are greatly benefited thereby. No matter how sluggish they may feel on arising, the morning walk puts them in good trim for the day's work. Exercise in the open air starts the blood to circulating in every artery and vein in the entire system, opens up the pores of the skin, so that the waste matter in the body may be set free, limbers up the joints and muscles and puts one in shape for the duties of the day.—St. Joseph Gazette.

The Meredith Cocoanut.

George Meredith may not have been an altogether familiar author to the ordinary reader who craves for quick sensation. He never came down to the simplicity of Sherlock Holmes or Captain Kettle. Meredith required an acute and trained intellect before he could be appreciated.

It was once mentioned, in referring to the difficulty which some people experience in reading Meredith's novels, that the Meredith "cocoanut" was very hard, but that the milk when reached proved to be very sweet. This joke got into the papers.

Two days afterward a well known firm of fruiterers had an inquiry after these cocoanuts from a country customer! The letter was to the effect that, having read somewhere that Meredith's cocoanuts have had a large sale lately and that the milk was fashionable, the writer would like to have a few to try.—London Tatler.

Queer Postal Training.

In China whoever wishes to enter the postal service must give evidence of courage, robustness, power of endurance, ability to traverse great distances over mountains and valleys and through dangerous forests frequented by wild beasts and robbers. After this the applicant is sent into uncanny places, which are considered to be the abodes of evil spirits. When the Chinaman has satisfied the authorities in regard to these matters he is appointed a letter carrier.

A Matter of Mind.

"I have a great mind to go to the club tonight," said Mr. J. to his wife.

"What?" she replied with surprise.

"I have a great mind to go to the club tonight."

"Whose?" she asked.

"Whose what?"

"Whose great mind?"

"Why, my own, of course, madam."

"Oh!" and the rising inflection she gave the ejaculation was very provoking to a man of fine feeling.

Taxless Towns.

No fewer than 1,500 towns and villages in Germany still own, and have owned, down from the middle ages, so much common land that their inhabitants pay neither rates nor taxes. Five hundred of these townships and villages derive so great a rental from their lands that they are able, in addition, to pay every citizen on New Year's day, a bonus of from $25 to $100 as his share of the surplus revenue.

Three Melons Sold For Eight Dollars.

What they pay for musk melons in Pittsburg is a shame.

White & Co., of Toronto, have just sold two lots of Montreal melons to a firm in Pittsburg for a fabulous price. The first lot of six melons brought $10, the second lot of 3 were sold for $8. By the time that duty and express charges are paid the price for the nine will reach about $25. Add to this a profit for the retail merchant in Pittsburg, and one can imagine some rich American digging deep into his pocket and handing over something like $4 or $5 for a single musk melon.

The reason for this extraordinary price is not to be found in the size of the melons, but in the superfine quality.

Every year," said a member of the firm of White & Co., "we have a few such sales. The high price is accounted for by the large amount of money that is spent in raising this particular kind of melon. I don't know of any fruit that is cared for so scientifically as these Montreal melons. They are the finest in the world. There is no place else where they can grow them like the Island of Montreal. Most of them are sent to the United States because it is easier to get the price for them here."

ANGLO-INDIAN SOCIETY.

Salary Decides a Briton's Standing In the Orient.

Anglo-Indian society is strictly official. The male exile's status depends upon the number of rupees he draws each month from the Government. An "Assistant District Superintendent of Police" may be the younger son of a baronet, with on ancestry going back to the Conquest. But he must take in to dinner the Eurasian wife of the "Opium Wallah" — a "Government servant," who is paid a salary of similar dimensions. The "Collector," who gets the equivalent of a thousand pounds a year, is paired off with the sister of the officer commanding the local regiment. In all probability, the lady has a supreme contempt for the "civilian's" social standing, although her unpretentious parents may have kept a Bayswater boarding-house. In the large "stations," railway employes, tea and indigo planters, barristers and business men have a bowing acquaintance with the officers of the British infantry regiments, and they are welcomed in native infantry messes. British cavalry officers and their wives, however, seldom tolerate them, though impecunious subalterns (with an eye to the main chance) make a point of cultivating bank managers. Occasionally, the officers of one corps do not encourage friendly relations with those of another, the womenkind of these warriors being only too ready to obey the mandate. Under these circumstances, jovial Anglo-Indians who are anxious to make friends of everybody—from the "Commissioner" down to the "Acting Additional Traffic Manager," who occupies a lowly position in the railway office—loathe (with exceeding hate) Rawalpindi, Secunderabad, Bangalore, Lucknow, Meerut, and other large military "stations" where cliques abound.

The "Mem-Sahib" is not over-burdened with household duties. For many months in the year, the appalling heat (which reduces the liveliest lady to the verge of apathy, dispels any good intentions she may have formed. Besides, it is not customary for the mistress of the house to pry too closely into the uncleanly mysteries with which the native servants surround themselves. Even the strongest-minded "Mem" is staggered by the sights which await her in the "bowarchi whanah," as the kitchen is known. Nor is she encouraged to take an interest in her servants and their children. Should she condescendingly pat little Ahmed's fat cheeks, little Ahmed's papa will straightway accuse her of regarding his offspring with the "evil eye."

Bronze Statuettes.

An interesting exhibition of bronze statuettes by Anthony Van Wouw was inaugurated recently at the Fine Arts Society's galleries by Sir Richard Solomon, who deputed to Dr. Engelenburg, one of the South African delegates at the Imperial Press Conference, the task of introducing the personality of the Boer sculptor.

Anthony Van Wouw's nationality is betrayed by his subjects rather than by his style, which is the result of sound training in the European art centres. He has chosen his models from among his own people and the indigenous black races, whose varied types he renders with considerable realistic force. Nor is this realism confined to the faithful reproduction of racial characteristics; in several cases, as in the statuette of a "Kaffir Eating Meealies" and the pathetic group "Bad News," he endeavors, with marked success, to convey a suggestion of the arid, stony veldt. There is something of monumental dignity in his little seated figure of "Paul Kruger in Exile." Of peculiar interest are the two figures of "Voortrekkers," designed for the corners of the Kruger monument, which was commissioned from the artist before the outbreak of the war.

AMONG THE CANNIBALS.

British Force Goes Into Wilds of Northern-Nigeria.

Details of the expedition lately concluded by the southern Nigerian Government, by which some 5,000 square miles of hitherto unknown and unadministered country in the north and on the borders of Northern Nigeria have been brought under effective control, have been received by Reuter's Agency.

These operations, which were carried out among tribes who for the most part had never previously seen a white man, proved entirely successful, and were so managed that there was practically no serious fighting. They began early in November last, and only concluded in the middle of April.

The British force consisted of 700 men of the southern Nigeria Regiment, under the command of Colonel Trenchard, who had with him thirty officers, six Maxims and 700 carriers.

The Yala people, in whose country the columns remained for a month, gave a good deal of trouble. When their villages were entered they were found to be deserted, the women and live stock having been removed. The men meanwhile had formed bush camps in the open yam fields, where they could see the approach of the British, and had also hidden in the branches of trees scouts, whose duty it was to fire signal guns.

The people then took to their heels and encamped elsewhere, but fired on the column when they were in what they regarded as a tight corner. This tribe, like most of those encountered, was armed with flint locks and carried poisoned arrows, but, fortunately, the country was fairly open and the aim not very accurate.

After some weeks of this kind of thing the Yala came in, but declined to give up their arms.

In places the natives, hearing of the approach of a large force, dug pits and planted stakes to prevent their progress. What little hostility there was occurred during the earlier part of the operations in the Okpoto country and among the northern Ibo tribes.

Colonel Trenchard's force started in two columns—one from the Niger and one from the Cross River—with instructions to make for an unknown spot marked X, the two afterward joining at Ikem, where the first base camp was formed. From this base small columns were sent out in various directions, each being responsible for a definite district, which was to be mapped, and where the officers' duty was to get into touch with the natives and to show them how to make good roads.

In each case the commanding officer of the column summoned the local chief and explained the Government terms, emphasizing the fact that all human sacrifices must stop, that good roads must be made, and that a British commissioner would be appointed, who would settle all disputes.

On these occasions there were impressive gatherings of thousands of natives, in many cases cannibals, and for the most part naked, or practically so. They did not show undue delight at the advent of the British, and, as a rule, silently listened to the recital of the Government terms, and then slowly dispersed.

The various columns report that they found far less human sacrifice and juju rites in the hitherto unknown north than among the tribes of the delta, and, on the whole, the people were of a better physical type. Several juju places were seen, and a big centre was destroyed. It was impossible to discover the nature of the juju rites practiced, but in the vicinity of one big juju house discovered in a bush clearing there was found a good deal of blood—whether human or not was not ascertained.

Australian Woman Becomes Hindu.

A remarkable ceremony took place at Lucknow, India, when Miss Thomson, a pretty young Australian woman, who is to be married to a Bengali barrister, formally renounced Christianity and embraced Hinduism as practiced by the Ayra Samajists.

The ceremony took place in the courtyard of the rajah of Vizianagram's residence, and was watched by a large crowd of natives.

Miss Thomson wore native costume, with a pale blue "sari," bespangled with gold, and heavy gold bangles on her arms. At the conclusion of the ceremony, which lasted more than an hour, she almost fainted.

The convert's reception by the Ayra Samajists was the customary "purification" by fire and water. Miss Thomson answered the questions of the Hindu priest in a low voice, ceremonially washed her hands and head and poured a spoonful of oil on a sandal-wood fire. She then received a Hindu name.

Too Many Novels.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward, in an address read for her at the opening of a free library at Kendal, said that people who read nothing else but novels never properly appreciated them. Novels were the jam of literature, and all properly conducted persons should begin their meal with bread and butter. Writers of novels wanted readers to be a little hungry for them—not to bring to them a mind full of the debris of a thousand plots—and be proof against their little arts. In the interests of her own craft, she urged all who might use the new library to venture out on the broad seas of literature, to be hardy and courageous, full of curiosity and sympathy, and ready to take trouble with a tough subject and a long book.

The Lost Repeater.

When monsieur—the first monsieur at the court of Louis XIV.—discovered at his levee that his watch had been stolen, presumably by one of his valets, he finished dressing hastily and, addressing them all, said: "Gentlemen, the watch strikes. Let us separate as quickly as we can." What a tact and finish were here!

The spirit of monsieur was admirably caught by the French gentleman of the time who, attacked by robbers at five o'clock in the afternoon, simply observed, "Sirs, you have opened very early to-day."—Cornhill Magazine.

ARMY CORPS CALLED OUT.

Utmost Efficiency Shown In Recent Mobilization.

A British army corps was called out for war the other day, and afforded a fine object-lesson of how quickly and effectively British troops can be organized nowadays.

Never before in the history of the British army has so unexpected, and yet so complete, a mobilization been carried out. Nearly twenty thousand men of all arms were lined up ready to entrain, and it was only by the absence of a call to the Reservists that the feat differed from what the authorities hope to effect in case of an actual or threatened invasion.

No warning of what was coming was given. At six o'clock in the morning Lieut.-Gen. Smith-Dorrien rode down to the headquarters' office and gave the order for the alarm to be sounded, followed by the order for every unit in his command to turn out as rapidly as possible, fully mobilized, and ready for active service.

The military telephones linking up the barracks were soon busy with the order, and mounted orderlies carried the summons to those officers who live out of barracks.

Some of the battalions were already in the field; the Gloucesters, for instance, having left barracks at four o'clock for a long day's operations. They were summoned back by mounted men and cyclist messengers, and within the hour every barracks was the centre of activity.

Wagons were dragged out and loaded with stores, water-carts filled, ammunition drawn from the magazines and distributed, and field dressings and emergency rations issued to the men with their metal identity discs and pocket ledgers.

For some time past the chiefs of staff have been working at this mobilization scheme to render it perfect for a sudden call, and the test that was being applied could only be equalled by the actual call of war. Indeed, among many of the troops the belief was accepted that an invasion was an accomplished fact.

The telegraph wires had carried the news to those officers and men away on week-end leave, and the early trains to Aldershot were filled with anxious soldiers, who on reaching the stations raced up to their barracks, to appear in a short space of time accountred and equipped for service.

Six hours was the time given for the units to get on parade, ready to move off, but so perfect was the machinery that in the great majority of cases little more than half that time was needed to report all ready.

From the Army Service Corps barracks parties of butchers and bakers, clerks, saddlers, and artificers marched off to join the brigade and divisional headquarters, every man having his allotted place and his special duties.

No confusion marked the preparations, and long before the allotted time was up nearly 20,000 men, artillery, cavalry, and infantry, with engineers and supply transport services, were marching out of barracks to go wherever needed.

To Punish the Mullah.

Col. Gough, says a report from Aden, according to present arrangements, will begin military operations this month against the Somaliland mullah, who has continued to harass the friendly tribes.

It is understood that the operations will take the form of flying columns, composed of mounted infantry and irregulars, which will endeavor to round up the elusive enemy.

Practically everything is now ready, and ample native troops on the spot are being supplied with white officers.

The chief difficulty is, as it has always been, transport. British agents have been buying animals all along the Red Sea, but prices have been high, particularly for camels. The Emperor Menelik has, moreover, forbidden the export of these animals from his territory.

It is thought that Sir Reginald Wingate, who has arrived in the country from Cairo, will, from his experience of Soudan "drives," be able to give Col. Gough some useful advice.

Berbera is the base of the new operations, which will cover a wide area. The British Government has for some time been collecting information as to the situation, particularly along the northwestern Somaliland border, and the authorities are very hopeful of success.

St. Fillan's Bell.

Early in the nineteenth century a bell was stolen from Killin, in Perthshire. This bell, which was said to have been used by St. Fillan, was supposed to possess marvelous healing powers, and was placed on the heads of all the mad people, who were brought to be dipped in the saint's pool, in order to complete the cure.

Popular opinion had it that the bell, which was not very large, would extricate itself from the hands of any one who stole it and return home, ringing all the way. The antiquary who finally annexed it explained his action by a desire "to abate superstition."

A Mild Reproach.

One cold morning little Elsie was being bathed by her mother, and usually her bath was a great delight to her. But this morning her mother talked incessantly while she worked.

Elsie loved her dearly and tried hard to be patient. But the lecture was so tiresome! Her mother was laying out a course of conduct for the day, and it was all so old. She had heard it over and over again.

Finally she said very sweetly, but very wearily: "Please, mamma, don't talk any more. You do make such a draft!"

Jerry Needn't Bother.

It was the beloved and lamented Monsignor Connolly, of the Church of St. John the Baptist, at St. John, N.B., who noticed an old parishioner stealing a glance at his watch as the text was read out one fine summer morning.

"It's just twenty minutes past eleven, Jerry Callahan, and at a quarter to twelve I'll be through, so you can save yourself the trouble of taking your watch out of your pocket," said his reverence, and proceeded with the sermon.

Mr. Flint Makes Very Warm Reply.

HAS A FEW THINGS TO SAY TO "HONESTY," WHO WROTE ON SATURDAY.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

My Dear Sir,—I think it was Lord Brougham who said that "the man who, under a false name, planted an envenomed dagger in the back of a citizen, and then slunk away into the darkness, not daring to avow that it was his hand which guided the weapon, belonged to the race of Moral Thugs and Assassins." The only reason that a man has for not signing his name to a scurrilous letter must be that he is a dastard and a coward, and has not the courage to come out into the open, but cowers behind a wall, over which he slings his mud. I respect a man who makes an attack, no matter how aggressive, if he has the courage of his convictions, and backs up his statements with his name. A letter signed 'Honesty" appeared in your columns, and I feel I must depart from my usual custom with regard to anonymous communications, namely by treating them with the contempt they deserve. As Harry Lauder says in McNab's wedding, "I know the man." His fine Italian hand is traceable in every line. Now let me relate the facts. 'Many years ago, people were allowed to drain into the Dundas sewer, or drain, which has long existed. Some time ago, a City Council made some kind of a law stating that citizens should not drain into a public drain, unless they signed a written agreement prepared by the Council. This agreement is, in my opinion, illegal, tyrannical and oppressive. It binds the party signing it to support any sewer system which the City proposes to have adopted for Dundas street, and binds him that he will not sign any petition opposing the construction of a sewer on said street, but will, if requested, sign a petition or request for the construction of a sewer on said street. Now, sir, you, and through you, the citizens of Belleville, if it is possible to conceive of a more outrageous and arbitrary act, than for the City to compel a man, whose views may be entirely antagonistic to the sewer, who does not approve of it, for the City to say to that man, you cannot use this public drain without you agree to sign any petition for a sewer that you may be requested to sign not to oppose any sewerage system to be put down on that street. In other words, you, my good man, cannot drain your sink or your cellar at all unless you sign this agreement. The City does not care what your views may be, its hand is on your throat, sign this agreement, or we will ruin your property by refusing to let you drain it. This year I built a house on Dundas treet, costing about $1,300. I equipped it with modern conveniences, sink, bath, etc., put down my pipes at very considerable expense, to the street. I told my men to connect with the sewer, and they told me that the authorities had stopped their work until this agreement was signed. I had to sign the agreement or have my property destroyed. When the Council published their notice providing for construction of a sewer on Dundas street, I was in favor of its construction. In conversation with Mr. Henry Carre, uor veteran civil engineer (whose knowledge of our City is profund), I was told that the people livng on the east side of Charles street were to be taxed for this Dundas sewer. I examined the notice which distinctly stated that the land lying east of Charles street was to be taxed. I construed this notice as did Mr. Carre. I saw that this course would be most unjust, because Charles street was already taxed for a sewer and that no lateral sewer could possibly run to Dundas street, and therefore Charles street could not derive any benefit from this sewer. I wrote through your columns a letter in which I staed that I was in favor of the Dundas street sewer, and that I would cheerfully pay a frontage tax on my property in order to get that sewer; but I could not submit to have a rank injustice committed upon myself and my Charles street fronts, and therefore signed a petition against the scheme. Later on, I received a letter from Mr. Mikel, stating that the east side of Charles street was not to be taxed, and I immediately wrote upon the bottom of Mr. Mikel's letter, and mailed it, a statement that, having received his explanation, I withdrew my opposition and would cordially support the scheme for the sewer. Now sir, I ask every intelligent reader of your paper, if it is not a shame for a man to write a letter and so color it as to endeavor to make the public believe I had committed a dishonorable act. Instead of "Honesty," he should have signed himself "Dishonesty." With more than nine-tenths of the citizens of Belleville supporting my views upon the school and West Belleville sewer question, I can afford to laugh at the chagrin and piteous writing of these disappointed anonymous scribblers. Sir, if any more anonymous writers wish to attack me, they are welcome, because, although they were to accuse me of as many sins as Barrabas was guilty of, they will remain immune from any reply from me.

I am yours, etc.,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.

Monday Morning In Police Court

MAGISTRATE MASSON DEALS OUT EVEN-HANDED JUSTICE TO SEVERAL OFFENDERS.

The police court room was well filled this morning, when Magistrate Masson held his blue Monday reception.

MUST STOP RIDING ON SIDEWALK.

John Smith, a lad, was charged with riding a bicycle on the sidewalk. He did not deny it.

"I'll fine you a dollar," said the Magistrate, "and understand now, if you or any of the other young fellows ride on the walks it will cost them $5 or $10, and perhaps they'll go up on the hill. I'm determined to stop the practise. The walks are for pedestrians, and public safety must not be endangered by bicycle riders who tear along on the walks."

A PAIR OF DRUNKS.

Ernest Root had been worshipping at the shrine of Baccnus, and looked it. He did not deny the charge of drunkenness.

"Didn't you promise me," said the Cadi, with withering scorn, that if I gave you a chance you'd quit drinking?"

"Yes, sir," said the prisoner, "I forgot after I took the first drink."

"You shouldn't take the first drink," said the Magistrate, "when you can't control yourself. I'll remand you for a week."

James Little was also charged with looking on the wine when it was red.

"Up again, eh?" said the Cadi. "Whaat do you mean by spending all your money on drink? Have you a family?"

"Yes, sir," said the prisoner, "they're mine over there," and he pointed across the court room to a comely woman and little child.

"Why don't you give your wife your money, instead of drinking it, then?" said the Magistrate, severely.

"I gave her $15 on Saturday night," said the prisoner. The wife corroborated this. Her husband was not the only one who got drunk, she said.

"Well," said the Magistrate, "I'm tired of giving you chances. I'll fine you $5, to be paid forthwith, or 10 days in jail."

Was Local Option Beer Over Strenght?

JOHN RYAN, OF FRANKFORD, CHARGED WITH SMASHING THE LICENSE LAWS—CASE ON TRIAL HERE TO-DAY.

John Ryan, of Frankford, now a local option village, was charged by License Inspector Walker with breaking the License Laws in selling intoxicating liquor in the village. Some evidence was taken. In his evidence, Mr. Ryan testified that if intoxicating drink was sold in his house he did not know of it.

The action seems to hinge on the question of the alcoholic strength of so-called local option beer.

The case was laid over till to-morrow.

GETTING YOUR CHILDREN READY FOR SCHOOL—DO NOT OVERLOOK THEIR EYES.

Perfect and easy vision is necessary to stand the strain imposed upon them by their many school duties. Eye Strain uses up an excessive amount of nervous energy and causes the child to become tired and disinterested in its work. Properly Fitted Glasses have released many children from the bondage of eye-strain and made them happy and energetic scholars. Do not ignore frequent complaints of headache, tired or aching eyes, but let us make a careful and scientific examination, and if necessary supply the Proper Glasses. There is no truth in the frequent statement, "I do not like putting glasses on children, because they may always have to wear them." The reverse is the truth, by putting the Correct Glasses on the child during the growing time in many cases they outgrow the error entirely and are able later to go without glasses, whereas if neglected too long they will always have to wear them without getting as satisfactory results even by wearing the glasses. Charges moderate. Consultation free.

WONDERS OF THE HUMAN BODY

Why Many People Never Need a Doctor.

You have a natural laxative in your body. Why, then, should you use a false purgative to move the bowels?

Bile is nature's laxative. It is bile—and bile alone—which moves the bowels as they should be moved. The liver is the store-house for the bile. The liver pours forth the bile into the bowels, which stimulates them to move, and thus causes the waste matter to pass from the body.

Constipation is a disease, OF the bowels, but CAUSED by the liver. When the bowels do not move regularly and naturally, it is because the liver is not giving up enough bile. And the only possible way to cure Constipation, is to cure the liver.

Calomel, cascara, salts, senna, common pills and sweet lozengers and all the other purgatives do not act on the liver at all. They merely irritate and inflame the bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives" cure Constipation because they act on the liver. The fruit principles stimulate the liver to secrete and give up enough bile to move the bowels, while the tonics and antiseptics tone up and invigorate the muscles. "Fruit-a-tives" are the only medicine ever discovered that will cure Constipation, Biliousness and all other troubles due to a Torpid or Disordered Liver. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

ORILLIA HAS BIG FIRE

Destruction by Blaze Will Reach Half a Million.

Tudhope Carriage Works Is Burned Out, Thompson's Bakery, Walker's Foundry, and Ten Residences Are Destroyed — Glencoe Is Badly Scorched and a Big Fire Is Reported From Monterey, Mexico.

Orillia, Aug. 23.—Half a million dollars went up in smoke Saturday afternoon in a fire which started at 2.15 o'clock in the paint shop of the Tudhope Carriage Co., and destroyed the entire plant, as well as about a dozen other buildings. The insurance is roughly placed at about $250,000.

The blaze inaugurated in the paint shop of the big Tudhope works. Although the plant closes at noon Saturdays, three or four men were still at work in this section of the plant when a sudden cloud of dense smoke enveloped them, and they had to hurry for the stairs. By the time the alarm was given, this building was thoroughly on fire, and despite the efforts of the fire brigade of 16 men, with scores of volunteer workers, it ate its way through the works and spread to surrounding property.

D. C. Thompson & Co.'s bakery, Walker Bros.'s foundry and ten residences were also burned. Most of the contents of the latter were removed in time. J. R. Eaton & Son's planing mill was saved, after heroic efforts on the part of the employes.

Luckily there was little or no wind or the whole town might have been devastated. Barrie sent a fire engine and men by special train, and Midland was in readiness to send a detachment. The local water pressure, which is from the waterworks, was excellent. Firemen were on duty all night, and even to-day the ruins were smouldering. The cause of the fire is still a mystery.

The Tudhope Co. estimate their loss at from $400,000 to $450,000, with insurance about one-half, distributed among thirty insurance companies, in amounts ranging from $3,000 to $15,000. It is fully expected that they will rebuild. The company employed over 300 hands, and has been the town's greatest industry. It was established in 1865 by Wm. Tudhope, having its beginnings as a blacksmith shop. In 1876 J. B. Tudhope assumed control.

Bad Fire at Glencoe.

Glencoe, Aug. 22.—Glencoe had a disastrous fire early this morning, when four of the leading business houses were wiped out, together with their contents. The buildings destroyed were the John Roy McRae Block, occupied by W. E. Currie, grocer, loss $6,000, insurance $3,700, and James Wright & Sons, hardware merchants, loss $10,000, insurance $5,000; one-storey building occupied by J. E. Roome, grocer and shoe merchant, loss $4,500, insurance $1,500 and the Bell Telephone Office, loss $500, insurance $300, and the McCreary Building, occupied by E. Mayhem & Co., as a general store. The loss on this building was $7,000 and the insurance $3,000, while the loss to Mayhem & Co. is $18,000, and the insurance $13,000. Other losses are: Miss Parish, $400; C. J. Mills, $700; Traders' Bank, $250; Mrs. Mary McAlpine, $600; D. J. Thompson, $400; J. Y. Foster, $150.

Million Loss at Decatur.

Decatur, Ill., Aug. 23.—A score of business buildings were burned and a dozen others were damaged yesterday by a fire that swept along the business portion of East Main, Merchant and Water streets. The total damage is placed at $1,000,000, with insurance of about 80 per cent.

The fire burned from 1 o'clock this morning until sunset to-night, and was the worst in the history of the city.

Elk Lake Church Burns.

Elk Lake, Aug. 23.—The Anglican Church, The Toronto World Building and an inhabited tent were completely burned in less than thirty minutes during the time of morning service yesterday. The church was insured for $1,100 on Friday last.

Train Goes Through Bridge.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 23.—There is no truth in the story that Grand Forks, B.C., is in danger of being burned by bush fires. There was a small bush fire east of that town last week, which burned a few haystacks and fences, but that's all.

Owing to a bridge burning out on the Great Northern, a couple of miles south of Darts Saturday, a passenger train from Marcus to Spokane, with engine, mail car and combination baggage and passenger coach, went through the bridge, the engineer being unable to stop his train. Two coaches are a total wreck, having caught fire after the accident.

No one was killed or even seriously injured. The passengers were tossed about pretty badly.

$1,500,000 Loss at Monterey.

Mexico City, Aug. 23.—Fire Saturday night destroyed property in the business centre of the City of Monterey to the value of about $1,500,000.

The whole business section of the city was threatened, but escaped destruction largely because there was no wind.

The fire started in the establishment owned by the son-in-law of Gen. Trevino, commander of the Monterey military zone, and the opponent of Gen Reyes, and it was first thought that it was the work of political malcontents, but investigation showed that it was due to defective wires used for lighting purposes.

Foreigner Killed by Train.

New Liskeard, Aug. 23.—W. Goyer, a foreigner, was struck by the first section of freight No. 14, going south, and died two hours later. The accident occurred about two miles south of this place. Papers found upon him show that be was a former employe of the Grand Trunk, and was insured against accident by the Grand Trunk Railway Insurance of Canada. He had been living at Uno Park and, being without friends or money, started to walk south.

Commissioner Reid Dead.

Ottawa, Aug. 23.—Robert Reid, transcontinental railway commissioner, died suddenly on Saturday at Ogunquit, Maine, whether he had gone ten days ago to visit his family, who have been summering there.

Mr. Reid, who was 53 years of age, had been a member of the commission since its organization in 1904. Prior to that he was a manufacturer at London, Ont. He was 53 years of age and leaves a son, who is a student at McGill, and two daughters.

Mr. Colin McIsaac, one of his colleagues on the commission has gone to Ogunquit with the commissioners' private car to bring his remains to Ottawa.

A despatch from Yorke, Me., says that Mr. Reid was attacked with illness late last evening while he was playing cards in the hotel with his wife and friends. Suddenly he exclaimed: "I cannot see the cards," and Dr. Barlow of Montreal, a friend, who was nearby, seeing that Mr. Reid's condition was serious, ordered him removed immediately to his apartments. The physicians pronounced his illness due to cerebral hemorrhage.

Hill's Son Sleeps Out.

Great Falls, Mont., Aug. 23.—Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railway, and a son of James J. Hill, was compelled to spend a night this past week in a haystack. He started from Helena to Great Falls in his automobile. Near Fort Shaw the machine stuck in a mud-hole.

Mr. Hill applied to a settler for a bed and supper, but was told that he could find a bed in a nearby haystack and that he could help himself to refreshments at the pump.

When he did not appear here on time a searching party started toward Helena. They found the automobile in the mud-hole, and a short inspection of the nearby neighborhood revealed Mr. Hill and his chauffeur asleep in the haystack.

A Boy Purse Snatcher.

Kingston, Aug. 23.—While walking near Cataraqui Bridge Saturday night, Mrs. James Esford had a purse containing $4 snatched from her by a boy. She gave chase, but he escaped. He also admitted stealing $12 from a young man who went in bathing at Lake Ontario Park. He has served a term in the Industrial School at Mimico, for theft.

Must Get $1,200 or Be Single.

Toronto, Aug. 23.—Everybody knows that bank clerks have to rise to a certain fixed salary before they are allowed to marry.

As the result of an order issued by the general manager, those clerks who happen to be employed by the Molsons Bank have had the barrier raised considerably.

It is just $200 harder to get married now. The young man who aspires to enter the bonds of matrimony must now be receiving $1,200, not $1,000, as has been the case.

Looking Over Canadian Field.

TO FLY ACROSS LAKE

Aviator Will Attempt Toronto to Niagara Flight.

C. Foster Willard of New York Plans to Out Do Bleriot's Feat of Crossing the Channel—He Will Use a Bi-Plane Made by Glenn Curtiss and the Smallest in Use at the Present Time.

Toronto, Aug. 24.—Starting from Toronto, C. Foster Willard of New York will attempt next week to fly across Lake Ontario to Niagara Falls on a bi-plane airship. The machine is owned by Edward T. Tandy of New York, a member of the Aeronautic Society of America, and has a record of 25 successful flights, which includes the longest cross-country flights. The cross-country record was made at Mineola, L.I., on Friday, the 13th, when Willard flew 12 miles, sailing over the outskirts of four towns in his passage.

"We are bringing our machine to Toronto with the intention of exceeding Bleriot's feat by flying across Lake Ontario," said Mr. Tandy, at the Walker House last night. The machine, with Willard, who operates it, will arrive on Thursday, and some preliminary flights will be made a few days later or as soon as the machine can be set up."

Mr. Tandy considers that if Willard is successful in his attempt, his feat will greatly exceed that of Bleriot who flew across the English Channel three weeks ago. The distance from Toronto to Niagara is 15 miles further than across the English Channel, and there are strong air currents to be encountered. Willard will make a number of excursions out over the lake to familiarize himself with the currents and decide how high he would sail in order to avoid the [illegible] of them before attempting the [illegible] flight. A special raft will be constructed and a speedy tug engaged to follow up the bi-plane as a protective measure in case of accidents.

Mr. Tandy's machine is the smallest bi-plane in the world, being but 29 feet 11 inches across. It was designed and constructed by Glenn H. Curtiss, of Hammond Port, N.Y., who is making flights in Rheims, France, this week with a bi-plane of similar design. Willard recently flew 33 miles in 52 minutes and has flown at the rate of 46.1 miles an hour. In his 25 flights Willard has never had an accident.

The machine weighs 400 pounds outside of a gasoline and driver, and is equipped with a 25-horsepower, 1,000 revolutions per minute, engine. It cost $7,500 to construct.

Bullet in Head; Bears a Child.

Westbridgewater, Mass., Aug. 24.—After sending a bullet through the head of his wife Mary, who was afterwards taken to the Brockton Hospital, where she gave birth to a child, Mariano Janeiro committed suicide. Janeiro, who was 29 years old, was out of work and deranged mentally on account of sickness.

After dragging his wife from the kitchen to the top of the house, he kissed her good-bye, while she struggled to get away, and then fired. The man placed the revolver to his own head just as his three children rushed up at the sound of the first shot. Laying down his weapon he kissed them, put them out of the room, locked the door, and then blew out his brains.

The infant and mother are expected to live.

Extensive Forest Fires.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 24.—Forest fires near Lower Pend d'Orielle River are spreading on the Idaho side toward Priest Lake, covering a large territory and doing immense damage. Hundreds of men fought the flames tonight, but the fighters made little headway against the fire.

Supervisor Weigle of the Couer d'Alene Forest Service estimated that 1,500,000 feet of lumber will be destroyed.

Windsor Hotelmen Raided.

Windsor, Aug. 24.—License Inspector Pacaud paid an unexpected visit to several hotels here Sunday, and as a result, information charging the illegal selling of liquor has been laid against the proprietors of the British-American, Eureka and International Hotel. Each of these hotels is now liable to a $100 fine, this being a second offence.

WILL BE GOOD MEETING

D. R. A. Matches Get Away to Good Start at Ottawa.

With 630 Marksmen Present From All Parts of the Dominion, Sensational Shooting Is Promised—Every Province Is Represented in British Challenge Shield—Principal Winners Yesterday.

Ottawa, Aug. 24.—Excellent weather favored the opening of the Dominion Rifle Association's meeting at Rockliffe Ranges yesterday, and with a record attendance of 630 marksmen, prospects are good for sensational shooting. The feature of the day was the success of the Western Ontario representation.

For the first time in history the nine Provinces of the Dominion will be represented by teams in the British Challenge Shield match, Alberta and Saskatchewan both having teams in the running. Alberta has 19 men, and Premier Rutherford gave them a generous contribution of $1,000 towards their expenses. As to rifles, the men are fairly well divided between the Ross and Lee-Enfield, but the backsight used at Bisley is barred, and as a make-up of time [illegible] wake up old shots the 45 second limit for shots will be strictly enforced.

Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto are strongly represented, and the 8th Rifles have 19 men on their squad. The statistical office is handled by G. B. Johnson of Montreal. The total in prizes is $10,618, and the number of employes 200, including 73 register members and 73 markers.

After a night's rain yesterday morning opened with beautiful weather, practically no wind, but a bright sun.

Colonel Barlow, of England; Major Winter, Ottawa; Major Duff Stewart, Vancouver; Major Sutherland, Quebec, and Major McRobbie, New Brunswick, were appointed a match committee to settle all disputes during the meet.

Yesterday's shooting results included the following chief prize winners:

Six hundred yards, seven shots, possible 35, 579 entries—$17.50, Col.Sergt. Greet, Q.O.R., 35; Major Moffatt, 13th S.L.D., 35; $11.34, Sergt. H. Crofton, 15th Light Horse, 34; Sergt. W. A. Smith, G.G.F.G., 34; Pte. A. Taylor, 77th, 34.

Tyros, $4 each—Pte. W. Simpson, 48th, 31; Sergt. Mott, 38th, 31; Pte. Clemence, 91st, 31; Pte. Lowry, 30th, 31; Pte. Mason, 37th, 31.

Seven shots at 200 yards, $10—Cadet Rettalach, Ottawa, 32; $8, Cadet Kendall, Ottawa, 32.

There was no competition for the three team prizes, which were to be of eight men.

Jerome a Candidate.

New York, Aug. 24.—District Attorney W. T. Jerome announced tonight that he would be a candidate for re-election this fall, running independently. In a brief statement issued last night, he says: "I have been considering whether I should be guided, not by any personal interest, but by the consideration of whether a majority of the electors desire that I should further serve them in this position. But as I know of no way in which I can ascertain this except by offering myself as a candidate, I have decided to seek again a nomination by petition."

Friends of Mr. Jerome will at once start the petition for placing his name on the official ballot. Two thousand signatures are required by law.

Engulfed in Quicksand.

New York, Aug. 24.—In the clutch of treacherous quicksands, Otto Warmersay, a broker's clerk of this city, was swallowed from sight of his two companions before they understood his plight. The three were in bathing suits at Far Rockaway, Warmersay, in about three feet of water, and his friends on the beach. He was seen to stumble, but not until he failed to rise was any fear felt for his safety. Then both young men rushed to the spot where he had disappeared only to find themselves likewise entangled. They had a hard fight to free themselves.

Dental Work of 3,000 Years Ago.

Berlin, Aug. 24.—A piece of dental work 3,000 years old was exhibited at the International Dental Congress, which opened in this city yesterday. The object is a human jaw taken from an Etruscan Tomb and has a calf's tooth held in place by gold fittings. The workmanship is excellent and seemingly as fresh as though done yesterday. Emperor William's exhibit includes Roman forceps and other dental tools of the second century.

Wholesale Burglary.

Bracebridge, Ont., Aug. 24.—Elias Stonehouse, of Gravenhurst, who pleaded guilty a week ago to several thefts from summer cottages on Gull Lake, south of Muskoka Lake, was yesterday sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary.

Stonehouse had gathered the proceeds of his thieving at a house near Clear Lake and was disposing of them by sale when suspicion was aroused.

Raid on the Camorra.

Milan, Aug. 24.—The Marquis Arthur Affaitati, the newly-installed head of the Naples Camorra, has been captured, together with twenty-three members of the Grand Council, which elected him.

The 34 members of the Council were holding a banquet to celebrate the election of the Marquis when they were surprised by a squad of Carbinni. Ten of the men escaped.

Revolt Is Possible.

British Nobles May Force the Rejection of Budget.

W. T. Stead Says That a Group of Unknown Members of the Upper House Will Not Listen to Lansdowne's Warning and Propose to Thwart the Will of the People—Will Cause Financial Crisis.

New York, Aug. 24.—W. T. Stead cables as follows from London to The American:—The question of questions which is exciting British politicians is the threatened revolt of "unknown Peers" in the House of Lords. As that Legislative Assembly consists of some hundred Peers who attend more or less irregularly during the season, they constitute the working House, and behind them are four hundred Peers who only take trouble to attend Parliament when some Liberal Bill of exceptional importance is to be mutilated or thrown out. As a rule there is a full muster of hereditary legislators once in five years, and it is these non-attending Peers who threaten to revolt. Their mutiny is filling the Tory leaders with alarm and the Radicals with unconcealed delight.

Lord Lansdowne, leader of the Tories in the Upper House, is a Whig by descent, and a statesman by temperament. It is known that he does not contemplate a great constitutional conflict with the Commons over the Budget. He will growl and go as far as he dares in mutilating the non-financial proposals embodied in the Budget, but there he will stop. His policy, dictated by many reasons, is that the Lords have no constitutional right to amend the Budget, and that throwing out the Budget, will fling the country into confusion, precipitate a financial crisis, and render it impossible to collect taxes or pay the Army or Navy.

The Budget, furthermore, is so popular that it is almost impossible to hold a large public meeting against it in any part of the country, and, lastly, a fight to the death between the Peers and the people could not possibly be fought on any issue more disadvantageous for the Peers than on the question of relieving rich landlords by increasing the cost of food to the people. All these considerations weigh with the Tory leader, who earnestly desires to let the Budget pass, but the "unknown Peers" are so furious that a sacrilegious hand should be laid upon their ancient hereditary right to appropriate the result of the industry of their untitled neighbors that it is reported they refuse to listen to Lansdowne's cautious counsels. They feel that the rights of their order and the rents of their estates are endangered, and they are vowing that, come what may, they will throw out the Budget and dare the Liberals to do their worst.

Islands Swallowed by Quake.

Mexico City, Aug. 24.—Despatches from Acapulco say that the people of that port believe that the Clipperton Islands were swallowed up by the sea during the late earthquake.

No word of any kind has come from the islands, and as the neighboring bed of the ocean is known to have been greatly disturbed and a small tidal wave to have occurred, the port officials at Acapulco are urging the War Department to send out the gunboat General Guerrero in search of the islands.

The claims of the Acapulcoans have not as yet seriously impressed the War Department.

Fred Gambro, former sub-secretary for Foreign Affairs, is now in Europe to present Mexico's claims to the ownership of the islands before the Italian Arbitration Court.

Congress of Indian Educators.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 24.—The Congress of Indian Educators began today in the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition Auditorium. It is nominally a teachers' institute, with instructors present from nearly all the 300 Government Indian schools.

From a dozen tribes have come boys and girls who are demonstrating by their handiwork their adaptability to civilization, and what is even more interesting to visitors, showing that the wonderful arts and crafts of the aborigines are being perpetuated.

May Arrest Mayor.

Atlantic City, N.J., Aug. 24.—Interest in the Reform Movement in this city was intensified yesterday when Mayor E. P. Stoy officially refused to receive a notice from Attorney-General Wilson ordering him to close Atlantic City saloons on Sunday.

hTe heads of the Reform Movement declared to-night that they will cause the arrest of the mayor if he refuses to acknowledge the notice issued by the Attorney-General.

Charged With Arson.

London, Aug. 24.—William J. Tink, a man of about 30, charged with setting fire to the house he occupied in Westminster Township, and which is owned by John Anderson. Tink was brought in to London and appeared before Squire Chettick, who remanded him till Saturday.

IN FLAMING LAUNCH.

Toronto Party Have Close Call From Death by Explosion.

Toronto, Aug. 24.—Only the quick-witted heroism of Mr. Joseph Whelan, of 170 Markham street, and the prompet assistance rendered by the boat Velda II., averted a tragedy on the Humber Bay early last evening, when the big gasoline launch Topeka, of the National Yacht Club fleet, was burned to the water's edge following upon an explosion. As it was, two persons were burned, and two thousand people thronging the Lake Shore road will long remember the weird scene as the flames devoured the big launch, valued at $1,300.

The party on board consisted of Mr. Whelan; his sisters, Annie and Maggie; his aunt, Miss A. Baker, all of 170 Markham street, and a girl friend, Miss Madge Devine, of 396 Queen street west. The gasoline had leaked out of the tank as it lay at the Humber moorings, and before he started last night, five gallons of fluid were taken on board.

When well out in the lake, Mr. Whelan opened the relief tap to clear it. A spurt of flame followed the opening of the valve, and in an instant it had ignited the gas generated by the gasoline and water at the bottom of the boat. The explosion threw Mr. Whelan several feet. In a second the craft had caught fire.

Mr. Whelan called for all to jump overboard, as he had seen the boats putting off to the rescue. Miss Devine did not move, and Whelan braved the flames long enough to grasp her and place her in the water. One of the Whelan girls crept away out on the stern of the craft and remained there.

A moment later, though to those on board the doomed craft the moment seemed ages, the Velda of the Queen City Yacht Club, also a gasoline launch, came up at full speed, and took the endangered people on board.

Mr. Whelan had been badly burned, and it was thought at first fatally. His hair, eyebrows and lashes were almost burned off, and his face, hands and arms badly blistered.

More Miners At Work.

Sydney, N.S., Aug. 24.—The official statement of the Dominion Coal Co., covering yesterday's output up to 6 o'clock, is: Hoisted from pits, 6,276 tons; loaded from the banking stations, 4,853 tons. Total output for the day, 11,129 tons. Present indications point to a very substantial increase in the productions from the collieries during the present week and the following days to the close of the month.

A large number of new men have gone to work at No. 2 Colliery and before this week is out the tonnage hoisted from the big shaft will probably reach the 1,600 or 1,700 mark.

The company are now preparing to re-open collieries Nos. 5 and 9. A large number of men came in on Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and to-day from Newfoundland, Inverness, Grand Narrows, Pictou County and from Montreal. About 75 per cent. of these men are practical miners, and most of them have at some previous time been employes of the Dominion Steel Company.

Earl Grey to Visit Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Aug. 24.—Word has been received here that the Governor-General and Lady Grey with their household, will spend a fortnight in Winnipeg, from Oct. 1 to 15.

It is stated that His Excellency has decided that, owing to the growing importance of Western Canada, the Governor-General should spend a portion of each year in the western metropolis.

The Vice-Regal party will occupy the houses of Hon. Colin Campbell and Hon. Robert Rogers, loaned for the occasion, and situated near each other.

Balloon Wrecked.

Paris, Aug. 24.—The Bayard-Clement dirigible balloon, built recently by the Bayard Cement Company for the Russian Government, was wrecked near Maisons-Laffitt yesterday during its preliminary trial. The aviators on board, including Col. Nach of the Russian Army, were not injured.

The airship made its ascent successfully, remained in the air and then came down without damage. But while on the ground a violent gust of wind tore the balloon from the grasp of the 40 men who were holding it. It was thrown against some trees and telegraph poles nearby, ripping the gas bag to pieces. The ship then fell into the River Seine. The four occupants had stuck to the car during these happenings. Kingston Standard: It will be too bad if through the passage of the Lloyd-George budget, the dukes and the earls in England will be obliged to dismiss a few of their servants, as they lament they will have to do. Imagine some of these aristocrats actually working.

The above is all right so far as it goes, but there's another side. What's to become of the hundreds of thousands of servants who will be dismissed? How will they keep the wolf from the door. Perhaps Lloyd-George will pension them off.

Mr. Donald Sutherland, director of colonization for Ontario, says the farmers of this province are suffering because so many agricultural laborers are leaving Ontario for the west. The suffering will not all be done by Ontario farmers. Some of the pilgrims will probably find that faraway fields are not quite so green as they look on the map, and many of the husky lads may be glad to hot-foot it for the east again. Such things have happened before.

A Toronto paper sent a special reporter to the scene of the Dominion Coal Company strike. In his published statements he seems to have hurt the feelings of some of the good folks down by the sea, as Island lodge No. 45, P.W.A., in a published statement, denounces him as a "shameless prevaricator of the truth, as a dangerous agitator, and as an unworthy reporter of independence and fairness of the public press." They seem to have fair command of language down by the sea.

Is there any truth in the report that a gang of boys in this city have become filled up with Jesse James stories and are now thirsting to become pirates and desperadoes? The story is told in all seriousness. The tobacco thieves of yesterday, it is said, are members of the gang, which has its headquarters under a bridge crossing the railway tracks, just outside the city. Parents who care for the future of their young boys should keep an eye on their whereabouts after this.

Local Option Beer Case is Enlarged.

MAGISTRATE WILL STUDY EVIDENCE BEFORE RENDERING JUDGMENT.

Before Magistrate Masson this morning, argument was heard in the case of John Ryan, of Frankford, who was charged with selling intoxicants in that village, where local option prevails.

Mr. W. D. Morden, who appeared for the accused, contended that Ryan, if he sold intoxicants, was not aware that they were intoxicants, the fluid sold being what is known as local option beer, said to be sanctioned by the Licence Department.

Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, contended thaet the beer supplied was not what is known as local option beer, but a stronger brand, containing a higher per cent. of alcohol.

After argument in the case, the Magistrate reserved judgment for a few days, desiring to carefully review the evidence.

Deseronto News

ACCIDENT TO LITTLE GIRL — RESPECTED OLD RESIDENT DEAD.

Deseronto, Aug. 20.—A serious accident occurred to Laura, the small daughter of Mrs. Joseph Larondo. The child was playing in the back yard. An old cupboard fell on her, breaking her right leg and at the same time, Peter, her brother, was badly bruised on the knee.

On Thursday a good deal of damage was done to the dwelling of Mr. Howard on Pearl street by fire.

On Thursday of last week, after a brief illness, death claimed a very highly respected old gentleman, in the person of William Martin, aged seventy-seven years. Deceased was born in Tavistock, England, coming to Belleville. For the past twenty-nine years he resided in Deseronto. On Monday evening he was taken ill, and on Tuesday it was found necessary for him to undergo an operation. In religion he was a member of the Methodist church and in politics a Conservative. He is survived by his widow, five sons and seven daughters. The funeral was conducted from his residence on Green street on Saturday morning by the Sons of England, he being a charter member. The service was conducted by Rev. G. H. Copeland, after which the remains were placed in the family plot at Belleville cemetery. Rev. Mr. Campbell, an old friend, conducted the burial service, after which the service of Sons of England, conducted by Rev. T. J. O'Connor-Fenton, was read. The floral tributes were numerous.

Called to the West.

Rev. Dr. MacTavish, of Kingston, has been asked to present the claims of the Brandon, Manitoba, congregation, which extended a call to Rev. J. S. Laidlaw, of Belleville, when the Kingston presbytery holds its next meeting in Belleville on September 21st. While on his trip to the west. Rev. Dr. MacTavish met members of the congregation, and they asked that he go before the presbytery on their behalf, and he consented to do so.

A Saucy Peddler.

Kingston, August 23.—It cost a Jew peddler five dollars this morning to convince a woman that it was not her duty to issue a warrant for his arrest. Yesterday afternoon the peddler got into an argument with the woman and struck her, besides threatening all kinds of terrible things. This morning the woman visited the police station to lay a warrant, but, when the Jew also put in an appearance, she decided that five dollars would soothe her wounded spirit. The Jew discreetly decided to settle.

Great Day In Madoc

There will be a great day in Madoc on Wednesday next, August 25, when the Gatherin' o' the Clans takes place, under the auspices of the Madoc Sons of Scotland. The Madoc Scots never do things by halves, and this year they will try to set a new record. There will be a great programme of sports, Highland piping and dancing, Marathon races, etc., and the famous 48th Highlanders' Band, of Toronto, will furnish the best of music. It should be, as the advt. in another column says, the outing of the season.

At Sign of the Scales

Mock'er Bock was charged with assaulting Solomon Singer. The parties are Hungarians, who are employed at the Cement works at Point Ann, and it was alleged that Singer assaulted a fellow-countryman named Bock on Sunday last. The evidence in the case was of a rather conflicting nature and the Magistrate suggested a settlement, which was agreed to. The complainant paid $5.00 into court and the defendanat $10.00. Mr. Anderson for Crown and Mr. Carnew for accused.

It is also to be d that most of these hailed dis- ts report that their increased age will enable them to reap a vier crop than last year, notwith- ding their losses from hail.

A hundred and teen places say the crop will be twenty-two bushels to the acre, in a great many, perhaps the ority of these, the estimate is e that the yield will ultimately be d to run from thirty-five to y bushels. One hundred and teen places predict a crop rang- from eighteen to twenty-two els, and only thirty-nine expect than eighteen. Several of these ty-nine have been affected by spe- causes and in their various ways had rather hard luck, but even , with a few exceptions, will run to the eighteen bushel mark.

is noticeable also that the crops ats and barley are everywhere re- ed excellent. The barley falls here below thirty bushels, and in w cases runs very much higher. ajority of the bulletins indicate a of from thirty to sixty bushels ats, while several of them run to iderably higher figures. Flax in districts where it is cultivated has done well.

the general prosperity of the inion depends to a large extent the crops, the above evidence bumper harvest out west, added he good one in this part of the inion, ought to give added im- to trade.

Gambling Charters.

few days ago The Intelligencer ed out the fallacy of the excuse d by a portion of the Minister- ress, that the granting of letters t or charters was departmental not Ministerial, and therefore sters were not responsible if ers were granted for the carry- n of improper business; and the ment made by Mr. Mulvey, the r Secretary of State, that it was he business of either departmental officials or the Government to enquire into the personnel of those who applied for charters.

These excuses for doing wrong were so glaringly inconsistant with both law and practise that even the Toronto Globe had to repudiate them.

The position taken by The Intelligencer upon this question is fully endorsed by the Toronto Globe in an editorial published in its issue of the 21st inst., in which it says:

> The notion that the Department of State is under obligation to grant every charter applied for, as a matter or departmental routine, and without scrutiny of the character of the applicants or the public interests involved, makes it the more urgent that all who care either for clean sport or for healthy morals should combine for an amendment to the law. That notion of the Ottawa officials on the face of it is absurd, and in practise it is not observed. If it were observed it would be a piece of dangerous irresponsibility. The reasoning with which it is supported is so sophistical that one marvels at the confidence with which it is presented. Certain it is that if the Department of State is no longer to assume responsibility for the granting of charters to notorious gambling organizations, the Department of Justice will be required to make the business of gambling a crime before the law. The vice must be killed that the sport may survive.

Flagrant, indeed, must a defence of the Government be when the Globe finds it necessary to repudiate it.

Ministers, Singers, Speakers

FOR THEIR SPECIAL BENEFIT A SCIENTIFIC VOICE IMPROVER HAS BEEN INVENTED.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal chords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus assuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucuous surfaces in perfect condition and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety, unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and Prima Donnas would not be without Catarrhozone and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence. The hard rubber inhaler fits conveniently into a purse or vest pocket, and may be used in the Church, theatre, any place or time, price $1.00 all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

BRITISH SOCIETY MAKES BIG DISCOVERIES AT THEBES.

Professor Petrie Tells of His Excavations in Egypt—Palace of Pharaoh Mentioned in Bible by Jeremiah Is Found at Memphis—Golden Ornaments Are Found Along With Mummy.

An interesting lecture describing the work of the British School of Archaeology in Egypt during the last season was delivered by Professor Petrie the other evening at University College.

The work was divided into two portions. During the early part of the season extensive explorations were made in the hitherto unexplored valleys of Qurneh, the country of Thebes, and several most valuable finds were made.

One of the most interesting of these was the discovery of an undisturbed tomb of the period of the eleventh dynasty, B.C. 2500, and of a curious Osiris chapel of a king named Sankhka-ra. More important was the find of an untouched tomb of the seventeenth dynasty, about B.C. 1800—the simple furniture of which was very remarkable. Among the objects were a number of vases with a string network of most remarkable fineness, by which they were attached to a carrying pole, like a milkman's yoke. String bags of wonderful workmanship were also found and a chair of pretty design, with a knotted string seat.

The tomb in which the mummy was found was evidently that of some person of importance, for a gold necklace, gold bangles, and a girdle of curious Nubian pattern were found. There was found also a small private temple, built by a high priest named Nebunnef, who associated himself with Rameses II.

At the end of one of the waddies leading into the desert as a moslem sheik's tomb, near to it were small soul houses and jars of offerings containing water and food—a curious survival of the ancient customs.

At Memphis the work was directed to the exploration of a large mound over sixty feet in height, and which will take many years to dig out. At a depth of about ten feet the remains of a large edifice—about 400 feet long by 200 feet broad, with massive walls fifteen feet high—was discovered. It proved to be the palace of Apiries, or the Pharaoh Hophra of the Bible, B.C. 590, who is mentioned by Jeremiah. It was a large edifice, consisting of many halls, or rooms, and two very large quadrangles, as well as servants' quarters, and in these latter were the fireplaces and ovens for cooking the royal dinners.

The central hall was a large space about 100 feet square, which had been covered by a cedar wood roof, supported on columns 50 feet high. A large gateway, built of older material of the time of the twelfth dynasty, was found, the walls of which bore a series of interesting sculptures, representing the installation of the crown prince as vice ruler. During the excavation of the palace very large quantities of scale armor were found, much of it of very fine work, in steel, iron and bronze, probably borne by the Greek mercenaries of the king, and which had been hastily thrown away.

One of the most beautiful finds here was a silver-and-gold rest of a royal palanquin. It was of solid silver, weighing nearly two pounds, and in the centre was a head of the goddess Hathor, with a gold face and with a bronze wig inlaid with gold and blue—one of the finest works of art ever discovered. The exploration of the Temple of Ptah produced many interesting objects, among them a number of terra cotta heads of foreigners who had come to Memphis during the Persian rule—Europeans with the curious Spanish matador feature and side whiskers, Karians with their cookscomb hat, as described by Herodotus.

Very remarkable were two heads, with very modern turbans and distinctly Afghan features, no doubt Parthian allies of the Persian king. Two temples of Meneptah, the Pharaoh of the Exodus, have been found. The discovery of the palace mound is most important, for no doubt stratified under it are the ruined palaces of many dynasties, perhaps even that of Menes himself.

A Romantic Gift.

An altar frontal, which has just come into the possession of the Roman Catholic Church of St. John's, near Norwich, England, has a pathetic interest attaching to it. About 18 months ago Col. Noyes died suddenly while on his honeymoon. His young, grief-stricken widow sent her bridal robe to the nuns of a convent in Bloomsburg, where four skilled embroiderers have been engaged upon it ever since. The altar frontal is eight feet long and four feet deep, and it is designed in three panels, depicting beautifully executed figures. The first of these is an allegorical likeness of the late Col. Noyes, who is represented as a mediaeval knight. The arms and mottoes of Col. Noyes and of the widow's family are embroidered over the panels.

Explanation Called For.

Alfred (whose sporting opportunities have been limited by parental decree)—Papa, what does it mean by base on balls?

Papa (who is reading an account of the latest heavyweight fight)—Alfred, you could better employ yourself with your Sunday school lesson. I'm too busy now to explain.

Alfred (still thirsting for knowledge)—Did it mean the same as base on balls when you telephoned last night that as mamma was away you were going out on a bat?

Mamma (who is always listening)—Benjamin Ridgely, you will take time right now to make two explanations, with the most important one coming to me.

AMONG THE CANNIBALS.

British Force Goes Into Wilds of Northern Nigeria.

Details of the expedition lately concluded by the southern Nigerian Government, by which some 5,000 square miles of hitherto unknown and unadministered country in the north and on the borders of Northern Nigeria have been brought under effective control, have been received by Reuter's Agency.

These operations, which were carried out among tribes who for the most part had never previously seen a white man, proved entirely successful, and were so managed that there was practically no serious fighting. They began early in November last, and only concluded in the middle of April.

The British force consisted of 700 men of the southern Nigeria Regiment, under the command of Colonel Trenchard, who had with him thirty officers, six Maxims and 700 carriers.

The Yala people, in whose country the columns remained for a month, gave a good deal of trouble. When their villages were entered they were found to be deserted, the women and live stock having been removed. The men meanwhile had formed bush camps in the open yam fields, where they could see the approach of the British, and had also hidden in the branches of trees scouts, whose duty it was to fire signal guns.

The people then took to their heels and encamped elsewhere, but fired on the column when they were in what they regarded as a tight corner. This tribe, like most of those encountered, was armed with flint locks and carried poisoned arrows, but, fortunately, the country was fairly open and the aim not very accurate.

After some weeks of this kind of thing the Yala came in, but declined to give up their arms.

In places the natives, hearing of the approach of a large force, dug pits and planted stakes to prevent their progress. What little hostility there was occurred during the earlier part of the operations in the Okpoto country and among the northern Ibo tribes.

Colonel Trenchard's force started in two columns—one from the Niger and one from the Cross River—with instructions to make for an unknown spot marked X, the two afterward joining at Ikem, where the first base camp was formed. From this base small columns were sent out in various directions, each being responsible for a definite district, which was to be mapped, and where the officers' duty was to get into touch with the natives and to show them how to make good roads.

In each case the commanding officer of the column summoned the local chief and explained the Government terms, emphasizing the fact that all human sacrifices must stop, that good roads must be made, and that a British commissioner would be appointed, who would settle all disputes.

On these occasions there were impressive gatherings of thousands of natives, in many cases cannibals, and for the most part naked, or practically so. They did not show undue delight at the advent of the British, and, as a rule, silently listened to the recital of the Government terms, and then slowly dispersed.

The various columns report that they found far less human sacrifice and juju rites in the hitherto unknown north than among the tribes of the delta, and, on the whole, the people were of a better physical type. Several juju places were seen, and a big centre was destroyed. It was impossible to discover the nature of the juju rites practiced, but in the vicinity of one big juju house discovered in a bush clearing there was found a good deal of blood—whether human or not was not ascertained.

Australian Woman Becomes Hindu.

A remarkable ceremony took place at Lucknow, India, when Miss Thomson, a pretty young Australian woman, who is to be married to a Bengali barrister, formally renounced Christianity and embraced Hinduism as practiced by the Ayra Samajists.

The ceremony took place in the courtyard of the rajah of Vizianagram's residence, and was watched by a large crowd of natives.

Miss Thomson wore native costume, with a pale blue "sari," bespangled with gold, and heavy gold bangles on her arms. At the conclusion of the ceremony, which lasted more than an hour, she almost fainted.

The convert's reception by the Ayra Samajists was the customary "purification" by fire and water. Miss Thomson answered the questions of the Hindu priest in a low voice, ceremonially washed her hands and head and poured a spoonful of oil on a sandal-wood fire. She then received a Hindu name.

Too Many Novels.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward, in an address read for her at the opening of a free library at Kendal, said that people who read nothing else but novels never properly appreciated them. Novels were the jam of literature, and all properly conducted persons should begin their meal with bread and butter. Writers of novels wanted readers to be a little hungry for them—not to bring to them a mind full of the debris of a thousand plots—and be proof against their little arts. In the interests of her own craft, she urged all who might use the new library to venture out on the broad seas of literature, to be hardy and courageous, full of curiosity and sympathy, and ready to take trouble with a tough subject and a long book.

The Lost Repeater.

When monsieur—the first monsieur at the court of Louis XIV.—discovered at his levee that his watch had been stolen, presumably by one of his valets, he finished dressing hastily and, addressing them all, said: "Gentlemen, the watch strikes. Let us separate as quickly as we can." What a tact and finish were here!

The spirit of monsieur was admirably caught by the French gentleman of the time who, attacked by robbers at five o'clock in the afternoon, simply observed, "Sirs, you have opened very early to-day."—Cornhill Magazine.

A PERFECT DREAM CITY.

London on a Glorious Day of Sunshine and Blue Sky.

The following pretty description of a sunshiny day in London appeared recently in an English publication:

London was yesterday a city of gold and green and white. Golden sunshine in the streets and parks, green foliage on every tree upon which the sun shone down, white buildings, newly built or newly painted, with clear outlines under a sky of Oriental blue. What dream-city could be more perfect than London on such a day?

Truly it was an unforgettable day—a day on which it is good to be alive, very good to be young when the spring calls to the blood and when perfume steals into the senses; good even to be old and to sun oneself in the memory of other spring days as golden as this.

The London season is beginning! Good words to those who have the leisure and means to play the game, the merry game of the social whirligig; good even to those who are merely lookers-on.

Yesterday the fun had begun. The King was in town, the court was in the capital, the servants of society had pulled up the window blinds of town houses and the sun was shining.

So the streets were very full of life at its best and brightest. Down Bond street and Piccadilly—the highways of the lucky ones—there was an endless tide of carriages, and the sun gleamed upon brightly polished panellings, flashed fire from the brass head lamps and metal work of magnificent motor cars, and glistened on the smooth flanks of good horses, which went dashing by as proudly as though there were no such thing as petrol.

Women were in the carriages and walking on the shady side, and one man sighed because he could not wear salmon pink, or Madonna blue, or walk in lilac beauty like these ladies who were the flowers of the London streets. Flowers, literally because all their hats were in full blossom, brought out by this brilliant sunshine, and from the top of an omnibus one looked down upon moving bouquets of roses and daisies and forget-me-nots, as though all the flowers in Kensington Gardens had been plucked as the garlands of England's fair women.

Yet the men did their poor best, yesterday, to do credit to the divine day. Old Bucks had put on white waistcoats, and young bloods in new silk hats—bright and beautiful things—had put yellow gloves upon their hands. The Green Park was a paradise, into which had slunk many poor devils, against whom the gates of this paradise were not closed. These Weary Willies had come out of the slums, for spring called to them also, and they lay, in lazy happiness and seedy clothes, like corpses on the emerald greensward, which was a carpet worthy of Kings.

A Cool Deadhead.

Mr. Oscar Asche, the London actor, who, with his wife, Miss Lily Brayton, is on his way to Australia—his native land—which he left eighteen years ago, remarked just before he set sail, apropos of the slump in theatres, that the deadhead is a destroyer of drama. "Once give a man a free seat for a play," he said, "and you will have a difficulty ever after to make him 'pay to go in.' While I was touring with a certain highly-respected manager, we were playing at a long-famous old playhouse in an ancient town. We had billed 'Macbeth' for the Friday night, but during that day the theatre was burnt down. For our next week there our chief contrived to borrow a playhouse a little way out of the district. On reaching there to rebearse on the Monday the manager received a letter saying that the writer had been given two dress-circle orders for the performance of 'Macbeth,' but as that play was not performed owing to the destruction of the theatre, the writer surmised that the manager would remit the money value of those orders."

Clever People Who Can't See.

The history of the past assures us that there are few, if any, departments of human knowledge in which the blind have not distinguished theselves, says The War Cry.

Two of the world's greatest poets—Homer and Milton—were sightless; while Dr. Saunderson, once professor of mathematics in the University of Cambridge, lost his eyesight when twelve months old, but, although his parents were poor, he advanced so greatly in knowledge that he became an expert Greek scholar.

Then, John Metcalfe, of Knaresborough, another blind man, became a champion swimmer, a musician, and an engineer, who distinguished himself in building bridges and making roads.

There still exists, we believe, a monument to the memory of Dr. Hugh James, the blind physician of Carlisle; while in Birmingham there is a blind man who cleans and repairs clocks, and has even constructed new ones.

Queen Victoria's Journals.

Lord Esher has been giving some interesting particulars of Queen Victoria's journals. There are said to be over 100 volumes of them, all written closely in a small running hand. The last entry is dictated and was added just ten days before the Queen died. The journals, it is said, will never be seen hereafter in their complete form.

Bernard Shaw's Next Play.

Bernard Shaw has written another play since "The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet," says The Nation. It is entitled "Press Cutting, Compiled From the Correspondence and Editorial Columns of the Daily Press," and consists of an ironical discussion of woman's suffrage and universal military service.

England's Oldest Barber Dead.

Allen Batchelor of Guildford, England, who was reputed to be England's oldest barber, died recently at the age of 88. He claimed to have been patronized by kings, dukes, bishops, judges, policemen, politicians, publicans, "and sinners no end."

GOING FOR THE DOCTOR.

And Also the Reason Why He Was After the Medical Man.

"Yes, your honor," said the man who had been arrested for driving his automobile at an illegal rate of speed, "I admit that I was running thirty miles an hour, but I was going for the doctor."

"Oh, you were going for the doctor, eh? Can you offer any proof to substantiate that statement?"

"Yes. I can bring in the doctor himself as a witness, if necessary."

"Um! That ought to make a difference. The law is explicit, but we must grant that there may be extenuating circumstances. There have been times when the court would have been glad to run thirty miles an hour if the court could have done so. Certainly a man should not be held too strictly to the provisions of the law if he happens to violate it for the purpose of trying to save a life. The court is very strongly inclined to dismiss the case. Did you explain to the officer who arrested you that you were going for the doctor?"

"Yes, your honor."

"Officer, what have you to say?"

"Well, your honor, I asked him, when he said he was going for the doctor, what he was going for the doctor for."

"Yes. That was very sensible. What was he going for the doctor for?"

"For to take the doctor and two young ladies for a ride, as I found out unbeknownst to him."

"Thirty dollars and costs."

A COLLECTOR'S RUSE.

The Way He Secured a Rare Piece of Dresden Ware.

We should cultivate our fancy for old china as did the late Mr. Wertheimer, the art dealer, concerning whom there is a story that every bargain hunter should take to heart.

Wertheimer was one day passing through Mayfair when he noticed a sale about to take place of the "furniture and household effects of a deceased nobleman." He walked through the rooms where dealers were critically examining choice specimens of undoubtedly genuine Chippendale and Sheraton, interspersed among early Victorian furniture, his eyes apparently dwelling on nothing. But when the sale was about to commence he asked the auctioneer if he would take £5,000 for everything in the house.

The offer was accepted. "Now you can resell everything for me," said Mr. Wertheimer, "except this," and he took down from the mantelpiece a dirty ornament some nine inches high and put it into his pocket. It was a piece of the rarest Dresden, bearing the coveted mark of the wand of Aesculapius, which he afterward sold for £10,000.

How the dealers metaphorically kicked themselves for overlooking it and how they bid against one another in the chance of securing a similar treasure is still a tradition in Bond street.—London Chronicle.

She Makes a Suggestion.

"How beautiful and clean the horizon looks," said Polly as on the second day out she came up on deck and threw herself down in the steamer chair beside me.

"Well it ought to be," said I, looking up from my book. "The captain has been sweeping it with his glass for the past six hours."

"That reminds me," said Polly, turning two very grave brown eyes upon me. "Did you remember to bring that vacuum cleaner along with you, as I suggested?"

"No," said I unwarily. "I remembered to forget it, however. What on earth does anybody want with a vacuum cleaner at sea?"

"It was only for you, dear," said Polly. "I thought you would like to have your brains massaged with it occasionally."—New York Times.

The Minister's Tools.

No workman can do good work without sufficient tools. Books are the minister's tools. He must have them if he is to serve his people well. Yet many a minister's salary is so small that he is unable to provide the commonest necessities for his family and have enough left to supply himself with needed books. The church that makes it impossible for its pastor to buy books harms itself even more than it harms the minister.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

Etiquette.

In our republican atmosphere old fashioned etiquette has ceased to be necessary, but the word "etiquette" is suggested whenever one hears the phrase "that's the ticket," for "etiquette" is French for "ticket," and its present English signification sprang from the old custom of distributing tickets or etiquettes which contained the ceremonies, etc., to be observed at any formal event, exactly like our word "program."

Every man ought to be doing something more worthy of himself than just making a living.

It's just this way at an opera. The women go to see what the other women in the audience have on, and men go to see what the women on the stage have left off.

In a recent divorce case a wife ad mitted that she thought more of certain dog than of her husband. Na turally, this made the husband grow but even this did not win back he affections.

Many a man is perfect,—in his foo ishness.

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

once blooming and mature, the promise and fulfilment side by side. The full crimson lips were parted in a smile that had the softness of infancy and the richness of womanhood in its warm curve. The magnificent vitality that animated the vigorous, supple form could but thrill the beholder with a sense of its passion and power. No shy nymph or fleeting dryad this; no pale saint of medieval days or slight sylph of modern times; a goddess for the moment and nothing less, with the eternal youth of divinity, not the evanescent springtide of incomplete development.

Mrs. Winter glanced at Regy, saw his expression of approbation, and, turning, caught that other look that shone from beneath Di Loria's broad eyelids. She recalled some words spoken of the Neapolitans by the critical Frenchman: "Many among them have heads like Corregio, with a tranquilly voluptuous air and a smile constantly blissful and serene. . . When they address a woman this smile becomes more captivating and tender; there is no French piquancy and petulance in it; they seem to be enraptured, to relish with the keenest zest every word that drops from her mouth." It seemed to her that she might find consolation in these glittering generalities. But Di Loria had ceased to smile, and the most determined feminine optimism could not ignore the special ardor of his glance.

It changed and lightened instantly into the usual sunny benevolence as he met the troubled eyes of the older lady.

"See, Madame,' he said, touching Rhoda's fragrant burden lightly, "the tree which sends this greeting to you stands in a shaded corner of my garden, away from the full sun, quite by itself, though the other trees are not far away. There is a high wall behind it, with a break in it, and this bough has pushed itself through the break and is all day long in the sunshine. See, this end is months in advance of the other. Is it not a pretty freak?"

"Oh, yes, and what a pity to break it!"

"That you might see it? Oh, no," said Di Loria. He rearranged the cushions for Rhoda with his own hands, for his guests had come thus early to see the sunset, which daily spectacle was especially well viewed from this loggia, and they were not to dine until eight o'clock.

There was an air of subdued exultation about him, an indefinable radiance of content that disturbed Mrs. Winter. She scarcely needed to be told that as they stood in the sheltered corner of the garden, and Di Loria broke the bough from the orange-tree to hand to Rhoda, he had said: "So you go down to Amalfi on Thursday. I wonder if I dare suggest that you permit me to weary you again with my presence? I may be of some service—you know Amalfi is not reached by rail—and I have not seen that place in two years."

And Rhoda had answered with outward composure, but an inward guilty throb of delight:

"We shall be so glad if you will go with us."

CHAPTER XIII.

AN AFTERNOON DRIVE.

Yes, guilty. She knew it now. She wanted him with them, and shew ould not count the cost to herself, to any one. The cost? She would not mar this present by the shuddering premonition of what that must be. She had never been happyin her life, and she would be so now, let come what might. In a few months' time she would be Merriah's wife, doing her duty with never a look backward. This time was her own; she would make the most of it. It was all she would ever have.

Of any possible evil consequences to Di Loria she was honestly skeptical, though it is probable that there was a little wilful blindness in her determined ignoring of such a chance. She was not altogteher uninfluenced by the general incredulity as to the enduring properties of love in the Italian heart, and she seemed to herself so worn, and old, and sad, that there could be no faintest danger to the affections of so bright and highly endowed a person as the young marquis, on whom every gift of nature and fortune seemed bestowed. She would have unhesitatingly subscribed to Mrs. Winter's opinion that they were thoroughly unsuited to each other, had she considered the possibility of such a tie. But the time for that was not yet come. She knew herself faithless, since she found a happiness in Di Loria's presence which was new to her, but she meant to keep her troth.

"Eugene will never, never know," she said to herself, throwing herself down on the couch in her room, and burying her face in her hands. "And I am not wronging him. I care for him as much as I ever did—only I know now how little that is."

Mrs. Winter knocked at her door.

Mrs. Winter knocked at her door. "Are you ready to drive to Astronia?" she asked with a searching glance. It was the day after their dinner at the Pompeian villa.

Rhoda turned her burning face away, as she reached her hat from its box.

"Almost. In a minute," she said, catching her breath quickly.

They sat silently side by side as they rolled over the lava pavement on their way to the royal chase, for Regy had gone to a matinee at the San Carlo. After a long while they spoke, but it was of indifferent matters, endeavoring to recall their absent attention to the objects of interest by the roadside. It was quite late in the afternoon when they entered the park, and the long avenues were in deep gloom beneath the heavily arching trees. The air grew chill about them, and Rhoda drew Mrs. Winter's furs closer and gathered her own black laces about her throat with a little shiver. The whole circumference of the grounds lies within the sunken crater of an extinct volcano, and the dense growth of poplars and holm-oaks made it somber and dim even at midday.

Mrs. Winter, always extremely sensitive to light and atmosphere, seemed to fall into deep depression, as she looked down the long, cathedral-like aisles of the trees. She was thoroughly unhappy. She was anxious about Eugené, whose prospects she felt were imperilled both by his own recent actions and the new element which the chances of travel had introduced into the life of his finance, and she was too genuinely fond of Rhoda not to be disturbed by finding herself in utter mental opposition to her. It was very lonely in the park. Now and then they met a group of peasants who made smiling obeisance and stood aside to watch the carriage go by, or some small shy animal fled swiftly

SHE EARNS $10,000 A YEAR.

Miss Katherine I. Harrison, Private Secretary to the Late H. H. Rogers.

Katherine I. Harrison, private secretary to the late H. H. Rogers, is harder to reach than J. P. Morgan, James Stillman, John W. Gates or any other of the kings of finance. She is the one woman in the world who knows everything that goes on in Standard Oil. For doing what she is required to do—and not the least of her duties is to keep her mouth sealed—she receives $10,000 a year. You might count on your fingers the women in the United States who receive this salary.

What made Katherine I. Harrison so valuable to H. H. Rogers and his partners in the Standard Oil? A hundred answers could be given to this question. Other women are as bright, and other women are possessed of equal executive ability. But the best answer of them all may be summed up in two words—absolute trustworthiness.

Miss Harrison can keep a secret. She can hold information inviolate that would make a poor man a millionaire.

MISS KATHERINE I. HARRISON.

There are men who would pay a king's ransom to know a tithe of what she knows.

This important personage in the Standard Oil is tall and spare—close to six feet. Her face is stern, but comely. Altogether she is an attractive type of the American business woman. She dresses well, but severely. Her favorite office dress is a plain but short skirt of dullish blue, a white shirt waist, a blue four-in-hand tie and a turndown collar. When she goes out she wears a short, closely cut jacket of covert cloth and a toque trimmed with feathers. Her shoes are low cut and have broad soles.

But first of all the observer notes Miss Harrison's eyeglasses. They are set in a golden bow and have great, thick lenses. When you try to look at her through these fortresses of glass you see yourself reflected in tiny replica. On the contrary, they magnify to you Miss Harrison's steady, insistent eyes until they wring from you your secret.

Miss Harrison wrote most of Mr. Rogers' letters. She signed many of his checks. She never committed her employer to anything.

Miss Harrison lives with her mother and two sisters in a handsome Queen Anne house at 1354 Dean street, Brooklyn. She contributes to the welfare of the family and has a pretty fortune.

And how old is Miss Harrison? Well, she was Mr. Rogers' private secretary for eighteen years. She may be thirty-five; she may be more.

Next to Mrs. Hetty Green she ranks today as probably the most important business woman in all New York.

New View of Education of Women.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot has been exceedingly gracious to college women's clubs since he laid down the burden of Harvard direction, and only spiteful women recall what strenuous opposition he made to certain innovations in Radcliffe. He has been addressing the intellectual women in and out of season, and he has urged them not to henpeck the men because of those intellectual attainments. In a recent address before a college club of Baltimore he praised higher education for women enthusiastically, but he deprecated the limited view generally assigned to it. He thinks that in the home education is of more genuine benefit to society and for the future of the race than in the professions and that in the last analysis knowledge benefits women only in so far as it trains them for their natural duties. Instead of seeing the menace other great educators see in the desire which the modern woman has for obtaining the best educational advantages, Dr. Eliot takes vast comfort in the idea. The next generation, he thinks, being trained by intelligent and intellectual mothers, will swing the pendulum the other way for the men of the American race. Instead of being consumed with business ambitions to the exclusion of mental culture, he holds, they will be trained from their cradle upward to estimate properly the necessity of college training.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

BASEBALL.

Ty Cobb, Best Base Stealer.

"How do you do it, Ty?"

The question, addressed to Detroit's great outfielder, had to do with Cobb's marvellous base stealing.

The Georgian "peach" leads the American League in base pilfers for 1909, with more clean steals to his credit than any other two players.

Ty blushed scarlet. He's about the most modest man in baseball, anyway.

"Oh, I can't tell about that," he said. "Maybe it's because I try to get a good start. Maybe it's something else, just luck, for instance. Hughey knows. Here's Jennings now. Suppose you ask him."

"Oh, that isn't a very hard question," remarked the Tiger leader, when the question was put to him. "Ty not only gets a good start and is marvellously fast, but note this:

"He is full of motion the moment he starts away.

"Now, there are a lot of fast men in baseball, men who run the bases like racehorses, but it takes them two or three strides to get their gait.

"Cobb's different. When once he plunges down the line he's going at his top speed already. That saves him the fraction of a second that often saves his life.

"Then, too, Ty is a very hard man to touch out. He is a splendid slider and has a knack, all of his own, of throwing himself out of the reach of the man with the ball.

"Old-timers compare Bill Lange's base stealing with Ty Cobb's, but there is no similarity. Lange came head or feet first into the bag. All the man at second or third had to do was to straddle the base and touch him as he came along.

"'Billy' Hamilton was an awfully hard man to get. He was a good deal like Ty, away at full speed the moment the signal was given. When the second baseman or shortstop got the ball and rushed out for Billy, why Billy simply wasn't there.

"One of the hardest base stealers to touch was old Tom Brown. He'd come charging into the base in utter disregard of the man at the base, and many a shortstop and second baseman who stood his ground was cut down.

"Ty has a method all his own in sliding around the man with the ball, but I should say that his ability to get off at tip-top speed is his best asset."

Ty led the American League last year and the year before in batting. His fielding was always a sensation. This spring he set out to become as much of a marvel on the bases as he had been at bat and in the field.

"He was put on his mettle when Lou Criger said: "Cobb is a dub on the bases, and I'll show him up every chance I get."

Ty bids fair to surpass his ambition and the hopes of his ardent friends. He has already stolen more bases by two than any man in the American League stole last year. Pat Doherty, with forty-seven stolen bases to his credit, led the league in base running in 1908.

Eddie Collins is Ty's nearest rival this year, with twenty-seven stolen bases to his credit.

SPORTING NOTES.

A baseball game took place on the Tigers' diamond, between the Junior Coleman Flats and Tigers, and the Flats kids ate the Tigers alive. The score at the end of the ninth innings was 11 to 3 in favor of the former. The battery for Coleman's Flats were Loucks and Wims, and for the losers Delong and Weese. The umpire was R. Cooper. He was fierce.

Baptized Seven.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Spencer, Grove street, Rev. D. N. Morden, of St. Mary'sville, baptized seven children, as follows: Daughter and two sons of Mr. and Mrs. H. Stitts; daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. McGormell; daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Spencer; daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hawkins; son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Hawkins. Dainty refreshments were then served, after which the children presented the reverend gentleman with a pocket Bible.

A STIRRING INCIDENT.

How a Child's Life Was Saved by a Blast of Bugles.

The drum major of a German regiment recently showed that he does not lose his head in an emergency, says the Chicago News. The regiment was on the march from one station to another and had halted on a country road to rest. Suddenly the men heard the terrified cries of a child, and, looking in the direction from which they came, they saw a little girl running for her life from a maddened bull. The animal was tearing along with lowered horns and was so close to the girl that rescue by interference or even by shooting the bull seemed impossible. Just as the men had given up the child for lost the drum major shouted to the buglers, who stood near by with their instruments in their hands, to blow a loud blast. Not realizing what he meant, but obeying mechanically, they blew a blast that would have waked the dead. The moment the bull heard the sound he stopped and looked in surprise at the men and then raised his head and bellowed with all his might. Meanwhile several of the men had reached the child, and when the bull had recovered from his astonishment at the unusual noise she was in a place of safety.

The Lost Balloon.

Up, up, way up in the air
My dear balloon went flying.
Perhaps you think that I don't care,
But it was new,
And it was blue,
And, oh, I feel like crying!

Up, up, way up in the sky
It never heard me calling.
It's dropping now, and that is why
Some other boy
Will see my toy
And catch it while it's falling!

PARLIAMENTARY DON'TS.

Rules That Will Help the Clubwoman to Preside.

Don't misappropriate the funds of the club. That sounds most dreadfully harsh. It makes a noise like an absconding cashier. But that is not the idea. It is not the don't for the one who dishonestly makes away with the money. It is a simple rule of parliamentary law and business law that money should be used for the purposes designated in the constitution. These are the only legitimate uses for moneys raised by dues and assessments in federated bodies. For instance, a body will after long deliberation fix upon a certain amount for dues for its members.

All of the uses for which this money is to be put will be carefully gone over. The necessary traveling expenses perhaps of the officers are to be paid. No provisions are made for anything but the bare necessities of the organization. At some meeting an enthusiastic member, without any consideration of what are the legitimate and constitutional uses of that money, will jump to her feet and move that we donate $50 for some altogether foreign purpose. The president, without a moment's hesitation and before the assembly has really sifted the matter, puts the motion, calls for remarks, which the careful and conservative ones are afraid to make, and the motion is carried by default. There is no thought of how many fifteen, twenty-five, thirty-five cent dues it is going to require to pay this sum. There is no thought that the organization is going to be almost bankrupt. The president, who is the guardian of the law and constitution of her body, has not said: "This is unconstitutional. If you wish to divert our money into this channel, you must first amend your constitution. It is clearly illegal. I must not let you do this." The treasurer, the watch set over the money, should have demurred. But under the little excitement of doing some good work, of helping along a "cause," the funds have been misappropriated, and the organization suffers. And the blame lies with the presiding officer, who should be watchful for just such things.

It is often the case that assessments for necessary expenses must be made simply because the funds constitutionally provided and collected for the purpose have been all used carelessly for other things. If you wish to branch out in donations, if you wish to make gifts to officers, see to it that your constitution has covered the point or else serve notice that you wish to do these things and have a little bigger sum for dues, stating what use is to be made of the money in the amendment. If this were always done there would be more harmony in clubs and it would save the respect of organizations which have gone under just because the drain of assessments and dues are unbearable.

GAME FOR YOUNGSTERS.

Peanut Jab, the Funniest, Newest Thing Out.

A good game to start the ball a-rolling at a party would be peanut jab. As many dishes for water are provided as there are couples. These are placed on small card tables. On the top of each dish of water a dozen peanuts are set floating. Then each individual is provided with a hatpin and the game is called.

The object is to jab the nuts with the pin and land them in a pretty dish for this purpose without touching them with the fingers. When time is called the couple that has been most successful retains the nuts in lieu of score cards. The game is progressive, the successful contestants working toward the head table. Prizes may be in keeping with the season. Among these are summer bonnets made of raffia to hang beside a dressing bureau and bold hatpins; fluffy ducklings, chicken powder puffs, white jack rabbits, egg cups and other little novelties.

Among the old fashioned forfeits were the following:

"Bow to the prettiest, kneel to the wittiest and kiss the one you love best."

Recite a nursery rhyme with appropriate gestures and elocutionary effect.

Recite the table of nine in the multiplication table backward.

(If a lady)—Tie a gentleman's necktie.

(If a man)—Show in pantomime how a woman does up her hair.

Sit crosslegged and with folded arms on the floor, Turkish fashion, and get up without unfolding the arms.

Pose for your picture—"Look pleasant, please."

Hippyty-hop around the room, bowing to each lady as you pass.

Name the presidents of the United States.

A Witty Entry.

Mme. Ghosal, the daughter of the Maharajah of Cooch Behar, the Indian prince whose magnificent attire makes him one of the most picturesque figures at Court, can be very witty on occasions. Once, when staying at a country house, she was asked to write down a thought in an album, and seeing that someone had inscribed the somewhat sententious phrase, "Do right, and fear no man," she took the pen and promptly wrote underneath, "Don't write, and fear no woman."

A WELSH FESTIVAL.

Eisteddfod is Opened by Musicians In London.

In a pretty glade in Kensington Gardens, in London, near the Serpentine, the Welsh bards celebrated recently the ritual of the Gorsedd, which marks the opening of the national eisteddfod.

According to the ancient tradition, the rites must be performed "in the face of the sun, the eye of light," and though the somber skies made it impossible to carry out the letter of the law, it was fulfilled sufficiently in the spirit by the performance of the rites in a druidical circle erected in the open air.

The circle consists of unhewn stones, outside of which three other stones are placed. In the centre of the circle is the Maen Llog, a large stone supported on three others.

A trumpeter, standing upon this stone, sounded the Corn Gwlad, thus formally opening the Gorsedd, and the prayer of the Gorsedd was recited in Welsh.

The bards, in their blue, green and white robes, presented a striking spectacle, and the insignia of his office rendered Dyfed, the archdruid, a notable figure. With his flowing white robe, oakleaf crown, and golden torque of horseshoe shape, he was impressive indeed as he mounted the Maen Llog and cried aloud thrice in a voice of thunder the formal challenge, "A oes Heddwch?" (Is it Peace?).

"Heddwch!" the assembly shouted, and Dyfed sheathed again the eight-foot sword which, in symbolic rite, he had half drawn from its scabbard.

Speech-making in Welsh followed, and then the bards and onlookers trooped off to the Albert Hall, where the eisteddfod met.

The proceedings at the hall during the morning were disappointing in a great many ways, and there appeared to be a deplorable lack of organization.

The best singing was heard in the chief choral competition, in which the first prize went to the Carnarvon Choral Society, and the second to the Llanelly Choral Society.

At the afternoon meeting Mr. Balfour made a most interesting speech in praise of music.

"Music has ever been one of the great arts in which Welshmen have excelled," he stated. "There cannot be a gift which carries with it higher pleasures—pleasures more easy of attainment, pleasures which leave no after-sting, no after-taste of evil, but which raise and must raise the whole level of civilized pleasures among the people who practice them.

"Music knows no national barrier; music is not subject to the limitations which unhappily beset language. Music speaks to men of all races and of all tongues."

Costly Pennies.

Who was Wiglaf? Numismatists know, and gave £449 for two of his silver pennies at Sotheby's. Wiglaf, or Withlafe, as his name is sometimes spelt in the old chronicles, was that King of Mercia tributary to Egbert, first King of England, and held nominal sway between 825 and 839. His silver penny, without bust, with a cross in centre and a pellet in each angle within a beaded centre on the obverse, and lunettes and pellets on the reserve, caused exciting bidding, which reached £275 (Spink). Only one other of this particular type is known, and it is fortunately in the British Museum. Another Wiglaf penny, with a rude head in a circle and a cross-crosslet in centre of reverse, realized £174 (Lincoln). This was found at Dorking in 1817. The sale was that of the famous Rashleigh collection. A penny of Ecgberht (765-791)—not to be confounded with Ecgberht, son of Offa of Mercia, but the King of Kent mentioned in old charters—without a bust, but with the King's name, made £153 (Lincoln). Only three other coins of this type are known, two being in the Hunter Museum, Glasgow. An East Anglian penny of Eadvald, 819-827, realized £52 (Lincoln), and one of Jaenberht, who was Archbishop of Canterbury between 766 and 190, £93. This was discovered near Netley Abbey, and wears the names of Offa and the Archbishop. In the digging of the foundation for the Martyrs' Memorial at Oxford, another of this prelate's pennies was found, and this fetched £20. A penny with the diademed bust of Cynethryth, who was Offa's Queen, made £30 (Spink).

Lord Balcarres as a Walker.

It was Lord Balcarres, a trustee of the National Portrait Gallery, who announced the saving to England of Holbein's picture, "The Duchess of Milan." His lordship has crowded much good work into his thirty-seven years of life. Not only has he distinguished himself in the cause of art and architecture — he is a trained architect—but he has also served the state in the House of Commons as one of the Unionist Whips. A notable characteristic is his rapid walk. "Burns' gallop is nowhere in it with Balcarres' walk," growled a recalcitrant member on one occasion after being fetched back to the never-ending divisions while trying to escape. "It's no good unless you are streets ahead."

Helping the Enemy.

A coal heaver was getting in a load of coal in the suburbs of London. He was shoveling in the coal at a good rate when he was startled by a terrific yell from the house adjoining.

"Wot the dickens is the matter?" queried the coal man, starting up.

A disheveled looking individual made his appearance at the door.

"Matter, you thickhead!" shouted the man, frantically endeavoring to pull his hair up in clots by the roots. "You are putting the coal down the wrong hole. My wife's people live there!"—London Tit-Bits.

Followed to Tomb by Masonic Brethren

FUNERAL OF LATE MR. CHARLES H. KYLE WAS ONE OF THE LARGEST EVER SEEN IN THIS CITY.

That the late Mr. Charles H. Kyle was exceedingly popular with all classes in this city was strikingly evidenced yesterday afternoon, when the obsequies took place. The funeral was under Masonic auspices, and the craftsmen and citizens in general were out in large numbers to pay the last tribute of respect to one who had many friends and no enemies. The scene, as the cortege passed down Front St., was a most impressive one. The funeral took place from the Kyle House, where services were conducted by Rev. Canon Gribble, of Niagara Falls, Ont., father of Mr. Arthur Gribble, of this city, who also conducted the services at the grave. The bearers were:

Mayor Marsh	John Irwin
Ald. Thomas	James A. Roy
A. Vandervoort	James Brown
Hope McGinnis	Arthur P. Carroll

The floral tributes were very beautiful, among them being the following:

Square and Compass — Moira Lodge No. 11, A., F. and A. M.

Gates Ajar — Elmwood Camp, of which deceased was a member.

Maltese Cross—Messrs. Robert Foy, Robert Goudy, L. Love and Mayor Marsh.

Large Cross—Mrs. Joseph C. Warrington.

Anchor—Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Carroll.

Wreath—Mr. Hope McGinnis.

Heart—Mr. Alex. Wardhaugh.

Cross—Mr. and Mrs. L. Ketcheson.

Wreath—Mrs. Geo. Reeves.

Star—Messrs. Harry Lake, Arthur Curry, Wm. Reid and Harry Day.

Pillow—"At Rest"—Family.

Heart—Messrs. Martin and Hale.

Bouquets — Mr. and Mrs. Willie McGregor, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lutton, Mr. and Mrs. F. Allore, Mr. and Mrs. Dando, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Cherry, Mr. Charles Lavis, jr., Mr. Jack Hamilton.

Boys Were After The Fragrant Weed.

SAD CASE OF YOUTHFUL DEPRAVITY— THREE YOUNGSTERS STOLE TOBACCO — USED APPROVED CRACKSMEN'S METHODS.

A sad case of youthful depravity was witnessed in this city yesterday afternoon, when three boys, of tender years, the eldest about 13 and the youngest six or seven, proceeded, in a most business-like way, to steal tobacco from the back entrance to a wholesale grocery establishment situated not far from the post office.

It seems that the lads used approved cracksmen's methods, the two larger ones keeping a look-out while the youngest was sent in to do the pilfering. It was a most daring thing to do in broad daylight. The youngsters, it is said, were frightened away before they secured much booty. The police were afterwards trying to secure identification of the boys, but without success, we understand.

"Burglars" Painted Parsonage Floors.

Burglaries have been rare in Stirling of late years. A rather bold entrance was made into St. Andrew's manse a few days ago in the absence of the occupants. Unknown parties secured a key and in broad daylight entered the house. The disordered furniture in some of the rooms showed that considerable trouble had been taken by the daring parties, but nothing of value was taken. Newly-painted floors and a kitchen painted throughout proves the "burglars" to be of a better type than the ordinary.—News-Argus.

Died in Stirling.

Mr. Thomas Montgomery, one of the oldest residents of Stirling village, died on Sunday at the advanced age of 90 years. The deceased had been for upwards of 60 years a resident of this county and was favorably known to many. Mr. Montgomery was born in Scotland, but came to Canada when a young man and settled in this county. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and in politics was a staunch Conservative. An aged widow and seven daughters, one of whom resides in this city, survive. The remains were interred this afternoon.

Ohio Mining Man Misfortune's Mark

BORN ON FRIDAY, THE 13TH, LIFE HAS BEEN CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS.

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Frank J. Powers, said to be a wealthy miner of Lead City, S.D., will leave Chicago to-day for the home of his mother in Chillicothe, Ohio, where she is seriously ill, unless additional misfortune reaches him before he leaves. According to the story told the police here to-day he is "King of the Unfortunates."

Powers intended leaving Lead City three weeks ago for Chillicothe, he said, but he broke his ankle. He remained there a week, then started on his trip. At Omaha he received a broken nose and other injuries. He arrived in Chicago Saturday and had scarcely arrived when his suitcase was stolen. Yesterday, he said, he was struck by an automobile and bruised.

Powers said he was born on Friday, the 13th, and was 13th child of a family of 14. He said the only real luck he ever had was when he won $13 on a horse race, but his pleasure was of short duration, for he lost the money on the next race and was forced to walk home.

The Last Rites

The funeral services of the late Mr. G. S. Johnston, ex-High Constable, took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, College Hill. At the house services were conducted by Rev. R. N. Adams and Mr. Bruce Hunter. The remains were taken to Brighton for interment. The bearers were Messrs. J. McQuigge, Vancott, Carlyle, Mather, Wilson and F. M. Clarke. A number of relatives and friends were in attendance at the obsequies.

GETTING YOUR CHILDREN READY FOR SCHOOL—DO NOT OVERLOOK THEIR EYES.

Perfect and easy vision is necessary to stand the strain imposed upon them by their many school duties. Eye Strain uses up an excessive amount of nervous energy and causes the child to become tired and disinterested in its work. Properly Fitted Glasses have released many children from the bondage of eye-strain and made them happy and energetic scholars. Do not ignore frequent complaints of headache, tired or aching eyes, but let us make a careful and scientific examination, and if necessary supply the Proper Glasses. There is no truth in the frequent statement, "I do not like putting glasses on children, because they may always have to wear them." The reverse is the truth, by putting the Correct Glasses on the child during the growing time in many cases they outgrow the error entirely and are able later to go without glasses, whereas if neglected too long they will always have to wear them without getting as satisfactory results even by wearing the glasses. Charges moderate. Consultation free.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots of butchers, or rather light exporters, were worth $5.25 to $5.50; loads of good butchers, $5 to $5.25; medium $4.60 to $4.90; common, $3.50 to $4.50; cows, $2.50 to $4.30.

Milkers and Springers.

A limited number of milkers and springers were quoted at $35 to $55 each.

Veal Calves.

The market for veal calves was steady at $3.50 to $6 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

H. P. Kennedy quoted selects, at $8, fed and watered, at the market, and $7.75, f.o.b., cars, at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Aug. 23.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Aug. 21 were 3550 cattle, 1700 sheep and lambs, 1900 hogs and 1300 calves. The offerings on the market for local consumption this morning were 1300 cattle, 825 sheep and lambs, 900 hogs and 525 calves.

Owing to the liberal supplies of cattle coming forward, and the quality of stock not being up to the market for this season of the year, an easy feeling continues to prevail in the market, and prices are steadily tending towards a lower level. The weather was fine and cool, and in consequence buyers turned out in large numbers, consequently the demand was good and quite an active trade was done. There was some demand from exporters on account of more encouraging cable advices from Liverpool, which noted an advance in prices of ¼c to ½c per lb. since this day week, with a firm trade doing on account of cooler weather. The result was that supplies of all good cattle on the spot were cleaned up and only a few very inferior bulls were left unsold. The best beeves sold at 5c to 5¼c; good at 4¾c to 5⅛c; fair at 4c to 4½c; medium at 3½c to 3¾c; common at 3c to 3¼c, and inferior at 2c to 2¾c per lb. Altho receipts of hogs were much smaller than usual, there not being 1000 on the market, yet a weaker feeling prevailed, and prices declined 20c to 25c per 100 lbs. as compared with those paid last Wednesday. This is due to the fact that the quality of the stock coming forward is comparatively thin, they being only spring hogs, consequently they cost considerably more to dress than a good, fat hog, and have to be bought cheaper. The demand from packers was good for supplies, and an active trade was done, sales of selected lots being made at $8.40 to $8.50 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. Cable advices from Liverpool, London and Bristol last week reported the markets weaker for Canadian bacon, and noted a decline in prices of 1s to 2s per cwt.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for small meats, except that the feeling in lambs was a little stronger owing to smaller offerings and a good demand, and sales were made at 6c per lb. A fair trade was done in sheep at prices ranging from 3½c to 4c per lb. The demand for calves was good, of which supplies were none too large, and prices ruled high, at from $2 to $12 each, as to size and quality.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts for the week ending Aug. 21 were 2217 cattle for export account, 1700 cattle, 1600 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 650 calves for local consumption. Supplies on the market this morning consisted of 550 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 500 calves and 15 hogs.

Brantford Memorial.

Brantford, Aug. 24.—The designs committee of the Bell Memorial Association has awarded to W. S. Allward, Toronto, the contract for the completion of the telephone memorial by 1912 in this city. A subscription of $1,000 has been received from J. P. Morgan. It has been decided to have recognition made by inscription on the monument of the inventions of the automobile telephone by Lorimer Bros. and Romaine Callender, who were Brantford men, who commenced their work in this city, which thus clinches its title of the Telephone City.

Alberta Butter Centre.

Calgary, Alta., Aug. 24.—Samuel Haugadahl of Minnesota, who secured the grand prize and world's championship at World's Fair for butter, has purchased irrigable land in Bow River Valley. He states the land here is capable of sustaining 100 head of cows to the acre, and that ultimately the district will rival Denmark, both in the quality and quantity of the butter made. This he claims must follow the alfalfa crops that are now being harvested.

Jews May Organize.

Montreal, Aug 24.—As a result of the street fight Saturday between Jews and French-Canadians, an organization to protect the Hebrews is on foot.

One of their leaders declared today he was trying to get together a corps of 500 men to protect their own people from assaults.

The charge against three young Jews arrested by the police for disturbing the peace was postponed till Thursday.

Thousand Families Homeless.

Krementchug, Russia, Aug. 24.—A thousand families in this district have been rendered homeless by a fire that started Sunday in a local lumber mill and raged throughout the night. The local appliances were inadequate to control the flames and the mills and a large section of the dwellings of Krementchug were destroyed.

Explosion Kills Five.

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 24.—Five persons were killed and twelve seriously injured by an explosion at the city gas works yesterday.

The explosion occurred in the purifying chamber.

Youth Defies Fifty Men.

New York, Aug. 24.—The captain, the mate and a shipyard gang of 50 men at work on the steamer Harry Luckenbach, were helpless for half an hour yesterday against Salvatore Farina, a Portuguese youth of 18, who ran amuck with a sheath knife. John Dalton, the mate, was so badly cut across the abdomen that he will probably die, and his brother Joseph, the captain, was less seriously wounded.

The fight began when the mate cuffed Farina for an impudent reply, and ended with two men wounded on the deck. Farina backed up against the foremast, an 18-inch blade in his hand, and the crew ringed around at a respectful distance. He surrendered to the police.

A Sudden Call.

New Liskeard, Aug. 24.—Alexander Scott, aged 65, an old resident of this place, dropped dead this afternoon. He was for some years an engineer at Windsor Ont. He was walking through his kitchen when he was overtaken by a paralytic stroke.

Cholera and Plague Ravages.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 24.—The Asiatic cholera is being kept down in St. Petersburg, there having been only 24 cases and 14 deaths in the 24 hours ended at noon to-day, but it is spreading in provincial towns and villages.

Lord Lonsdale's Bet.

There are few better all-round sportsmen in the Empire than the Earl of Lonsdale, who is taking such an active interest in the Travel and Sports Exhibition, due to open next month at Olympia. He rides, shoots, motors, boxes, yachts, and is an expert slipper of greyhounds. Horses, however, have been the hobby of his life, and on matters connected with them his opinions are of great value. Once Lord Lonsdale made a bet he would drive twenty miles in less than an hour. The roads were bad, but the weather was worse. For the first five miles his lordship drove a four-in-hand, a pair for another five miles, rode postilion of a pair for the next five, and completed the remainder of the distance by driving a single horse for the last stage. The entire journey was covered in four and a half minutes under the hour.

Engine-Cleaner as an Artist.

Another romantic struggle for fame is illustrated by the career of Mr. Alfred Hudson, who has had a picture accepted for this year's Academy in London. He started life as an engine-cleaner, and in the course of time was promoted to his present post of chief clerk in the locomotive department of the Northeastern Railway at Leeds. He developed a passion for art, but had no money to purchase the necessary equipment. By exercising the strictest economy, however, he was able to save out of his wages sufficient to procure some brushes and paint. He has exhibited in different parts of the country.

Western Fires Not Serious.

Winnipeg, Aug. 24.—The Western Associated Press Nelson correspondent wired that there is absolutely nothing serious in the forest fires in British Columbia. Several small bush fires have excited some alarm on account of the dryness of vegetation in the Kootenay country, but there is little danger, and showers are reported at some places, which have relieved all anxiety.

HARRIMAN IS FEEBLE

Railroad King Reaches Home After Health Trip.

All America Awaits Home-Coming of Great Financier, Whose Illness Has Worried the Stock Markets—Will Take a Rest at Country Home—Plans a Campaign of Expansion and Development.

New York, Aug. 25.—Edward H. Harriman, genius of finance, leader of men, and master builder of railroads, came back to the United States yesterday, while the financial world stood on its tiptoes in anxiety and expectancy.

He came back as he left on June 1st last, a sick, tired man, seeking health.

Last night, surrounded by his family and physicians at his magnificent, though uncompleted summer home at Arden, on the Hudson, he has begun the "after cure," which he needs after the enervating baths and dietic treatment he underwent at the Austrian resort, Bad Gastein. How long he will remain in seclusion, how long it will be before he resumes the active direction of his vast railroad interests, depends solely upon his health.

He arrived yesterday feeble, face gaunt, and voice weak. "And I have come home," he said, "for a cure and not for work."

Many great Americans have returned to their country's shores under extraordinary circumstances, but never has there been a more remarkable home-coming of a private citizen than E. H. Harriman's.

Great stock market operators paused as his ship drew near, the stock itself marked time, and the industrial world turned its eyes seaward, as it were, eager for a glimpse of the face of the man whose illness abroad has furnished much material for stock market rumors.

Contrary to expectations, the financier did not leave the Kaiser Wilhelm II. down the bay, but remained on board until the vessel docked at Hoboken. Then, after being assisted ashore, he boarded a Southern Pacific tug and was taken to Jersey City, where he was again assisted to his private car. From there the trip was quickly made up the Hudson to his mountain home at Arden.

Then, reclining on a couch, pale and enfeebled, but with his usual optimism and tenacity of mind, he talked to an audience of more than a score of newspaper men before leaving for Arden.

Turning to railroad matters, one of the first questions asked concerned his reported option on a controlling interest in New York Central stock, an option which would give him with his other railroads, an unbroken line of steel east and west from coast to coast.

"That is an easy one," said the financier, smiling, "but I would not tell you if I had."

"Do you mean to put the surplus earnings into the roads rather than to turn them over to the stockholders?" he was asked.

"Yes, that's about it," he said, "that is my plan—construction and development—and I guess the public and the press are convinced now that I am not a speculator; it was a hard three years. I wish I could wipe them out, but I am through with that now."

Mr. Harriman would not say just what new undertakings he proposed, "but," said he, "it is in my mind to open up new territory and to build new tributary lines. This means new settlements and more people."

Gramophone Can't Be Stoped by Law.

Kingston, Aug. 25.—Robt. Lipman, owner of the Princess Theatre, was in court yesterday for infraction of civic ordinance recently for running his gramophone to the disturbance of citizens. The council thought it had the matter clinched, but the magistrate after hearing the evidence decided that the noise was not unusual and dismissed the complaint. He said the whistling by steamers in the harbor might be disturbing, but it was not unusual, and the same applied to gramophones.

Won't Extend Salmon Season.

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 26.—An answer has been received from Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, to the effect that the canners' request for an extension of the salmon season, cannot be granted.

SCIENTISTS FOREGATHER.

Empire's Greatest Investigators Convene in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 25.—This morning saw the opening of the Convention of the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

The notables in the realm of learning of the Empire poured into the city all yesterday, until last night it was difficult to secure quarters at any of the prominent hotels.

This morning there were meetings to organize the various sections, while to-night there will be a big mass meeting for men in the Walker Theatre, at which the president, Sir J. J. Thomson, will give his inaugural address. There will also be short addresses of welcome by Premier Roblin and Mayor Evans.

A large contingent of American guests of the British scientists, arrived yesterday to take part in the deliberations.

That the meeting of the Association will be of great practical value to the West and Canada is shown by the action of Rev. Dr. Grey, warden of a large college at Berkshire, England. He has purchased 2,000 acres of land of his own at Fish Creek, to the southwest of Calgary. Here he will establish an up-to-date and thoroughly equipped farming school, to which he can send the boys direct.

With this arrangement, he is certain that a large number of boys will be willing to come, and he will make preliminary arrangements for the first contingent on his arrival home. Dr. Grey will put an experienced man in charge of the farm.

The text of the Naval Establishment Bill, which sanctions the transfer of Halifax and Esquimalt to Canada, has been issued in London.

The report of T. A. Murray, the Alberta Government's expert on Regina sewerage system, condemns the present system as inadequate and faulty.

Hon. A. G. MacKay, leader of the Ontario Liberal Party, states that there is no truth in any report that he proposes to give up the leadership of the Provincial Opposition.

To an audience that taxed the largest hall in Halifax to its utmost capacity last night, Hon. George E. Foster delivered an address on "Some Aspects of Canadian Nationality."

It is understood the C. N. R. will increase the pay of freight handlers at Fort William, profiting by the experience of the C. P. R., and forestalling the result of the conciliation board.

The big arena and skating rink at Portage La Prairie was totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning; loss, $12,000. It was the work of a firebug, traces of gasoline being observed by those who first arrived on the scene.

At Price, Utah, C. L. Maxwell, known as "Gun Play" Maxwell, was shot and instantly killed by a sheriff on the street. Maxwell had an interstate reputation as a "bad man" and went to Price with the avowed intention of settling an account with the sheriff.

Calls Publisher Assassin.

St. John, N.B., Aug. 25.—In his address to the Grand Jury yesterday Judge Forbes asked them to find true bills against two Greeks who sold Free Speech, the paper edited by C. Bruce McDougall, who was arrested in Moncton last week and is now in jail here. Referring to the paper, the judge said: "No man is safe from this midnight assassin, who travels in the guise of a secretary, and imperils our families when we are not prepared to come down with the cash."

McDougall, it is likely, will be sent up for trial before Justice White in the Supreme Court. There are eight counts in the charge against him, and should he be convicted he is liable to two years in penitentiary on each count.

Dies Seeking Doctor.

Escanaba Mich., Aug. 25.—Running across lots, stumbling over fences in the darkness and taxing her strength to the utmost, Mrs. Louis Courtright dropped dying on the porch of a physician's home last night after she had gasped out that her young son had been terribly burned. Hemorrhage of the heart and lungs are declared to have resulted from the sudden excitement and nervous strain.

Long Term For Theft.

Stratford, Aug 25.—John Hall, colored, cook at the American Hotel, was sentenced to two and a half years in penitentiary for the theft of a pocketbook containing $68. J. M. Wilhelm, a farmer of North Esthope, dropped it on the market on Saturday. Hall was seen to pick it up, and later produced the empty purse, declaring it was empty when found.

Pellagra Spreading.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 25.—With five deaths from pellagra in Butler County, three persons dying and five other cases under observation, there is almost a panic in that part of the state. Pellagra is a disease akin to leprosy, and is contracted by the eating of mouldy or diseased corn.

A Crisis In Manitoba.

Grain Lying Out in the Fields for Lack of Laborers.

Demand For Harvesters Is Not Half Satisfied, Say the Authorities—Women and Children are Working in the Fields in Place of Men—Fred. C. Cook Estimates Crop at 120,000,000 Bushels.

Winnipeg, Aug. 25.—An officer of the Provincial Government is authority for the statement to-day that this Province is in urgent need of about ten thousand harvesters, and is facing a serious situation. He said that of all the men who have come west only two thousand have remained here, and gives instances of how certain districts are handicapped by lack of sufficient help. Out on the Hartney branch five hundred men were asked for, but only a dozen could be sent. Grandview asked for 130, and received only twenty. Minto and Southwestern Manitoba are in equally bad condition and several thousand acres are lying unstooked there. The Government has arranged with the railroads to give a cent a mile rate to men from the city who will go out to the fields.

Out around Radisson, Sask., women and children are working in the fields, as men have not been available, and the crops are very heavy.

Mr. F. Cook, Ottawa, representative of The London Times, arrived here yesterday, after a tour of the west. He states that the consensus of opinion throughout the country is that the wheat yield this year will be between one hundred and fifteen million and one hundred and twenty million bushels. Mr. Cook has just returned from Seattle, and in discussing the Fair there he said: "Considering the fact that thousands of Canadians and British people are visiting the Fair, it is somewhat galling to observe the complete absence of the British flag from the Exposition. Nowhere on the grounds can there be seen a single flag of Britain, with the exception of one on the Canadian pavilion."

A heavy hail storm passed over Baldur section Monday night, and did considerable damage there, at Mariapolis and Glenboro'.

Danger Period Passed.

Winnipeg, Aug. 25.—With the critical period—around Aug. 20 and 22—now safely passed without frost, and wheat cutting in progress in many parts of Canada West, a general feeling of optimism prevails among grain men here. Past experience assures that the frost danger is now over until, possibly, the new moon in the middle of next month, by which time a large proportion of the crop should be in stook.

Easterner Wins.

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—Splendid weather favored the marksmen at Rockcliffe for the second day of the D. R. A. shooting.

The only match completed yesterday was the Dominion of Canada match, 600 and 800 yards. Lieut. Sutherland, of the 78th, Truro, N.S., regiment, won the Patterson Cup and $30 with a score of 69.

Phenomenal scoring was done yesterday by a Toronto man, Sgt.-Major Dymond. He scored 136 out of a possible 140 in shooting at the 200, 500, 600 and 800 yards.

At the "kickers" meeting last night Major Davidson of Quebec said that the bullets used had caused rifles to become coated to such an extent with copper, that a very large number had practically been put out of action. This, he said, would be a serious matter in time of war. Major McRobbie, of St. John, agreed, and instanced cases in the Maritime Provinces where they had trouble with British ammunition.

Freight Train Derailed.

New Glasgow, Aug. 24.—Another freight train was wrecked near New Glasgow yesterday morning. Fourteen cars were derailed and four rolled down a bank and were badly damaged. The train was an eastbound special freight. No one was injured.

Aeroplanes Not Good For War.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 24.—United States Secretary of War Dickenson, here yesterday, expressed strong views on aeroplanes. He believes them to be impractiable for war, and says that the Wright machines are only crude experiments.

ONLY FIVE ESCAPE.

Terrible Story of Wreck Reaches Victoria, B.C.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 25.—Few more tragic tales of the sea are on record than that brought by the steamer Makura this morning from Australia of the wreck of the Norwegian bark Errot, which struck the Middleton Reef June 18., and the sufferings of the survivors.

Five remained of 22 when they were rescued, so emaciated from thirst and starvation that they had to be carried.

The Makura brings detailed stories of their vain struggles to find water on the reef, their unsuccessful search for a cache of provisions and a lifeboat maintained there prior to 1882 and which the sailing directions stated to exist, of their abandonment of hope and subsequent delirium.

Captain Anderson and the second mate drowned while building a raft, while his wife and children looked on, and finally after others had succumbed and the remainder were weak from starvation, the captain's wife drowned her four children, aged from one to eight, under the impression that the five survivors were planning to resort to cannibalism, and she followed the children into the waves.

Patrick Palmer, one of the survivors, in relating his story, said: There was another wreck on the reef and we thought it was a store ship. We boarded it, but found nothing to eat. It was musty, old and all it held was a bottle with about two gills of water that must have been there for years by the horrible taste it had.

"I and the carpenter drank that. We afterwards found some more water, and although it was in a bad state, we drank it. We then decided to build a punt from the wreckage, and while we were working at this we lived on shell fish."

DISS DE BAR BACK?

Woman in New York May Be Famous Priestess.

Windsor, Aug. 25.—The "Flying Rollers" here, the remnant of what was a flourishing colony, are agog over the operations of a self-styled occult priestess, who is holding forth in New York, and claiming to furnish the long sought Elixir of Life by which its devotees may live forever.

She is thought to be none other than "Mother Elinor," or Ann Odelia Diss De Bar, who for a time assumed charge of the Flying Rollers here. She is aided, too, by a young man she calls David, whose description is like that of David McKay, with whom the priestess eloped from here two or three years ago.

Thirteen women and four men attended her first meeting, according to a writer in a New York newspaper. On a throne, under an artificial rubber plant, they found a large women dressed in silk robes, who in a speech informed the flock that the cardinal dogma of the faith was that any who followed its teachings might live forever.

"Mother Elinor" had a sensational career. She left New Orelans some years ago with Theodore Jackson, with whom she went to England and was sentenced to seven years for teaching immoral living. In the Old Country she came in contact with "Prince Michael," leader of the Flying Rollers, and came to Windsor to become queen of the colony here, but her exposure followed soon after, and she disappeared.

Explosion Destroys Hotel.

Elmira, N.Y., Au. 25.—The police are investigating the origin of an explosion and fire which completely destroyed the Olympic Hotel, on West Water street, in this city, and caused the death of Mrs. E. W. Roby yesterday morning. A policeman on his rounds tried the door of the hotel just before the explosion and found them locked as usual. He had proceeded only half a block when there was a terrific report and the rear portion of the building was blown into the Chemung River.

Mrs. Roby was sleeping on the second floor of a frame building adjoining the hotel. The force of the explosion tore a hole 12 feet long and 20 inches wide through the ceiling of her room near her bed, and the shock threw her from the bad to the floor. She had been suffering from heart trouble and the shock killed her.

TIMELY TOPICS.

HOOT, MON!

Scots wha hae to Madoc fled,
Wi' Piper Mac braw at your head,
We hope ye'll find yer way to bed,
Before the wee sma' hours.
Good luck go wi' yer bonnets blue,
Ye gallant sons o' Roderick Dhu,
May the prizes ye don't win be few,
May pleasure come in showers.

May joy go with each sonsy Scot,
We hope they will not feel too hot,
But each be Sandy on the spot,
The lads o' Camp Rob Roy.
We hope the pipes will sweetly skirl
And happy make each boy and girl—
Misfortune seize the luckless churl
Who doesna them enjoy.

Society note: Among those who attended the S. O. S. celebration in Madoc to-day was the well-known Scottish lassie, Miss Annie Lawrie.

Taking into consideration those automobile killings at Indianapolis, it may be asked, why do people want to experiment with flying machines when there is so much delightful danger, in motoring, properly conducted?

The Montreal Gazette grows warm under the collar because certain Grit papers are sermonizing over the corruption in the Metropolis. Why didn't they express a little of that holy horror over the sins of the Laurier Government, the Gazette asks. Sure enough. It makes a lot of difference whose ox is gored.

WET WEATHER IN HAMILTON.

Hamilton Times: Certainly Hamilton appears to be doing its own share of drinking this summer. Some, of course, are drinking more than their share.

One of Canada's chartered banks has decreed that its clerks must receive at least $1200 per year before they can marry. How Cupid must shudder when he looks at one of the branches of that financial institution.

The price of wheat in Minneapolis has fallen 25 cents a bushel in two days. A piece of news like that ought to interest even the bakers. It looks as though the big crop that's being harvested might bring a message of cheer to the consumer, as well as the producer.

An Ottawa editor has made another lucky strike in Cobalt, this being his second. His latest find is said to be one of the richest in the north country. Fortunate Col. Morrison!

Toronto people, it is said, are going to boost prices of bed and board for exhibition visitors this year. Looks as though some of us may have to take our hard-boiled eggs with us and sleep on a corner.

Bogus employment agents are reaping a harvest in Montreal these days, and many poor immigrants are suffering. Next to stealing the coppers off a dead man's eye, the heartless wretch who takes, by fraud, the last dollar of a stranger in a strange land, is guilty of about the meanest crime in the calendar.

Bad quarters are in circulation. If some people get them they won't be a dead loss, anyhow. They'll put them on the collection plate.

Of late it has been the fashion for poll parrot journalists, the majority of whom have about as much originality as a tombstone, to decry Kipling and poke fun at his expense. The old story of the curs and the lion. The Brockville Times, edited by one of the most virile men in Canadian newspaperdom, has no sympathy with this cry of organized mediocrity, and truthfully says: "Of one thing only we may be sure: The writings of Mr. Kipling will be read with enjoyment long after his critics are dead and forgotten."

NERVILINE.

Fifty years ago Nerviline was used from coast to coast and in thousands of houses this trusty liniment served the entire family, cured all their minor ills and kept the doctor's bill small. To-day Nerviline still holds first rank in Canada among pain-relieving remedies—scarcely a home you can find, that doesn't use it.

TESTIMONIAL NO. 4398

From Port Hope, Ont., Mr W. T. Greenaway, of the Guide newspaper staff, writes: "For twenty years we have used Nerviline in our home, and not for the world would we be without it. As a remedy for all pain, earache, toothache, cramps, headache and disordered stomach, I know of no preparation so useful and quick to relieve as Nerviline."

Let every mother give Nerviline a trial; it's good for children, good for old folks—you can rub it on as a liniment or take it internally.

Wherever there is pain, Nerviline will cure it. Refuse anything but Nerviline, 25c. per bottle, five for $1, all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Makes Drinking Water Safe

Scientists working in McGill University Laboratories in Montreal, recently discovered a Typhoid Fever preventative that should be universally used wherever there is danger of infection from drinking water.

It is simply "Sovereign" Fruit Juice, added to the water fifteen minutes before it is to be drunk.

When this is done, the scientists say every Typhoid germ in the infected water is destroyed.

"Sovereign" Lime Fruit Juice with water makes a delicious, cooling drink, as well as a perfectly safe one

SPORTING NOTES.

The Coleman's Flats baseball team went to Marysville to-day to play a game at the R. C. picnic being held there.

Messrs. H. Day, E. B. Harris, F. Roote, J. Thompson and Ald. Sprague left last evening for Gananoque, where they will participate in a clay pigeon shoot. A number of valuable trophies are offered for competition.

George Sullivan, of Kingston, will go back to the Eastern League next year if his arm is in shape to pitch, says the Standard. Sullivan has been out of the game for a couple of years, but has a standing contract with the Providence team and will go back for a try-out next season. If he makes good it will be a miracle.

Its nip and tuck with the Detroit Tigers and Philadelphia Athletics for the American League Championship.

Ten thousand spectators witnessed the Toronto-Tecumseh lacrosse match on Saturday. The gate receipts were $4,782.

Jack Johnson, in Los Angeles, says he will bet $1,000 to $5,000 that Jeffries will never fight him. While Berger, in 'Frisco, declares as soon as Jeffries returns from Europe on Oct. 1, the big match will be arranged.

NEW VEGETABLE FIBER.

Australian Marine Plant Possesses Valuable Properties.

In Australia there was recently discovered an extraordinary fiber of marine growth which by reason of the vast amount of the deposit and the remarkable qualities of the fiber is expected to prove of great commercial importance.

This fiber is the result of the sheddings of the leaf sheath of a sea grass botanically known as Posidonia australis and so far has been found only in Spencer Gulf, South Australia, where the sheddings have been imprisoned by the action of wind and waves in the sand flats of the gulf.

The uses of the fiber are found by experiments made by competent persons to be many and varied, and it possesses unique qualities. It will spin and weave in union with wool and will also take dye equally well, being so far as is known the only vegetable fiber to do this. It is practically noninflammable, its charring point being 373 degrees F., and it is to that extent a nonconductor, unlike cotton. It does not shrink and has more resillience than kapok. It is also found to be as good for ship calking as oakum.

Blankets and cloth woven of a mixture of wool and this fiber, together with samples of the fiber in various stages of production from plant to yarn, are now on view in the sample room of one of the leading wool houses in Australia, and the manufactured articles are being most favorably commented upon by those interested in the textile industries. On account of its splendid dyeing properties it can also be used in the making of carpets; also for coir matting, hessian, bagging, woolpacks, and it appears difficult to say to what other uses with proper machinery it cannot be put.

War on Bicycles.

"Give me ten thousand well-disciplined cyclists and I will guarantee to hold up any invading army that attempts to land on our shores," once remarked that ardent believer in the utility of the bicycle in warfare, Gen. Sir Charles Douglas. In this connection he tells an amusing story. He was carrying out some cyclist manoeuvres and found a troop of men sitting calmly under a hedge watching an opposing force of cyclists rapidly aproaching them. "Don't you worry about those chaps, sir," said the young officer. "I have peppered their road pretty well with sixpennyworth of tin tacks. Wait til they get off to mend their punctures and I will round the whole of them up in something like no time."

A BLAZE OF LIGHT

NIGHT SCENE AT CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION ONE TO LIVE IN MEMORY.

The "Electric City" will be a fitting name for the Canadian National Exhibition grounds at Toronto this year. All the big buildings are being fitted with exterior decorations of electric light and they will turn the Exhibition nights into the whitest kind of days. This brilliancy added to the martial music, the movements of troops and all the panoply of display should make the night scene at the Canadian National one never to be forgotten.

The British Budget.

After one of the most bitter fights ever waged at Westminster, the British House of Commons has adjourned for a week, in order to give the jaded members a rest from the consideration of the budget. The latter is described as a revolutionary measure, and such it undoubtedly is. Some concessions have been made by the Government. The most important is that the cost of the valuation of land, which in the first draft was imposed on owners, will now be borne by the state. This will involve an estimated outlay of $10,000,000 and will wipe out more than the tax will produce in the first year. Another change is that the properties of friendly societies amounting to over $500,000,000 will be exempt. This is a concession to labor unionists, who form a large proportion of friendly society members.

That the budget has gained in favor among the masses cannot be questioned, and one indication of this is to be found in the circumstance that some leading papers, which at first questioned the new proposals, have now ranged themselves on the side of the measure. Another demonstration has been the political astuteness of Lloyd-George, the comparatively young Welsh lawyer, who has handled matters in the House with admitted skill and ability.

What the Lords will do remains to be seen, but the impression appears to be gaining that they will not interfere. It is quite clear that the next electoral fight will be an endorsement of this budget versus the adoption of preferential trade.

As to Automobiles.

The awful record of the opening meeting of the new Indianapolis speedway, which closed on Saturday, is seven people killed. Of these three were participants in the races, two were spectators, and two were killed by cars bound for the track. The record is one that can easily be utilized to condemn motor racing as the most murderous of sports, and naturally suggests that its prohibition would not be entirely undesirable. That the ingenuity of man has devised a new means of road locomotion swifter than anything in existance has been thoroughly demonstrated, and that is about all the good such exhibitions can accomplish. A speed of sixty miles an hour on a public highway, and there are scores of cars capable of making it when the conditions are in any way favorable, is beyond the limits of safety both for the occupants and the general public. Half that speed is beyond the legal limits of almost every province in Canada and state of the Union, but, the Montreal Gazette says, it is not actually dangerous under ordinary conditions, except in thickly settled localities, owing to the ease with which a car can be controlled. The horse power cannot very well be cut down, for there are times when it is required. But there are methods of making it impossible to exceed a determined speed, and it would be well if one of these was generally adopted. The London police force is now engaged in studying contrivances of this nature. Some provide for an automatic appliance, which releases the power when a certain speed is obtained, and in others the attainment of a fixed speed releases a gong, which continues to ring as long as the illegal speed is maintained. The latter will probably be found the most effective and reliable, for the case containing the gong could easily be sealed, and evidence of the seal having been tampered with accepted as proof of guilt. The great majority of automobilists would not object to a reasonable restriction, and it would restrain those whose heedlessness endangers both their own and the lives of others. Road racing should be suppressed, and as for that on tracks, it would probably die a natural death so soon as manufacturers found that there was no public demand for a car capable of making excessive speed.

On the Royal Menu.

Sir Harry Johnston once had the grim experience of being captured by a cannibal king, who genially informed him that he was to form the "piece de resistance" of the royal menu that evening. "Eat me if you like," was Sir Harry's calm reply; "but if you do, the Great White Mother will send her soldiers, and you and your wives and your people will all be killed." This made the king waver, and after a consultation with his court he decided to forego the meal. But it was not enough for the captive. "You must send me down the river in your best barge," he announced, "till my white brothers meet me." And so great an impression had his sang-froid created that this was no sooner said than it was done.

Dr. Grace on Murdoch's Golf.

Here is a story about the famous Australian cricketer, W. H. Murdoch, in connection with golf. Murdoch, it seems, drove into a deep sand-bunker, and once in it was completely hidden from the view of the spectators. However, the ball came out amid the usual shower of sand, and the stroke was duly applauded. "At lunch one of the members remarked on Billy's excellent recovery, when Billy, having taken it all in quite seriously, whispered to me, "Knew I should never get out of that blessed hole, so I took a double handful of sand and the ball and flung 'em out.'"—From "W. G.'s Little Book."

A HUNGRY TIGER.

Persistent Attack on a Camp Reported From India.

The Indian mail brings the story of an exciting adventure which befell a surveying party in Assam. They were attacked by a tiger. The party were working in the Lushai hills adjoining the Cachar district of Assam, and the tiger appeared at the camp of surveyor Gopal Singh. It sprang at the surveyor and one of his khalasis, but fortunately touched neither of them, and disappeared as suddenly as it had come. Three days later the tiger returned, and seized a khalasi, who was washing his cooking pots in a stream 20 yards from the camp. A native armed with a stick, rushed to the rescue, and tried to beat the tiger off. When other men arrived the brute dropped its prey and disappeared again. In a few minutes it was back again. In spite of the shouts of the natives it seized the plucky native who had gone to the rescue of the first man. Once more it was driven off, and again it returned, this time to seize a third khalasi.

Frightened away again, the beast left the camp, but the party sat up all night surrounded by a chain of fires. At daybreak they proceeded to a Lushai village. An armed party set off for the abandoned camp to collect the goods left behind. They found that the tents, bedding, blankets, and bags of rice had been dragged about by the tiger, and on a sight-rule and plane-table were marks of the brute's fangs. When Mr. Williams, the camp officer, met the party all the men were so profoundly affected that not one of them could speak above a whisper. They begged not to be sent back to the same locality, but to be allowed to work for the rest of the field season in the open cultivated country. The first man seized by the beast died four days afterwards.

Boom on Rand.

After a long interval it is once more quite "boom time" in Johannesburg.

It is generally agreed that prospects have never been so good since 1895. All classes of business are already feeling the effects of better times. Activity on the Stock Exchange is enormous, for the public have at last fairly "gone into it."

One feature of the moment is the immense amount of pegging of claims gaing on in the surrounding district. Thousands of claims allowed to lapse in times of depression have been taken up again, and many flotations are probable, but there are fears in some quarters that this may be overdone and produce a reaction.

The general view, however, is that the upward tendency will last. The reduced working costs on mines have made payable the working of millions of tons of reef which hitherto have not been a profitable proposition, and at the same time have immensely increased the profits of the more valuable mines.

It is regarded as a good sign that so far the improvement has not produced the mania of gambling which marked the 1895 "boom." In the commercial part of the town traders report a marked increase in trade, especially in luxuries, such as pianos, motor-cars, carriages and horses, which first felt the bad times.

There are strong hopes that the wave of prosperity will result in the opening up of new mines and that it will thus absorb the unemployed.

Sure!

"De man dat don't do nuffin' but look out for No. 1," said Uncle Eben, "is purty sure sooner or later to attract attention to hisse'f as about de smallest figger in de 'rithmetic."—Washington Star.

PATTI'S EARNINGS.

The Shrewd Financial Methods of the Musical Miracle.

Adelina Patti never suffered from the financial timidity of a Jenny Lind. Not only was she a supreme vocalist; but, as Colonel Mapleson remarked, "no one ever approached her in the art of obtaining from a manager the greatest possible sum he could by any possibility contrive to pay." But the musical miracle was the spoiled darling of her day, and she never failed to obtain exactly what she wanted. She was first engaged in London in 1861 by Mapleson to sing four nights "on approval" and in case of success to obtain £40 a week. This contract was not fulfilled, however, for, being hard pressed financially, she had borrowed £50 from a rival manager, and her receipt proved practically a contract. This was the beginning of a career so dazzling that its successive steps are simply a series of increasing banknotes. In 1872 she obtained in London 200 guineas a night, since she insisted on having more than Christine Nilsson, who was receiving £200. She sang twice a week. Ten years later she was given $5,000 a night! Her famous contract to sing in America provided that the money should be paid her at 2 o'clock on the day she sang; also a drawing room and sleeping car to be especially built for her, with conservatory, fernery, etc. Further, there was to be deposited to her credit $50,000 for payment of the last ten performances—Patti's favorite device. She thus received about twenty times what Mario and Grisi got.

Her private car incidentally cost $60,000 and contained a silver bath and gold keys to the doors, to say nothing of a $2,000 piano. Patti gave to the manager only her voice and her costumes. Her drawing capacity justified this. "Lucia," as an example, was sung to an average of $14,000. "Traviata" drew more, since she sang more notes. It was a frequent occurrence among the poorer music lovers to buy a club ticket and each take turns at hearing her for twenty minutes. If one overstayed his time he paid for the entire ticket. Some mathematicians computed by dividing the number of notes sung by the sum paid that in "Semiramide" Patti received 42¾ cents for each note. This was found to be just 7 1-10 cents a note more than Rossini got for writing the whole opera.—George Middleton in Bookman.

A BEAR STORY.

The Picture the Amateur Photographer Did Not Wait to Get.

The best bear story I ever heard, states a writer in Recreation, was told me by an amateur prospector, who might have stepped out of a comic weekly. He had made a big trip in the Siskiyous with no weapon save a nickel plated miner's pick.

"Have you seen much game?" I asked.

"None at all," he replied in his dry falsetto.

"No bear!" I exclaimed, knowing he had come right through Bear Camp.

"Oh, yes," he returned, "quite so. Now that you mention it I dare say that is what it was. Didn't occur to me, you know. I was so very angry, don't you see, I took no pains to identify the brute."

"Why, what did he do to you?"

"What did he do? Why, nothing, of course. You see, the little beggar ran and climbed up a stump. And he wouldn't come down so I could obtain a decent photograph of him. Sat up there half a day, fifty feet from the ground. Then his legs got tired holding on, I imagine, for he started in to squeal. And, do you know, the brute must have given me away, for pretty soon his mother, I suppose it was, came hurrying up, and I had to clear out. Four times as big as he, she was, I assure you."

"Did you run?" I asked, laughing.

"Oh, not at all; not at all," said he. "But still I thought it best not to remain." He paused and stroked his stubbly chin reflectively.

"By Jove," said he finally, "how very interesting! I should have thought to photograph the old one. She looked quite savage, don't you know."

"Such a picture would have been unique, to say the least," I replied.

"Quite so," said he.

Why She Was Right.

Haydn had a peculiar way of determining the time in which a piece of music should be sung. On one occasion a female singer in high esteem at court had been appointed to sing one of Haydn's compositions. At the rehearsal she and the conductor differed as to the time of the music. The matter was to be settled by referring it to Haydn himself. When called on to decide he asked the conductor if the singer was handsome.

"Very," was the reply, "and a special favorite with the prince."

"Then she is right," replied Haydn.

Occasionally.

"You must try to love your papa," said the visitor, "as much as he loves you."

"Oh, I love him more!" replied Tommy.

"Indeed? Doesn't your papa love you very much?"

"Not much. He says he loves me only when I'm good."—Exchange.

"Pa, is a vessel a boat?"

"Er—yes; you may call it that."

"Well, what kind of a boat is a blood vessel?"

"It's a lifeboat. Now run away to bed."—Boston Transcript.

'Life a Perfect Burden.'

Untold Sufferings from Biliousness, Headaches and Indigestion Cured by DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS.

To produce such striking evidence, such satisfying proof as Mrs. E. D. Dupont gives in her letter, makes it self evident that in Dr. Hamilton's Pills every suffering man and woman is offered a real cure for all stomach ailments. From her home at Oak Point, Mrs. Dupont writes a vivid and touching account of her four years of torture with biliousness and indigestion.

"My trouble was first manifested with blinding headaches and feeling of dizziness and fullness in the head. Such dreadful turns of giddiness came over me that at times I reeled and staggered. These attacks were accompanied with violent pains in the stomach and distension of the liver. Spots flitted before my eyes, and to think of eating made me miserable I was unable to digest my food, lost weight and got sleepless. When so low spirited and despondent that I despaired of getting well, I read of how Mrs. Helton had been so wonderfully cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and got five boxes at once. To my delight the first box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me relief I began to eat sleep and enjoy my meals. The stomach and liver pains passed away. I improved steadily and when five boxes of Dr. Hamilton's Pills were used I was a new woman, cured, happy, well and strong."

To regulate the system, to prevent and cure all disorders of the stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys, no remedy can boast of the number of successful cures accomplished by Dr. Hamilton's Pills; 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00. Beware of substitutes and imitations. By mail from The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

Preventable Accidents.

The American Museum of Safety and Sanitation in its latest bulletin calls attention to the fact that in 1908, in the whole country, from all causes, accidents totaled 500,000 persons, "which is 500 regiments strong, and these victims of the perils of peace would be hours in passing a given point." The bulletin adds that in "America the insurance interests estimate the annual loss to companies from preventable accidents to be $125,000,000. This does not include costs of defending suits at law, in which the person injured receives, in judgments scarcely $500 on the average, of which his lawyer usually gets one-half."

Neptune's Belts.

Neptune, the most distant known planet of the solar system, presents to the ordinary telescope only a small greenish disk, on which no distinct markings are visible. But recently telescopic observations have revealed indications of the existence of streaks on Neptune bearing a resemblance to the belts of Jupiter. A few years ago similar streaks were seen on Uranus. Saturn also possesses them, so that it may be said that cloudlike belts are a feature common of all the four greater outer planets.

HORSES AT THE FAIR.

Everything Points to an Immense Exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Horse entries are coming in so fast at the office of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, that the success of that department promises to be more pronounced than ever before.

The prizes given for speeding in the ring aggregate $4,000, and that in itself is a guarantee that the fastest harness horses in Canada will again be found in the races on the afternoon of August 30th and 31st and Sept. 1st and 2nd.

In Clydesdales everything points to an entry that will exceed last year's show, when they were there in numbers and quality that cannot be equalled anywhere on the continent. Hackneys are growing better year by year and the show of them is excellent, while Toronto is a centre for hunters and jumpers of the very highest class; the competitions in this line excite almost world-wide interest.

In harness horses there is always a great exhibit, while the pony classes have been enlarged and extended in keeping with the growing popularity of the children's pets.

The permanent agent cables that he has secured many of the leading pictures of the year, and that the list is coming by mail. In addition to this there will be an exhibit of art photography by the leading art photographers of England, Germany, France and Italy, and a graphic art exhibit by the leading illustrators of New York, including such men as Frederick Remington, Maxfield Parish and Charles Dana Gibson.

GOODS WHILE YOU WAIT.

Process of manufacture an interesting feature of Canadian National Exhibition.

The process of manufacture department is always one of the most interesting features of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and this year it promises to be far more extensive than ever before. In all there will be about forty industries at work showing just how shoes, silk, cotton goods, prints, and many other of the articles you use every day are made. It is impossible here to name more than a few of the exhibitors, but here are some well worth looking up.

The United Shoe Manufacturing Co., Montreal, manufacturing ladies' and gents' boots and shoes, showing the different stages from the cutting out of the leather to the finished shoe.

Merchants Rubber Co., of Berlin, demonstrating the manufacture of rubber shoes, showing every process from the crude rubber to the finished boot.

Davis & Henderson, manufacturing and printing envelopes.

The Canadian Silk Co. weaving silk and badges with photos on them.

Gundy, Clapperton, cutting glass, showing the process in which the fine quality of cut glass is produced.

Shredded Wheat, showing process in which their products are prepared and made portable and palatable.

Dominion Textile Co., Montreal, showing process of manufacture of fine cotton goods, prints, etc.

SHEEP AND SWINE.

Sheep and swine come in for a large share of attention at the Canadian National Exhibition. The best in Yorkshires, Berkshires and Tamworths fill the pig pens at the big Fair, while in the sheep pens are Shropshires, Cotswolds, Leicesters, Oxford Downs of the first quality. All the best that Canada and the United States can produce are found in this department. That the exhibit is a large one is shown by the fact that permanent pens have been built on the grounds for 700 sheep and 600 pigs. Then there is poultry and pet stock enough to fill a building 220 ft. by 60 ft.

The Department of Agriculture is putting on a display of wholesome and diseased meats at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, and will send two lecturers from Ottawa to tell the people how to discern the good from diseased meats. This should be of interest to cattle men, as well as meat producers.

EXPLODING SUBMARINE MINES.

Ships to be blown up on the Waterfront at Exhibition Grounds.

The submarine mine which plays such an important part in naval warfare will be part of the military display at the Canadian National Exhibition. These hidden guardians of every port in war time will be laid in front of the Exhibition grounds and every day at 5 o'clock a ship will be blown up by one of them. There is nothing more spectacular than what happens to a ship when it runs on to one of these hidden dangers of the deep.

EXHIBIT

of specially selected plants and seed taken from seed plots of members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, Toronto Industrial Exhibition, Aug. 30 to Sept. 13, and Canada Central Exhibition, Ottawa, Sept. 10 to 18 inclusive. With a view to giving greater publicity to the work which is being done in Canada by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association in the improving of cultivated plants, and in order that a medium may be provided through which the officers of the Association may come in touch with a greater number of those who are specially interested in the problem of crop improvement, arrangements have been made to place a special educational exhibit of selected plants and seed in the Agricultural building of each of the above mentioned Fairs. The exhibit will be in charge of the Secretary or some other officer qualified to discuss the general work of the Association. It is to be hoped that a large number will take advantage of this opportunity to learn more of this important movement.—L. H. NEWMAN, Sec. C.S.G.A.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITS.

All the provinces will be in line with exhibits in the Provinces building at Canadian National Exhibition this year. Each Provincial Government is at work on a display that will do justice to its territory, and the gold and fruit of British Columbia, the golden grain of the prairies from Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba, the various products and minerals of Ontario, right down to the best coal and farm products of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, will form one of the many features that makes the Fair truly National in character.

CORPS VS. CORPS.

Real Live Competitions in the Military Competitions at the Canadian National.

The Military Display and Tournament at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, will have more features of real interest this year than anything of the kind previously attempted in Canada. In such competitions as the Victoria Cross and wrestling on horseback, corps will be arrayed against corps, the Royal Canadian Dragoons stationed at Toronto, against the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery stationed at Kingston. The rivalry between these corps is very keen, so much so that the men are also anxious to mix things up a bit with a single stick in the Balaclava Melee, if the permission of the officers can be obtained. However, the officers have not yet decided. Some think a few hard knocks would not hurt the men, while others are inclined to think that the competition would resolve itself into something too much like actual warfare.

COMEDY IN FIREWORKS.

Some Funny Things Pictured in Lines of Fire.

"The Battle of the North Sea" and "The Siege of Kandahar" are the features but by no means the whole of the fireworks display at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. In addition there are 62 distinct numbers on the fireworks programme and they include everything that can be imagined in pyrotechnics. And in these numbers comedy has its place. For instance a Punch and Judy show is one of the numbers. Another number pictures a boy fishing. A big policeman comes along and orders him away. Another boy seeing this brings on a giant firecracker, sets it behind the policeman and fires it off—result a big policeman kicking on the ground and boys disappearing around the corner.

IMMENSE BANKS OF FLOWERS.

The decorative floral display will again be a feature of the Floriculture department of the Canadian National Exhibition. These immense banks of flowers which cover 500 square feet of floor space make one of the beauty spots of the entire Fair. The premiums for this exhibit alone total $1,110.00, a sum that guarantees plenty of competitors.

DAIRY EDUCATION.

Proper Care of Milk to be Demonstrated at the Canadian National.

The educational features in connection with the Dairy department of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, promise, to be of unusual interest this year, not only to farmers, but to consumers of milk in cities and towns as well. The demonstration work and lectures in the Dairy amphitheatre will be under the immediate charge of Mr. Geo. A. Putnam, director of dairy instructions for the Province, and the Dominion Department will also furnish a man to give some definite instruction along the cow-testing line.

The proper care and handling of milk will be one of the subjects dealt with, and it will be accompanied by demonstrations of milk testing as well as charts showing the value of cow-testing associations.

The Model Military Camp at the Canadian National Exhibition will be fitted with hospital tents for men and women and all casualties on the Exhibition grounds will be handled by the Army Medical Corps which will form part of the permanent corps in the Model Militia Camp.

In a recent divorce case a wife admitted that she thought more of a certain dog than of her husband. Naturally, this made the husband growl, but even this did not win back her affections.

Many a man is perfect,—in his foolishness.

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

across the road at their approach. They passed the king's hunting-lodge looking melancholy and deserted in the heavy shadows of the forest, and the silence became so oppressive that Mrs. Winter felt it better to hasten the inevitable war of words.

"So the marchese is going to Amalfi with us," she said.

"You heard him say so," replied Rhoda, instinctively bracing herself for resistance.

"Rhoda, it is very painful to me to speak to you about this matter, but I must tell you that I heard it with deep regret."

"Have you any objection to his society? I thought you were quite satisfied with what Lady Otta wrote of him. She could hardly have said more than she did. She seemed to corroborate his old gardener's statement to Regy in praise of his master: 'Natura lo fece e poi ruppe la stampa.' "

"I like him very well; he is an agreeable person, a personage socially speaking."

"Well, then?"

"Rhoda, I think you should tell him of your engagement."

"Why should I bore him with items of my personal history? I don't think his courtesy should lead us to presuppose an interest in our affairs."

"It is not like you to be so insincere," said Mrs. Winter, with sorrowful indignation.

"I am not insincere," said Rhoda, turning and facing her friend squarely. "The Marchese Di Loria is interested in me as an American, a friend of John Chester, and a woman, since he is progressive, social, and gallant, after the manner of young Italy, but in me as an individual he has no more interest in you or Regy, save, perhaps, that I combine in myself the youth and womanhood which you severally represent."

Then Mrs. Winter girded herself together and made what was perhaps the hardest effort in her life. She made it bravely, but it is not easy to imagine what it cost her, for there was scarcely a refinement of feeling wrench and a pang that left her delicate face as white as a snow-wreath.

"I am not disturbed seriously on account of this gentleman, Rhoda, though I should be sorry to see him suffer anything through one of us. It is for you, and you only, that I fear."

A dead silence followed. The violent color that had rushed into Rhoda's face at the first words receded and left her pallid as her friend. not known to this lady, and she felt that her words would hurt cruelly, and realized to the utmost the brutality of language when compared with the feelings it inadequately expresses. It came at last, but with such a

The carriage rolled swiftly on in the gathering gloom and both sat rigid and quiet, seeing and hearing nothing but those hard sentences and the crowding images they suggested. It seemed a long time before Rhoda spoke, long enough for Mrs. Winter to believe the young friendship, the girlish enthusiasm of regard which had been dear to her, gone for ever. She would not have blamed Rhoda for withdrawing it, yet she knew those words had not been so hard to hear as to say, and that her most conscientious affection had been voiced in them. But it was no tone of icy offense or proud resistance that sounded in the answer.

"I think you may be right, dear," said Rhoda, in a very gentle and humble voice. "I thank—you. But if there is pain to be borne—by me alone—I can bear it. I am willing to pay the price."

Alas, my dear child!" said the older woman, with deep tenderness, touched to the heart by this meek acceptance of her difficult warning, "who of us would not be willing to bear pain if we might bear it alone? It is the sadness of it, the awfulness of it, that others must always be included in our suffering or lapse."

"Not in this," said Rhoda, with pale lips. "What I have meant to do for Eugene that I will do. Perhaps it will be easier now that the last hope of personal joy has vanished. I shall not—mind—so much about the effect his actions must have on my happiness, I—"

Her voice sank away into silence.

"Rhoda, did he never have your heart?"

"He has now, my full consenting heart of love and pity. As for—that other—I only see what might have been—oh, what might not have been, what might never have been in all the world! He would not care for me, not ever. Only, you see, dear, I have caught a glimpse of something—in my own nature—that I did not know was there. I might have been like other women—no, no, not like other women!—for I see—capabilities—for such happiness—as most—have never dreamed existed."

She was not sobbing, but speaking with long pauses, as if steadying voice and thoughts alike.

"Oh, what shall I do?" cried Mrs. Winter, in strange distress. "I cannot let you go to my nephew feeling like this! It is a wrong to him, a worse wrong to yourself. And yet—it will be the ruin of him if you desert him. And if this should prove to be only a fancy, a passing phase—if you should resign Eugene in a mood that meant no more than a fit of sickness.."

"I shall not resign Eugene."

"Will he want a wife who does not love him?"

"He will never know the difference; he does not watch me very closely, and what he calls my exaltations have always bored him. I do think he wants me very much, but what I feel is not of much importance to him so long as I keep it to myself. I mean a new life to Eugene, a pleasanter and more prosperous one, and he loves me in his way, I am sure he loves me. It would be a cruel blow to him to lose me. And he shall not. I will not leave him. He has not been a happy man."

"I cannot advise you. What shall I do?" cried Mrs. Winter again.

"Do nothing, dear friend. What is there to do? Shall I take myself away from Eugene who wants me, needs me, because I—admire—some one else who does neither? And I am quite sure you are right," said poor Rhoda feverishly. "It is only a passing fancy, a phase. My life has been made up of phases and fancies, though there has been none like—this. The only real thing I can do is to help Eugene. And I am fond of him. Don't you think I am fond of him?" she asked, with a wan smile.

"I don't know what to think. And yet—yes, I am sure you are."

"You don't know how fond. There

RELICS OF ANTIQUITY

BRITISH SOCIETY MAKES BIG DISCOVERIES AT THEBES.

Professor Petrie Tells of His Excavations In Egypt—Palace of Pharaoh Mentioned In Bible by Jeremiah Is Found at Memphis—Golden Ornaments Are Found Along With Mummy.

An interesting lecture describing the work of the British School of Archaeology in Egypt during the last season was delivered by Professor Petrie the other evening at University College.

The work was divided into two portions. During the early part of the season extensive explorations were made in the hitherto unexplored valleys of Qurneh, the country of Thebes, and several most valuable finds were made.

One of the most interesting of these was the discovery of an undisturbed tomb of the period of the eleventh dynasty, B.C. 2500, and of a curious Osiris chapel of a king named Sankhka-ra. More important was the find of an untouched tomb of the seventeenth dynasty, about B.C. 1800—the simple furniture of which was very remarkable. Among the objects were a number of vases with a string network of most remarkable fineness, by which they were attached to a carrying pole, like a milkman's yoke. String bags of wonderful workmanship were also found and a chair of pretty design, with a knotted string seat.

The tomb in which the mummy was found was evidently that of some person of importance, for a gold necklace, gold bangles, and a girdle of curious Nubian pattern were found. There was found also a small private temple, built by a high priest named Nebunnef, who associated himself with Rameses II.

At the end of one of the waddies leading into the desert as a moslem sheik's tomb, near to it were small soul houses and jars of offerings containing water and food—a curious survival of the ancient customs.

At Memphis the work was directed to the exploration of a large mound over sixty feet in height, and which will take many years to dig out. At a depth of about ten feet the remains of a large edifice—about 400 feet long by 200 feet broad, with massive walls fifteen feet high—was discovered. It proved to be the palace of Apiries, or the Pharaoh Hophra of the Bible, B.C. 590, who is mentioned by Jeremiah. It was a large edifice, consisting of many halls, or rooms, and two very large quadrangles, as well as servants' quarters, and in these latter were the fireplaces and ovens for cooking the royal dinners.

The central hall was a large space about 100 feet square, which had been covered by a cedar wood roof, supported on columns 50 feet high. A large gateway, built of older material of the time of the twelfth dynasty, was found, the walls of which bore a series of interesting sculptures, representing the installation of the crown prince as vice ruler. During the excavation of the palace very large quantities of scale armor were found, much of it of very fine work, in steel, iron and bronze, probably borne by the Greek mercenaries of the king, and which had been hastily thrown away.

One of the most beautiful finds here was a silver-and-gold rest of a royal palanquin. It was of solid silver, weighing nearly two pounds, and in the centre was a head of the goddess Hathor, with a gold face and with a bronze wig inlaid with gold and blue—one of the finest works of art ever discovered. The exploration of the Temple of Ptah produced many interesting objects, among them a number of terra cotta heads of foreigners who had come to Memphis during the Persian rule—Europeans with the curious Spanish matador feature and side whiskers, Karians with their cockscomb hat, as described by Herodotus.

Very remarkable were two heads, with very modern turbans and distinctly Afghan features, no doubt Parthian allies of the Persian king. Two temples of Meneptah, the Pharaoh of the Exodus, have been found. The discovery of the palace mound is most important, for no doubt stratified under it are the ruined palaces of many dynasties, perhaps even that of Menes himself.

A Romantic Gift.

An altar frontal, which has just come into the possession of the Roman Catholic Church of St. John's, near Norwich, England, has a pathetic interest attaching to it. About 18 months ago Col. Noyes died suddenly while on his honeymoon. His young, grief-stricken widow sent her bridal robe to the nuns of a convent in Bloomsburg, where four skilled embroiderers have been engaged upon it ever since. The altar frontal is eight feet long and four feet deep, and it is designed in three panels, depicting beautifully executed figures. The first of these is an allegorical likeness of the late Col. Noyes, who is represented as a mediaeval knight. The arms and mottoes of Col. Noyes and of the widow's family are embroidered over the panels.

Explanation Called For.

Alfred (whose sporting opportunities have been limited by parental decree)—Papa, what does it mean by base on balls?

Papa (who is reading an account of the latest heavyweight fight)—Alfred, you could better employ yourself with your Sunday school lesson. I'm too busy now to explain.

Alfred (still thirsting for knowledge)—Did it mean the same as base on balls when you telephoned last night that as mamma was away you were going out on a bat?

Mamma (who is always listening)—Benjamin Ridgely, you will take time right now to make two explanations, with the most important one coming to me.

THERE are many kinds of flour sold. Some are made from spring wheat and some from winter wheat.

What you ought to know is which wheat makes the best flour, and why.

Winter wheat is put into the ground in the fall, grows a few inches, then gives up to the snow. When the snow melts it grows again, ripening in July. It matures slowly, is soft and very starchy.

Spring wheat is sown in late April or early May, and ripens in August. It matures rapidly and is therefore strong. It's a flinty, translucent wheat, rich in gluten and containing nearly twice as much real nutriment as the winter wheat.

Royal Household Flour

is made entirely from the hard, nutritious spring wheat, carefully selected from all the wheat of this kind grown in Canada.

Royal Household is fine, light and pure—milled by the most improved methods—in a mill as cleanly as your own kitchen.

Ask your grocer for Ogilvie's Royal Household—just enough to try. He may charge you a few cents more than you are used to paying, but you will forget that when you see the results in your bread and pastry.

New Pocket Edition

FOR the traveler, broker, merchant, manufacturer — for every man to whom time and appearance is money. The New Pocket Edition presents the "Gillette" in such compact form that it can be carried like a card case in the waistcoat pocket or slipped into the side of a traveling bag.

Same size blade as before, same principle—but neater, more workmanlike, the most perfect shaving implement in the world—as compact and as beautifully finished as a piece of jewelry.

The pocket-case is heavily plated in gold, silver or gun-metal. Plain polished or richly embossed. Handle and blade box each triple silver plated or 14K gold plated. Prices, $5 to 7.50.

Stores handling Gillette Razors and Blades display Gillette Signs in their windows and on their counters.

Old Lady Died While Cooking the Dinner.

SUDDEN END OF MRS. HILDA ROSEBUSH, OF RAWDON.

A few days ago Mrs. Hilda Rosebush, an old lady 85 years of age, was found dead in the kitchen of her son's residence in Rawdon township. Mrs. Rosebush was evidently in the act of preparing dinner, as she was found lying beside a stove, on which meat and vegetables were being cooked. In her hand was grasped a fork. Dr. Bissonnette, coroner, investigated the circumstances of the case, but did not consider an inquest necessary, as it was evident that death resulted from natural causes.

The Forty-eighth Highlanders' Band, from Toronto, accompanied the excursionists from here, also a number from various points along the G.T.R. An excellent programme of sports was provided for this afternoon, and this evening a concert will be held. A number from the city will be competitors in the various events, and Camp Rob Roy will furnish a team in the tug-of-war contest for a valuable trophy.

A Marathon Race—Cop Beat Tramp.

Yesterday afternoon a Marathon race, which had not been previously advertised, took place and was witnessed by only a few spectators. The contestants were a member of the local police force and a supposed drunk.

The latter was seated upon a large stone on the east side of the river, a short distance above the footbridge, enjoying the balmy breeze from off the Moira, when the officer of the law appeared upon the scene. The sudden appearance of the man in blue caused the stranger to make a hasty get-away. Over fences, through back yards and to the footbridge he sped with the fleetness of a deer. The officer was in hot pursuit, but did not land his game until the greater portion of Coleman street had been traversed. When taken to the station the party gave his name as Arnie McLeod and Picton as his home. This morning he was allowed to go by the Magistrate.

Did Elzevir Man Steal Blankets.

The accused claims that he had the blankets for some time before ever the camp was located in that section of the country.

Frightened Ladies.

$25,000 WAITING FOR OWNER

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Twenty-five thousand dollars is lying in the safe of the German Hospital, awaiting the finding of heirs to the estate of Mrs. Tindel, who died at that institution of apoplexy.

The money was in large bills, concealed in Mrs. Tindel's clothing, and was brought to light, together with her will, after her death.

Apoplexy claims hundreds of victims every year. Yet apoplexy is but an advanced stage of blood poisoning which manifests itself in headaches and backaches. Very frequently the cause is constipation.

Such a case as the above shows the importance of keeping the bowels active, the kidneys regular, the skin healthy, so that the blood will be always pure and rich.

"Fruit-a-tives"—the famous fruit liver tablets—are safe and efficient regulators for stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c.

Launch Afire; Occupants Saved.

Montreal, Aug. 25.—A yachting party had a narrow escape from death near Sorel. They were on board the gasoline launch, Alfred, belonging to Alfred Pelouin, when the boat took fire, and before the boat could be headed for an island and the people saved by jumping into the water, several had been severely burned.

Saved By Heroic Mother.

Kingston, Aug. 25.—Unable to swim a stroke herself, Mrs. C. I. Baltic, wife of an employe of the Royal Military College, last night leaped into 16 feet of water to rescue her two-year-old son, Charlie, who was sinking for the last time. Mrs. Manning, a neighbor, saved both lives by extending a long pike pole.

"Suicide Seeker" May Die.

Waukesha, Wis., Aug. 25.—Bert Williams, billed on Park Park Vaudeville Circuit as the "Suicide Seeker," was probably fatally injured at Waukesha Beach. Williams leaps the gap on roller skates, turning a backward somersault into the lake. He struck his head on the chute, sustaining a fracture of the skull.

Mission Steamer Lost.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 25.—The loss of the missionary steamer Hiram Bingham and the death of her master, Captain Alfred C. Walkup, were reported in a cablegram from Sydney, N.S.W., received by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missionaries yesterday.

A Real Patriot.

Montreal, Aug. 25.—A humorous turn was given to the work of the civic Royal Commission, when Mr. Rodolphe Brunet, the famous middleman for the distribution of road contracts, came into the limelight on the witness stand. Mr. Brunet described his work as a patriotic triumph for the French-Canadians, as opposed to their English-speaking fellow-citizens.

Despite his patriotism, however, Mr. Brunet was compelled to admit that he had been quite impartial, and accepted commissions from English contractors who wanted to get their tenders approved by the council as readily as he had taken the same from his own friends of the French-Canadian persuasion. He will probably spend some time in the witness box.

Bull Killed Old Man.

Quebec, Aug. 25.—Pascal Parent, aged 72 years, of Notre Dame de Sacre Coeur, near Rimouski, was killed by a vicious bull in a field at his home on Sunday. The animal had been chained up, owing to his viciousness, but was liberated by the old man, who had gone to feed it. The victim was well-known and highly esteemed, and was mayor of the parish.

TWO HUNDRED DROWN

Big Excursion Steamer Is Rammed at Montevideo.

Terrible Disaster Occurs at Harbor Entrance of Big South American City, When Vessels Collide and Sleeping Passengers, Consisting Chiefly of Women and Children, Perish—Sailors and Men Saved.

Montevideo, South America, Aug. 25.—In a driving rainstorm about 6 o'clock yesterday morning, the Argentine excursion steamer Colombia and the North German Lloyd steamer Schlesien collided at the entrance of Montevideo Harbor.

The Colombia was entering port and the Schlesien was outward bound for Bremen. The Colombia's bow was crushed in and she sank almost immediately.

Between 150 and 200 persons were killed or drowned as a result of the accident.

The Colombia carried about 200 passengers and a crew of 48 men. Most of the passengers were asleep at the time and a panic followed the crash.

Almost immediately small boats put out to the sinking steamer, but the work of rescue was rendered very difficult and dangerous by the high sea which was running. About 70 persons were taken into the boats and brought ashore.

Most of the dead are women and children. A majority of the survivors are men. Almost everyone of the crew were saved.

The Colombia was carrying excursionists from Buenos Ayres to the festival at Montevideo, and the disaster has caused the keenest emotion. The Urguayan Government, in consequence, has postponed the fetes arranged for the celebration of the inauguration of the port. The Schlesien was only slightly damaged. Her commander attributes the collision to the wind and the high seas.

Most of the survivors of the vessel were taken from the masts, many of them injured. Scores of bodies have been recovered.

The Colombia was an old steamer of 1,200 tons.

Strathcona at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Aug. 25.—Last night the city was en fete and the population marched along the streets taken by Lord Strathcona. Not since Royalty visited Winnipeg has so much interest been manifested in any one person. Every notability in town was at the depot to greet the High Commissioner, and a guard of honor and escort was furnished by the Strathcona Horse, late R.C.M.R.S. Brief greetings were voiced by Lieut.-Governor Sir D. McMillan, Mayor Evans and several members of the Provincial Cabinet, including Premier Roblin.

Strathcona expressed gratification at again visiting his former home and inspected the cadets outside the depot with the Kilted Boys' Band. Some four thousand took part in a torchlight procession, which passed through decorated streets to Government House, where the High Commissioner is the guest of the Lieutenant-Governor. At the Government House a number of old-timers greeted Strathcona.

Steamer Collingwood Rammed.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 25.—The big steamer Collingwood, owned by the Farrar Transportation Co., of Collingwood, Ont., was rammed and sunk in a collision on the river here last night with the steamer George L. Craig. The crew, numbering 23 hands, succeeded in reaching the shore safely.

The Collingwood, immediately after the collision, was headed for the American side, but filled rapidly from a big hole in her starboard side amidships, and sank in 40 feet of water about 100 yards from the bank.

Bugproof Potato Found.

Montague, Mass., Aug. 25.—The Rev. Amos N. Somers, a Unitarian minister here, stated yesterday that he has succeeded in growing a "bugproof" potato. He said:

"The vines of my potatoes have a peculiar odor, which is offensive to the potato bug, for it never goes near them. I have taken bugs from plants of the usual type in the next row in my potato patch, and put them in my new vines, and in half an hour I can't find one."

Hid Peanuts Under Bananas.

Windsor, Aug. 25.—Joseph Zakoor, a Syrian, tried to bring a 100-lb sack of peanuts into Windsor yesterday without paying duty. He came over from Detroit with a wagonload of bananas and in the bottom of the wagon, all covered up, were the peanuts. Zakoor declared to the customs officers that he had nothing but bananas, so when a search revealed the goobers, he was compelled to pay a double duty.

Accidents of a Day.

Hamilton, Aug. 25.—George Fuller fell from the new People's Brewery Building yesterday afternoon and was badly cut about the head.

Alfred Peirce was taken to the City Hospital from the Westinghouse works yesterday afternoon. He had the ends of two fingers cut off in a machine.

Joe Octogol, an Italian, 25 Chestnut avenue, had one of his feet crushed at the steel plant last evening.

French-Canadian Congress Postponed.

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—The French-Canadian Educational Congress, which was to have been held in Ottawa next month, has been postponed till some time in November. Over 400 delegates are expected in the city for the Congress and some very prominent figures in French-Canadian political, professional and religious circles will attend.

New Brunswick Pioneer Dead.

St. John, N.B., Aug. 25.—Miss Dorthia McGaw died here last night. When she went to Petersville, Queen's County, in 1833, at the age of three, there were no roads, and her brother carried her on his back for 50 miles through the woods.

AMONG THE CANNIBALS.

British Force Goes Into Wilds of Northern Nigeria.

Details of the expedition lately concluded by the southern Nigerian Government, by which some 5,000 square miles of hitherto unknown and unadministered country in the north and on the borders of Northern Nigeria have been brought under effective control, have been received by Reuter's Agency.

These operations, which were carried out among tribes who for the most part had never previously seen a white man, proved entirely successful, and were so managed that there was practically no serious fighting. They began early in November last, and only concluded in the middle of April.

The British force consisted of 700 men of the southern Nigeria Regiment, under the command of Colonel Trenchard, who had with him thirty officers, six Maxims and 700 carriers.

The Yala people, in whose country the columns remained for a month, gave a good deal of trouble. When their villages were entered they were found to be deserted, the women and live stock having been removed. The men meanwhile had formed bush camps in the open yam fields, where they could see the approach of the British, and had also hidden in the branches of trees scouts, whose duty it was to fire signal guns.

The people then took to their heels and encamped elsewhere, but fired on the column when they were in what they regarded as a tight corner. This tribe, like most of those encountered, was armed with flint locks and carried poisoned arrows, but, fortunately, the country was fairly open and the aim not very accurate.

After some weeks of this kind of thing the Yala came in, but declined to give up their arms.

In places the natives, hearing of the approach of a large force, dug pits and planted stakes to prevent their progress. What little hostility there was occurred during the earlier part of the operations in the Okpoto country and among the northern Ibo tribes.

Colonel Trenchard's force started in two columns—one from the Niger and one from the Cross River—with instructions to make for an unknown spot marked X, the two afterward joining at Ikem, where the first base camp was formed. From this base small columns were sent out in various directions, each being responsible for a definite district, which was to be mapped, and where the officers' duty was to get into touch with the natives and to show them how to make good roads.

In each case the commanding officer of the column summoned the local chief and explained the Government terms, emphasizing the fact that all human sacrifices must stop, that good roads must be made, and that a British commissioner would be appointed, who would settle all disputes.

On these occasions there were impressive gatherings of thousands of natives, in many cases cannibals, and for the most part naked, or practically so. They did not show undue delight at the advent of the British, and, as a rule, silently listened to the recital of the Government terms, and then slowly dispersed.

The various columns report that they found far less human sacrifice and juju rites in the hitherto unknown north than among the tribes of the delta, and, on the whole, the people were of a better physical type. Several juju places were seen, and a big centre was destroyed. It was impossible to discover the nature of the juju rites practiced, but in the vicinity of one big juju house discovered in a bush clearing there was found a good deal of blood—whether human or not was not ascertained.

Australian Woman Becomes Hindu.

A remarkable ceremony took place at Lucknow, India, when Miss Thomson, a pretty young Australian woman, who is to be married to a Bengali barrister, formally renounced Christianity and embraced Hinduism as practiced by the Ayra Samajists.

The ceremony took place in the courtyard of the rajah of Vizianagram's residence, and was watched by a large crowd of natives.

Miss Thomson wore native costume, with a pale blue "sari," bespangled with gold, and heavy gold bangles on her arms. At the conclusion of the ceremony, which lasted more than an hour, she almost fainted.

The convert's reception by the Ayra Samajists was the customary "purification" by fire and water. Miss Thomson answered the questions of the Hindu priest in a low voice, ceremonially washed her hands and head and poured a spoonful of oil on a sandal-wood fire. She then received a Hindu name.

Too Many Novels.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward, in an address read for her at the opening of a free library at Kendal, said that people who read nothing else but novels never properly appreciated them. Novels were the jam of literature, and all properly conducted persons should begin their meal with bread and butter. Writers of novels wanted readers to be a little hungry for them—not to bring to them a mind full of the debris of a thousand plots—and be proof against their little arts. In the interests of her own craft, she urged all who might use the new library to venture out on the broad seas of literature, to be hardy and courageous, full of curiosity and sympathy, and ready to take trouble with a tough subject and a long book.

Starvation Treatment a Failure

The Sensible Cure for Indigestion Is "Little Digesters".

Probably because the taking of food causes such intense discomfort, many dyspeptics think that by abstaining from this and that—practically starving themselves—they can cure the trouble.

Of course, where Indigestion is caused by sheer gluttony, cutting down the food would no doubt do good. But in most cases Indigestion is caused, not by overeating, but by lack of physical exercise, and consequent lack of vigor in the organs of digestion. Partial starvation still further impairs the bodily vigor, and makes the trouble worse.

The dispeptic needs plenty of good, wholesome food. He can eat it, and DIGEST IT, TOO, if he takes a "Little Digester" after each meal. "Little Digesters" help the weakened stomach to do properly that which it cannot do alone—digest and assimilate the food needed to build up the system.

UNITING THE EMPIRE

Sir James Thomson Addresses Scientists at Winnipeg.

Distinguished President of Association Says B. A. A. S. Is Bringing the Units of the Empire Together—Believes in Interchange of Students by Universities—He Admires the Canadians.

Winnipeg, Aug. 26.—The British Association for the Advancement of Science inaugurated their gathering in Winnipeg with a big mass meeting in the Walker Theatre last night. The auditorium, seating over 2,000, was crowded with visiting scientists and citizens.

The feature of the meeting was the inaugural address of the president, Sir James Thomson. He referred to the holding of the gathering in Canada again. The association was now an Imperial one. In meeting in various parts of the oversea dominions they were doing much to draw the units of the Empire together. Sir James paid a tribute to the Canadian students, who had come under his ken at Cambridge, as having made records for themselves, and advocated very strongly the interchange of students by the universities of the Empire.

He referred to the importance of original research as a means of education and to the advantages and disadvantage as a training for work in science of the systems of education now in force in the schools and universities.

He also dealt with the light thrown by recent investigation on the nature of electricity, on the relation between matter and ether, and the part played by ether in modern physics. He also discussed some of the problems raised by the discovery of radium.

The vote of thanks was tendered by Mayor Evans, who also gave the official civic welcome, and it was seconded by Lord Strathcona.

The address of the retiring president, Dr. Francis Darwin, was made by Dr. G. Carey Foster, the former being unable to be present.

In the afternoon the various sections met and organized for the meetings of the week. To-day the sectional meetings proper started, when the various presidents gave their opening addresses.

No Dogs on Beach.

Atlantic City, N.J., Aug. 26.—Pugs and poodles and all other four-footed animals are outlawed from the beach. Mayor Stoy yesterday signed the new ordinance which provides when they may appear for their airing or bath in the surf.

The law says: "It shall be unlawful for any dog to be in the water of the Atlantic Ocean within the confines of Atlantic City between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. The penalty is a fine."

Dogs under other ordinances are barred from the boardwalk unless held in leash. The new law was passed because of the numerous animals which shared the breakers with bathers.

There has been some protest among dog owners, but the mayor insisted that the law is necessary and will be rigidly enforced.

Alabama Dry Laws.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 26.—The special session of the Alabama Legislature, which has adjourned after 22 working days, accomplished the chief purpose for which it was called by passing drastic prohibition laws and capping the laws by submitting to the people an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the sale or manufacture of intoxicants in Alabama.

The election will be held the last week in November. At least ten prohibition measures were passed. Under the new laws a person may not have liquors anywhere but in his home. Foreign corporations may not do business of any kind in Alabama if it be shown that they sell or manufacture liquors in other states.

Prisoners Tortured.

Tangier, Aug. 26.—By the Sultan's special order, according to advices received from Fez, the prisoners captured at the defeat of El Rogin have been barbarously tortured.

The Sultan first personally questioned them, and then had them taken in procession to the gate of Rabelhamis where, in the presence of troops and populace of Fez, every prisoner had his right hand severed and the stump plunged into boiling pitch. The women had their teeth drawn, some of the leaders having their right foot amputated also. The whole operation was conducted in the most cruel manner. The British Consul has entered a formal protest against these atrocities.

Duty on Hay.

Montreal, Aug. 26.—A Washington lawyer arrived in the city yesterday morning and held a consultation with a number of hay shippers, who are seeking to recover from the United States Government excess duties on hay which they have shipped across the line during the past four years. There are over 150 claimants, and the amount involved in the neighborhood of $250,000. The duties charged were 20 per cent., as the U. S. One claimant has won his case in the Court of Claims at Washington.

"I have not always been able to agree with him," said Sir Wilfrid, "but I will say that I believe no man in his day and generation has done more for the militia of Canada than he has done."

Thousands of Prisoners.

An enormous number of arrests have been made during the last few days. Whole families, men and women, and even young children, have been taken from their homes.

Civil guards, with fixed bayonets, went to the residence of Senor Dias, a wealthy merchant, and dragged him and his wife and two children, aged 7 and 9 years, from their beds at 2 a.m. A rich banker, his wife and daughter were treated in a similar way.

The prisoners at Barcelona alone number 5,000. Seventeen hundred are confined at Montaro and 1,000 at Munresa.

Men, women, and children are packed together indiscriminately. Meanwhile flying columns of infantry and cavalry continue to scour the whole province in the search for revolutionists.

Legs Broken While Standing.

New York, Aug. 26.—When Frederick Stockholm, an engineer in the employ of the Otis Elevator Co., of Yonkers, suddenly fell beneath a desk at which he had been standing yesterday, those who thought he had fainted and had run to aid him found, to their amazement, that both his legs were broken.

At St. John's Hospital, in Yonkers, his was said to be one of those rare cases in which a person's limbs are snapped like toothpicks by the mere contraction of the muscles.

Stockholm, who is a giant in stature, was looking over some plans on the high desk and was leaning heavily on his right hand. The hand slipped off the edge of the desk, and, in making a sudden movement to regain his balance, the man came down heavily on his feet, the muscular strain breaking both right and left femurs—the former a few inches above the knee, and the latter close to the hip.

Thousands of Prisoners.

Lisbon, Aug. 26.—A despatch to The Mundo from Barcelona says that at the last meeting the Spanish Cabinet decided upon the most stringent measures against all those suspected of taking part in the recent revolutionary movement. An enormous number of arrests have been made during the last few days. Whole families, men and women, and even young children, have been taken from their homes.

Civil guards, with fixed bayonets, went to the residence of Senor Dias, a wealthy merchant, and dragged him and his wife and two children, aged 7 and 9 years, from their beds at 2 a.m. A rich banker, his wife and daughter were treated in a similar way.

The prisoners at Barcelona alone number 5,000. Seventeen hundred are confined at Montaro and 1,000 at Munresa.

Men, women, and children are packed together indiscriminately. Meanwhile flying columns of infantry and cavalry continue to scour the whole province in the search for revolutionists.

Legs Broken While Standing.

New York, Aug. 26.—When Frederick Stockholm, an engineer in the employ of the Otis Elevator Co., of Yonkers, suddenly fell beneath a desk at which he had been standing yesterday, those who thought he had fainted and had run to aid him found, to their amazement, that both his legs were broken.

At St. John's Hospital, in Yonkers, his was said to be one of those rare cases in which a person's limbs are snapped like toothpicks by the mere contraction of the muscles.

Stockholm, who is a giant in stature, was looking over some plans on the high desk and was leaning heavily on his right hand. The hand slipped off the edge of the desk, and, in making a sudden movement to regain his balance, the man came down heavily on his feet, the muscular strain breaking both right and left femurs—the former a few inches above the knee, and the latter close to the hip.

Hot Blaze in West Belleville To-day.

FIRE THIS MORNING DESTROYED WAREHOUSE OF JOHN A. CONSAUL, WITH CONTENTS.

At 10.30 this morning, fire broke out in a large frame building situated in rear of Mr. John A. Consaul's residence on Catherine street. The building was used by Mr. Consaul as a workshop and store room. When the fire was seen it was in the interior of the building and in a few minutes the structure was enveloped in flames and soon fell a prey to the devouring element

The fire brigade were kept busy for a few minutes, as the roofs of a number of buildings adjacent caught fire from blazing embers which were carried by a west wind. These incipient blazes were, however, extinguished before any damage of account was sustained.

In conversation with a representative of the Intelligencer, Mr. Consaul stated that he was at a loss to understand how the fire originated. A workman employed by him was in the building a few minutes before the broke out, and saw no trace of any fire or smoke. All the contents were destroyed, including household effects belonging to Dr. Calverley, Ernest Blaind and H. McIninch, jr. The insurance, if any, on the goods could not be ascertained, as two of the parties are out of the city at present.

Mr. Consaul estimates that his loss on the building, tools, etc., is about $500, partially covered by insurance.

Makes Drinking Water Safe

Scientists working in McGill University Laboratories in Montreal, recently discovered a Typhoid Fever preventative that should be universally used wherever there is danger of infection from drinking water.

It is simply "Sovereign" Fruit Juice, added to the water fifteen minutes before it is to be drunk.

When this is done, the scientists say every Typhoid germ in the infected water is destroyed.

"Sovereign" Lime Fruit Juice with water makes a delicious, cooling drink, as well as a perfecly safe one

Turkish Troops Say No Pay, No Fight.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Vienna, Aug. 26.—The Mahdist rebels in Yemen province, in Southwestern Arabia, have dynamited the Turkish barracks, killing 240 of the soldiers, according to messages to-day from Constantinople

The exact location of the barracks is not stated. Turkish troops are now scattered through Yemen, but it is expected that, owing to big arrears in their wages, they are now refusing to fight the rebels.

The Mahdist movement is declared to be wholly revolutionary.

Fierce Fighting at Alexandria Bay.

RIVAL FACTIONS CLASHED AND CAPTAINS AND CREWS ENGAGED IN WARFARE.

Alexandria Bay, Aug. 23.—The biggest and fiercest fight in years between the two rival steamboat lines occurred here at 9.30 o'clock this morning, involving not only the captains and crews of the steamer St. Lawrence, of the Folger line, and of the yacht Castanet, of the Visger line but the local agents of both lines. A stream of water from the Castanet's fire hose was played upon the fighters, fists flew like flails, stones were thrown promiscuously, while a crowd of fully 400 people looked on, some occasionally getting drenched when the hose was unconsciously turned in their direction as some fighter endeavored to reach his opponent

To-day's melee was the climax of bitter feelings which have existed for weeks. Fists to-day supplanted the harsh words that have heretofore been passed. Not since the night some years ago when an alleged attempt was made to cast off the lines of the Castanet has there been such a battle on the St. Lawrence river.

There are two sides to the affair. According to members of the Castanet crew, Captain Walter Visger, on board his boat lying at the dock, called for fire drill. It so happened that the St .Lawrence was at the dock at the same time. Howard Folger, manager of the line, was here and a witness to the scrap, which began but a few seconds after Captain Visger had called for the drill.

Acording to the Castanet crew, the water came before Dan, a deck hand, had time to turn the nozzle away from the dock. At any rate the stream of water struck Captain Kendall, of the St. Lawrence. Captain Kendall clambored aboard the Castanet and got after the man holding the nozzle.

About this time things got decidedly interesting. Members of the crews came running in all directions. Captain Kendall grappled with the deck hand, and, it is alleged, Captain Visger then turned the hose on to both fighters. Finally Captain Kendall was hustled ashore, and on the docks the battle raged fiercely Harry Apple, a Folger agent, sailed into Walter Visger, jr., and the two fought like tigers. A beer barrel tripped Folger and the two rolled over and over on the ground Young Kenneth Visger ran to his brother's aid and smashed Apple between the eyes.

Captains Kendall and Visger were engaged in a fistic encounter, which landed Visger on his back. Stones were flying thick and fast, one taking Capatin Visger in the back. That all of the summer guests standing about escaped the flying missles was marvellous.

When the battle finally came to an end the two fighting factions drew apart. Walter Visger, jr., went to his home, while the two boats, with glaring captains in command, steamed out on their respective routes.

Captain Kendall's story of the affair is that shortly before the scrap he had a few words with Captain Visger in regard to the merits of the boats. Captain Kendall in some way lost his cap aboard the Castanet, by which he was standing. He believes that the thing had been deliberately planned. No sooner, he says, did he start to get aboard after his cap than the stream of water struck him, and members of the Castanet's crew surrounded him. Captain Kendall finally tore himself out of his coat, knocked three of his assailants down and tried to get ashore. The water was drenching him to the skin.

Acording to reports this afternoon, Captain Visger is shy a couple of teeth as a result of the battle.

NIGHT SCENE AT CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION ONE TO LIVE IN MEMORY.

The "Electric City" will be a fitting name for the Canadian National Exhibition grounds at Toronto this year. All the big buildings are being fitted with exterior decorations of electric light and they will turn the Exhibition nights into the whitest kind of days. High Prices and Immigration.

The relation of high prices for produce and meat, which are practically double what they were twenty years ago, to immigration is being interestingly discussed. The lack of intensive farming has been blamed in some quarters, it being contended that high prices were the natural result of such neglect. But it is now considered that there are other and equally important considerations at the root of the general increase. The wheat fields of Britain, which have been cultivated for one thousand years, yield thirty bushels to the acre while in some of the western states virgin soil yields less than thirteen or fifteen. The soil may, of course, determine the crop, but it may also be that under any methods of farming it would be impossible to do better.

The new cause of high prices has been determined by Mr. Wilson, the secretary of Agriculture of the United States, whose intelligent grasp of agricultural conditions has made him one of the most effective officials in the United States. Mr. Wilson declares that "lack of farm hands, a problem now faced by the farmer on this continent, is the chief cause of the high prices of food stuffs."

In Canada the immigrants who land on our shores nearly all flock to the larger [illegible]. Those of them who have farmed are incompetent and nearly useless because, as a rule, unacquainted with modern farm machinery. Boys raised on farms leave as soon as they attain certain ages for occupations in the cities, or in other industries, because of the long hours of labor on the farm. Prices of grain and vegetables are, under these conditions, bound to be high and, of course, with these staples selling at high prices, the value of meats is thereby raised.

It would be interesting, as the Ottawa Citizen says, to know how many of the great number of immigrants brought into Canada last year are employed as farm laborers. It is scarcely probable that anything like a proportionate percentage of them have been satisfied with farm work. They have crowded into the cities and helped raise the prices of food stuffs. The immigration business, indiscriminately conducted, is an expensive one to every citizen of Canada. What is needed is fewer immigrants and more farm laborers.

Bellevillians Won Prizes at Madoc.

GATHERIN' O' THE CLANS A BIG SUCCESS — TOM BOWIE MADE A CLEAN-UP.

At Madoc village yesterday, was assembled one of the largest gatherings ever seen in that village. The occu- Clans, and members of the Sons of Scotland from Belleville, Campbellford, Peterboro and other places were in attendance, in addition to hundreds of other visitors. It was an ideal day and nothing occurred to mar the proceedings. The Forty-eighth Highlanders Band, of Toronto, was present and during the afternoon, at the park, furnished a pleasing programme of music. The village was tastefully and appropriately decorated for the occasion.

During the afternoon an excellent programme of sports, etc., was carried out. Mr. Thos. Bowie, of this city, secured five first prizes in the following events: Highland Fling, Sword Dance, Reel o' Tulloch, Sailor's Hornpipe and Irish Jig. Mr. Peter McGregor, of this city, won the second prizes in the first three events above, and also won the 440 yards dash, securing a valuable silver cup.

The tug-of-war was won by Campbellford Camp.

In the evening the 48th Highlanders' Band gave a concert in the hall, the latter being filled to the doors. The Belleville contingent arrived home at a late hour, tired but happy.

The judges for the dancing events were Messrs. John McIntosh and D. McLean, of this city, and Jas. Whytock, of Madoc.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

BASEBALL.

Belleville Won Good Game.

A good game of baseball was played here yesterday afternoon, in fact, it was the best exhibition of ball seen here this season. Belleville and Trenton were the competitors and the former were victorious by a score of 3 to 2. There was not a large attendance of spectators. Smith and Brown, the battery for Belleville, did good work, as did also Surplis and Wilder for the visitors. The fielders also played their positions well, but few errors occurring during the game. Mr. E. O'Flynn was umpire, and gave general satisfaction. The line-up of the teams was as follows:

Belleville—Smith p, Brown c, Gerow 1b, Reeves 2b., Brennan s.s., Connell 3b, Thomas r.f., O'Neil c.f., Delaney l.f.

Trenton—Surplis p, Wilder c, McCauley 1b, Dobenskey 2b, McMahon s.s., Robertson 3b, Staples r.f., LeFleur l.f., Richardson c.f.

Detroit is once more leading in the American league, but by only 7 points over Philadelphia, with Boston but 12 points behind the Quakers.

Claude Pearce, of Toronto, won the 10-mile race at Madoc yesterday, in the fast time of 56.10. Phinn, of Hamilton was second, and Jones, a Niagara Falls Indian, third.

Joe Kelley, of Toronto, may go to Baltimore next season, so a rumor says.

Surplis, who pitched for Trenton here yesterday, was formerly with Port Hope, where he was touted as a star.

TERRORS OF THE JUNGLE.

The Mosquitoes of Africa Are Worse Than the Lions.

"The African mosquitoes intoxicate you. They inject so much poison into you that you are dazed, your eyes roll and you stagger and speak thickly. In a word, you're drunk," said a missionary.

"In the Nyassa country I'd always start getting ready for bed and the mosquitoes an hour before sunset. I'd set up my mosquito net with the utmost care. I'd clamp down its edges with valises and boxes. I'd light inside it three green wood fires, filling it with a bitter smoke that all insects are supposed to loathe.

"Finally I'd get in myself. I'd smoke big pipes of the black native tobacco, and I'd long miserably in that hot, smoky atmosphere for the dawn.

"Despite all my precautions quite 200 or 300 mosquitoes would get inside my net as soon as darkness fell. They were like a whirlwind in there. It couldn't have been worse. Their noise and their nipping made me feverish—made me really delirious at times.

"At last, in exhaustion, I'd get a few hours of troubled sleep, awakening for breakfast drunk from the poison injected by hundreds of tiny needles into my veins.

"No; it isn't the elephants or the giraffes that trouble the African hunter, but the skeeters."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

MISSED ONE POINT.

The Lady Told Him What More He Could Have Said.

"I am going to tell you the truth about yourself," he said.

"Go on," said the young and ambitious actress.

"I have in my time had rare opportunities to observe beautiful, graceful and talented women, and I violate no confidence in saying that you are the queen of them all. You unite in your lovely person that peculiar magnetism which lays audiences at your feet. Your genius, shining through all the deficiencies of stagecraft, enables you to triumph over every obstacle. So supreme are you that you have the right to rise above all conventionalities, to marry, to love, to discard whom you please, and no one will dare to criticise. Your work will live. You are the very personification of the highest art. United with this your perfection of beauty gives you the just title to a lasting fame."

"Is all that true?" she asked softly.

"Absolutely. Would you have me say more? What more could I say?"

She sighed.

"You might," she answered, "have mentioned my clothes and my figure."—Puck.

Disinterested.

Lord Monboddo, an eminent member of the Scotch judiciary and one of the clear cut figures in Boswell's immortal "Life of Johnson," was a great beau in his youth and in his later years a brilliant and learned if whimsical man. He was a friend of the Garricks and one day was their guest at their villa at Hampton Court when Hannah More was also visiting there. They were walking together in the garden when his lordship astonished the fair and sprightly Hannah by a declaration of love and an offer of his heart and hand. Meeting with a positive refusal, he soon returned to the house and made a clean breast of it to Mrs. Garrick.

"I am very sorry for this refusal," he said in conclusion. "I should have liked so much to teach that nice girl Greek."

Our Languages.

What a lot of languages we talk, even if we talk only English! I was assailed by a man across the luncheon table with a language about a cup tie final and confessed that it was quite unintelligible. Then another man talked about golf, which is another language. And then the woman's language elbows these columns. "The Countess — wore a sea green cloth skirt with a bolero of the same color and a white marabou stole, and a black taffeta bow garnished her huge hat of burnt tagel straw." It is a fine example of women's slang. But to the man it means nothing—but expense.—London Outlook.

Homemade Ink.

A good ink is made in this way: Bruise half a pound of nutgalls and stand in one quart of water, shaking it now and then, for about four hours. Then add three ounces and a half of gum arabic and when it is quite dissolved three ounces of copperas. To prevent the ink from becoming moldy when kept add three or four drops of creosote. This gives a pleasant-like smell to the ink and does not corrode the pens as chloride of mercury would do.

Preparing For a Siege.

Wife—The last time I asked you to give me some money you said you couldn't because the cashier was sick. Now you say it's the treasurer. Husband—I know it. He caught it from the cashier, and now I'm afraid the secretary will get it.—Life.

A Queer Attack.

"Some people can stand on the top of a high building and look down," said Mrs. Lapsing, "but I can't. It always gives me an attack of verdigris."—Chicago Tribune.

Cutting.

Canadian National Exhibition

TORONTO

HORSES AT THE FAIR.

Everything Points to an Immense Exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Horse entries are coming in so fast at the office of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, that the success of that department promises to be more pronounced than ever before.

The prizes given for speeding in the ring aggregate $4,000, and that in itself is a guarantee that the fastest harness horses in Canada will again be found in the races on the afternoon of August 30th and 31st and Sept. 1st and 2nd.

In Clydesdales everything points to an entry that will exceed last year's show, when they were there in numbers and quality that cannot be equalled anywhere on the continent. Hackneys are growing better year by year and the show of them is excellent, while Toronto is a centre for hunters and jumpers of the very highest class; the competitions in this line excite almost world-wide interest.

In harness horses there is always a great exhibit, while the pony classes have been enlarged and extended in keeping with the growing popularity of the children's pets.

TREASURES IN ART.

Will be a Feature of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

Famous pictures from the leading art galleries of Europe will again be a feature of the Canadian National Exhibition. The permanent agent cables that he has secured many of the leading pictures of the year, and that the list is coming by mail. In addition to this there will be an exhibit of art photography by the leading art photographers of England, Germany, France and Italy, and a graphic art exhibit by the leading illustrators of New York, including such men as Frederick Remington, Maxfield Parish and Charles Dana Gibson.

GOODS WHILE YOU WAIT.

Process of manufacture an interesting feature of Canadian National Exhibition.

The process of manufacture department is always one of the most interesting features of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and this year it promises to be far more extensive than ever before. In all there will be about forty industries at work showing just how shoes, silk, cotton goods, prints, and many other of the articles you use every day are made. It is impossible here to name more than a few of the exhibitors, but here are some well worth looking up.

The United Shoe Manufacturing Co., Montreal, manufacturing ladies' and gents' boots and shoes, showing the different stages from the cutting out of the leather to the finished shoe.

Merchants Rubber Co., of Berlin, demonstrating the manufacture of rubber shoes, showing every process from the crude rubber to the finished boot.

Davis & Henderson, manufacturing and printing envelopes.

The Canadian Silk Co. weaving silk and badges with photos on them.

Gundy, Clapperton, cutting glass, showing the process in which the fine quality of cut glass is produced.

Shredded Wheat, showing process in which their products are prepared and made portable and palatable.

Dominion Textile Co., Montreal, showing process of manufacture of fine cotton goods, prints, etc.

SHEEP AND SWINE.

Sheep and swine come in for a large share of attention at the Canadian National Exhibition. The best in Yorkshires, Berkshires and Tamworths fill the pig pens at the big Fair, while in the sheep pens are Shropshires, Cotswolds, Leicesters, Oxford Downs of the first quality. All the best that Canada and the United States can produce are found in this department. That the exhibit is a large one is shown by the fact that permanent pens have been built on the grounds for 700 sheep and 600 pigs. Then there is poultry and pet stock enough to fill a building 220 ft. by 60 ft.

The Department of Agriculture is putting on a display of wholesome and diseased meats at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, and will send two lecturers from Ottawa to tell the people how to discern the good from diseased meats. This should be of interest to cattle men, as well as meat producers.

EXPLODING SUBMARINE MINES.

Ships to be blown up on the Waterfront at Exhibition Grounds.

The submarine mine which plays such an important part in naval warfare will be part of the military display at the Canadian National Exhibition. These hidden guardians of every port in war time will be laid in front of the Exhibition grounds and every day at 5 o'clock a ship will be blown up by one of them. There is nothing more spectacular than what happens to a ship when it runs on to one of these hidden dangers of the deep.

EXHIBIT

of specially selected plants and seed taken from seed plots of members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, Toronto Industrial Exhibition, Aug. 30 to Sept. 13, and Canada Central Exhibition, Ottawa, Sept. 10 to 18 inclusive. With a view to giving greater publicity to the work which is being done in Canada by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association in the improving of cultivated plants, and in order that a medium may be provided through which the officers of the Association may come in touch with a greater number of those who are specially interested in the problem of crop improvement, arrangements have been made to place a special educational exhibit of selected plants and seed in the Agricultural building of each of the above mentioned Fairs. The exhibit will be in charge of the Secretary or some other officer qualified to discuss the general work of the Association. It is to be hoped that a large number will take advantage of this opportunity to learn more of this important movement.—L. H. NEWMAN, Sec. C.S.G.A.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITS.

All the provinces will be in line with exhibits in the Provinces building at Canadian National Exhibition this year. Each Provincial Government is at work on a display that will do justice to its territory, and the gold and fruit of British Columbia, the golden grain of the prairies from Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba, the various products and minerals of Ontario, right down to the best coal and farm products of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, will form one of the many features that makes the Fair truly National in character.

CORPS VS. CORPS.

Real Live Competitions in the Military Competitions at the Canadian National.

The Military Display and Tournament at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, will have more features of real interest this year than anything of the kind previously attempted in Canada. In such competitions as the Victoria Cross and wrestling on horseback, corps will be arrayed against corps, the Royal Canadian Dragoons stationed at Toronto, against the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery stationed at Kingston. The rivalry between these corps is very keen, so much so that the men are also anxious to mix things up a bit with a single stick in the Balaclava Melee, if the permission of the officers can be obtained. However, the officers have not yet decided. Some think a few hard knocks would not hurt the men, while others are inclined to think that the competition would resolve itself into something too much like actual warfare.

COMEDY IN FIREWORKS.

Some Funny Things Pictured in Lines of Fire.

"The Battle of the North Sea" and "The Siege of Kandahar" are the features but by no means the whole of the fireworks display at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. In addition there are 62 distinct numbers on the fireworks programme and they include everything that can be imagined in pyrotechnics. And in these numbers comedy has its place. For instance a Punch and Judy show is one of the numbers. Another number pictures a boy fishing. A big policeman comes along and orders him away. Another boy seeing this brings on a giant firecracker, sets it behind the policeman and fires it off—result a big policeman kicking on the ground and boys disappearing around the corner.

IMMENSE BANKS OF FLOWERS.

The decorative floral display will again be a feature of the Floriculture department of the Canadian National Exhibition. These immense banks of flowers which cover 500 square feet of floor space make one of the beauty spots of the entire Fair. The premiums for this exhibit alone total $1,110.00, a sum that guarantees plenty of competitors.

DAIRY EDUCATION.

Proper Care of Milk to be Demonstrated at the Canadian National.

The educational features in connection with the Dairy department of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, promise, to be of unusual interest this year, not only to farmers, but to consumers of milk in cities and towns as well. The demonstration work and lectures in the Dairy amphitheatre will be under the immediate charge of Mr. Geo. A. Putnam, director of dairy instructions for the Province, and the Dominion Department will also furnish a man to give some definite instruction along the cow-testing line.

The proper care and handling of milk will be one of the subjects dealt with, and it will be accompanied by demonstrations of milk testing as well as charts showing the value of cow-testing associations.

The Model Military Camp at the Canadian National Exhibition will be fitted with hospital tents for men and women and all casualties on the Exhibition grounds will be handled by the Army Medical Corps which will form part of the permanent corps in the Model Militia Camp.

Every man ought to be doing something more worthy of himself than just making a living.

It's just this way at an opera. The women go to see what the other women in the audience have on, and men go to see what the women on the stage have left off.

A small boy doesn't have a very good time at a picnic unless he requires the services of a doctor a few hours later.

It's all right to look upon the wine when it is red—providing you have sufficient will power to let it go at that.

Many a man's idea of clothing comfort is the kind his wife won't let him wear.

Occasionally a man is so absent-minded that he pays his gas bill the day before it is due.

We wonder if the Lord loves a cheerful giver as much as the cheerful giver loves himself.

If a man never told a lie it's because no young mother ever asked him what he thought of her baby.

is nothing in the world I would not do for him, nothing."

"I cannot understand it," said Mrs. Winter, in sad wonder, forcing her more direct and positive nature to do painful justice to this other that was in sore need of it. "I should think this new —this other feeling—would make you hate him."

"I don't think I know how to hate," said Rhoda listlessly. "I do not remember ever to have felt that way to any one. And why should I hate Eugene? It is myself whom I must despise.

"He must have made you very unhappy, my poor child, or you would never have been so easily drawn away."

"Is that a reason for infidelity? I thought they always told us to the contrary:

'A woman, a dog and a hickory tree,
The more you beat them the better
they be.'"

She seemed scarcely to know what she was saying.

"You do not belong to that type, Rhoda."

"Yes, I do. You don't know me. You think me an exceptional woman —Regy told me so, and told me also that he did not agree with you. He was right. I am like all the rest, only not so good, so constant. 'Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel.' That is what I am. I never have done anything worth while in my life. My philanthropies—oh, the thought of them makes me sick! Such half-hearted, intermittent efforts. My charities, such as they were, have done more harm than good. I never studied anything systematically in my life. I didn't make Frank happy. He was content, to be sure, but it was in spite of me, not because of me. And yet I tried, oh, how I tried! I suppressed myself at every turn after I learned that that was what I must do. And with Eugene, I am not sure—but I can be faithful. Yes, I can be faithful."

"I do not know that I shall let you," said Mrs. Winter slowly.

"How can you help it? What could you say to him? Not the truth," said Rhoda, with a great burning blush.

"It is a cruel sacrifice."

"Oh, a cruel one, to give up what can never be mine, what never would have been mine if I had been free as air. It is noble of me to resign Di Loria, is it not? Can you imagine his reception of the facts of the case? 'Grazie tanto, you are too good, you overwhelm me. I am most unworthy of such a compliment. I should never dare touch with the tip of my little finger the hem of the garment of so exalted a lady—and permit me to take the inconvenience of myself away.'"

She spoke with a hot, hard scorn of herself, wrenching the bitter words out as if in determined and remorseless humiliation of herself.

"Rhoda, Rhoda, we do not know this!"

"Let us pray to know it. Let us hope with all our hearts to know it. I would not think it can be otherwise. If it were—oh, help me! I am not strong."

"If it is then I must take matters into my own hands. My poor Eugene!"

"You must not. You shall not! Promise me. This is my own trouble; no one must touch it," cried Rhoda. "But I need not have cried out," she said, sinking back again, and laying one fevered hand on the little cold one lying outside the carriage robe. "Ther is no danger of such a complication. Perhaps I liked to cheat myself into thinking there might be for a moment, I am so weak and so vain. But I knew better all the time. At least you will admit that my temptation is mitigated," and she looked around with a pitiful little smile.

"Think of it all as a dream," said Mrs. Winter, rousing herself. "I do not believe it is a real experience. Wake up, Rhoda! And if—"her voice faltered, but did not break—"if you find that all you felt, or thought you felt for Eugene was a dream also, waken from that too. But oh, do nothing hastily. There is something so terrible in the power of the written or spoken word. Once gone beyond recall, it has such a power that our will cannot control, and life is made or marred by it. Do not let thought pass into action until you are quite sure what is best for your own soul's sake that action should be."

"My own soul's sake!" murmured Rhoda. "Have I not tried to escape from seeking my own soul's good only? Eugene, first and foremost, there is Eugene."

"He should be first and foremost," said Mrs. Winter, with a note that was almost hard and was quite haughty in her soft voice. Remember that Merram was almost like her own son to her, and that she believed herself to be doing him a mortal injury when she bade Rhoda waken from her dream of loving him if it should prove but a dream. Then, the uncertainty of it all, Di Loria's feelings, of the enduring properties of Rhoda's fancy, of the happiness of either should both be proven. Her pride was touched, too. Little as she had for herself, she could be very stately where those dear to her were concerned, and she had gloried in Eugene's talents, while deploring their bent, as his mother might have done. Who was Rhoda Starr, that she should think it a hardship to marry a man whose preference was a distinction?

"Most women would think it an honor that excluded even the thought of lesser men, to be loved by Eugene Merriam," she added, unconsciously drawing up her frail little figure.

But she did not strike fire. It was not easy for any one at the best of times, to strike fire from Rhoda, and now, utterly humbled and shameful in her own sight, she accepted the rebuke as she had accepted all else that afternoon, with passive, unresenting meekness.

"That is quite true," she said gently. "I told you I was less good, less constant than others. And you need not fear that I shall write or speak rashly. What is there to say?"

"You might tell him that you found you had made a mistake. Such things are done," said Mrs. Winter, not permitting her life-long abhorrence of such things to cause her to deprive Rhoda of one advantage in the matter.

"And give him those reasons for the discovery which he would have every right to demand? No, I will not tell him that. The mistake lies further

WANTED TO MAKE HAY.

A Dominant Parish Clerk With Little Regard For the Dead.

Unfortunately a very young clergyman came to the parish, and then John, the parish clerk, did just, and only just, what he liked. A leading dissenter had died and his wife had named a day to the vicar for the funeral. One fine day in July the funeral procession duly arrived, and the vicar advanced in full canonicals to meet the corpse at the churchyard gate. To his amazement the widow advanced toward him in a perfect fury, shaking her fist in his face and shouting: "Do you call this religion? Where's the gravie? 'Tis shameful to a poor lone widow. Where's his gravie (grave), I tell you?"

The vicar then, for the first time, perceived that John, the clerk, was missing and that no grave had been prepared. Upon inquiry he was told that John was haymaking in the park. A messenger was dispatched to bring him, and shortly John appeared, limping along with a prong in his hand, his shirt sleeves rolled up to the elbow, his coat upon his arm and a large straw hat upon his head. He advanced with perfect composure, and when the vicar began to say, "This is very disgraceful, John," he replied:

"You bide a bit. I sees what it be. You let me talk to she. She knows me, and I knows she." Then, addressing the widow, he proceeded: "Now, I tell ye what it be. You listen to reason. Now we's had rain, rain, rain, and now we're got a fine day we must make our hay. Now your corpsey he won't hurt. Come a wet day, 'tain't no odds to you. You bring your umbrellas, but our hay'd spile. Now, you take he home and listen to reason. Your old man he'd 'a' listened to reason. Hay's a thing as can only be made when 'tis fine. 'Tain't no odds to corpseys whether 'tis wet or dry."

So completely was the woman convinced by the irresistible logic of John's argument that she was completely subdued, and if the vicar had not insisted upon some of the haymakers being called in to dig the grave the funeral would have turned home again.—Cornhill Magazine.

Another Prescription.

The middle aged man who was giving himself a half hour's walk before breakfast had taken his ten-year-old boy along. "Papa," asked the lad, "do you like such a long walk as this?"

"Not particularly."

"What do you take it for?"

"I thought you knew. I am doing it by the advice of Dr. Ringgold. He says it is the best exercise in the world and every man ought to devote half an hour before breakfast, if he has the leisure, to"—

Honk, honk!

Heeding the warning, they stepped out of the way of a huge touring car, which whizzed past them at the rate of thirty miles an hour. The man who was steering it waved his hand in greeting, and the middle aged man responded rather stiffly.

"Why, he knows you, doesn't he, papa?" asked the boy.

"Yes."

"Who is he?"

"Dr. Ringgold."

Clyde Fitch's Story.

The production at the Garrick Theatre, London, of Mr. Clyde Fitch's play, "The Woman in the Case," recalls an amusing story which he tells regarding an incident that occurred during an amateur rehearsal of "As You Like It." Mr. Fitch held this performance in a garden overlooked by a building in course of construction. "As my amateurs," says the popular dramatist, "postured and chanted the bard's beautiful lines, bricklayers above us laid bricks, carpenters planed boards, and masons chipped stones. And one afternoon, during a silent pause in our rehearsal, we heard a voice from the new building say, gravely, 'I prithee, malapert, pass me yonder brick.'"

Food Economy In Hotels.

"Popular opinion is that half of the foodstuffs purchased by a hotel is wasted," said an assistant manager of a New York hotel. "Now, that is not true. A large hotel employs experts who plan so cleverly that almost everything is used from day to day. Take the bread, for instance. What is not used at once is used later for the employes and also for making the toasts on which many special meat and other dishes are served. Cakes are made up according as the demand is for the day. It is known that there will be a greater demand on matinee days, when the tea garden and the restaurants are crowded. Don't believe too much about the waste."

The Siamese Treaty.

The British Empire has just added 15,000 square miles to its area, and 450,000 citizens in Siam. The full details are now published in the treaty signed on March 10. The Siamese Government agree not to cede or lease any land to any foreign Government. In exchange "we renounce all rights of extra-territorial jurisdiction while we and our Asiatic fellow-subjects will in future be subject to Siamese courts, in which a European legal advisor will sit as a judge, and decide. The Indian or Burmese British subject will be tried by a Siamese, who will decide, but in the presence of a European adviser.

Not Gratifying.

Some one sent the manuscript of a story to a literary friend, with the request that he would criticise it. The friend returned it with the following note:

"My Dear Blank—Your book contains much that is both new and good, but what is new is not good and what is good is not new."

Mrs. "Look Here."

"Women in Korea have often no names at all," says Dr. Weir, a missionary. "They are referred to as 'Look here.'"

Two Female Quixotes.

Two women in Natal are at present engaged in fighting the whole force of the British Government. The battle waged by the Misses Colenso—two sisters—is carried on without visible signs of outward warfare, and yet it is a struggle as daring, as strenuous, and a adventurous as any real engagement. Embarked in a quixotic attempt to rescue the native chief, Dinizulu, from the coils of British diplomacy, they have spent almost every cent they had in the world. For the last five years the elder sister, Harriet, has been the guide, philosopher and friend of the native chief, and remained near him while he waited in prison until her efforts got him out, only to be tried and re-convicted on another count. The devotion of the Colenso sisters to the cause of the black chief has won the respect of even their inveterate enemies, the English foreign wire-pullers, who wish to turn the land of Dinizulu over to white explorers.

No white people in the whole of South Africa have greater knowledge and experience of the Natal natives than the two sisters. They are the daughters of the famous Bishop Colenso, first and last Bishop of Natal, who devoted his life to studying the needs and ministering to the spiritual wants of the black men.

Lady Bancroft's Lovebird.

My wife had lost a little green parrot, for the return of which I offered a reward of ten shillings, giving our address, but no name. One of the newspapers, however, had a paragraph headed "Lady Bancroft's Lost Lovebird." It was my privilege, with others, to receive at this period our present King and Queen—then Prince and Princess of Wales—at the Botanical Gardens, when His Royal Highness produced a newspaper cutting and said, "I think I have Lady Bancroft's lost bird. One of the breed was flying about for some days in the garden at Marlborough House, and a gardener succeeded in catching it this morning. Pray go and see if it is yours, as I hope it may be; but, mind, I shall claim the reward." I replied, "Certainly, sir; it is small, but appropriate, being—half a sovereign."—From "The Bancrofts: Recollections of Sixty Years."

His Four Seasons.

An amusing story is told by Sir W. H. Holland of the answer given by a London waif to a Salvation Army captain The zealous officer had asked the boy what work he did to provide him with food, etc., and the reply was. "I pick strawberries in the summer, I pick hops in the autumn I pick pockets in the winter, and oakum for the rest of the year."

WOULDN'T CONFIRM BOY.

Anglican Vicar Refuses Sacrament to Canadian Lad.

The Rev. F. W. Clarke, vicar of Caldicot, South Monmouthsire, England, has refused to allow a Church lad, a Canadian, to attend his confirmation class because the youngster is a member of the Boys' Brigade, which holds its meetings in the Wesleyan school-room. The lad has been brought up in the Church of England, his parents belong to the Church, it was at the invitation of the curate that he presented himself at the vicar's confirmation class, but the vicar asked him at the close of the class if he belonged to the Boys' Brigade, and, when informed that he did, said, "We must draw the line somewhere."

The complaint seems to be that a church lad, though willing to claim full membership of the Church, should have been guilty of the grievous sin of "schism" by belonging to an unsectarian organization, and attending a Bible class in connection with the Boys' Brigade, in which simple Bible teaching is given. The vicar called upon the father of the lad, Mr. Arthur C. Luff, and said: "We must draw the line somewhere. Seeing he is in the brigade, we cannot very well confirm him." Mr. Luff said: "Very well; that finishes the matter."

To an interviewer, Mr. Luff observed: "It is strange to me, after living for fifteen years in British Columbia, where things are so different." When invited to give his version of the matter, the Rev. F. W. Clarke said he hoped no newspaper would interfere in a matter of this kind—"this is a matter which must be left to the clergy to deal with."

Mr. Alfred Kemp, the Wesleyan evangelist, who has charge of the Caldicot Boys' Brigade, said they were absolutely unsectarian, and told the boys to attend what place of worship they pleased, but several members of the Boys' Brigade were asked to leave the church Sunday school because of their membership, and a lieutenant of the brigade left the church choir for the same reason. The curious thing is that the brigade have attended Rogiet Church, where the Archbishop of Monmouth preached to them. But Boys' Brigade members are not wanted in the parish church of Caldicot.

The nobleness of life depends on its consistency, clearness of purpose, quiet and ceaseless energy.—Ruskin.

Fine Sailing and Motor Boat Races — Excellent Sport.

BEST AQUATIC EVENTS OF PRESENT SEASON — TRENTON BOATS COMPETED.

Sailing and motor boat races were held yesterday afternoon on a course over the bay from off the southern portion of Victoria Park. Many spectators witnessed the events, which were certainly the best that have taken place this year. Wind was by no means scarce, as it blew hard from the southwest, and at times the water was exceedingly choppy. No accident occurred to mar the afternoon's sport, although there was an upset, a punt and another craft being disabled by the breaking of the mast. Those in trouble were soon looked after and brought safely into harbor. The races started at 3 o'clock and were not concluded until near 6 o'clock. The presence of two yachts and a dinghy from Trenton increased interest in the races, and all three secured some of the change.

Yacht Race.

This was the first event and there were four entries, namely,

Portia, owned by W. Fraser, of Trenton.

Cynthia, owned by S. E. Carman and Fay Wills, of this city.

Little Nell, owned by B. Hooey, of Trenton,

Gladys, owned by Robt. Gorman, of this city.

This was an excellent race, and the result, as anticipated by the majority of the spectators, was a win for the Portia, which was capably sailed by Capt. Fraser. Although this craft had to give a handicap she won by a fair margin over the Cynthia, which was second. The finish was as follows:

Portia, time	1.25
Cynthia, time	1.33
Little Nell, time	1.51

The Gladys only sailed over a portion of the course.

Dinghys—16 Feet.

In this class there were three entries, namely,

Viola, owned by J. Munroe and J. Ayers, of this city,

Alma, owned by A. Hicks, Trenton,

Senga, owned by Mr. Reid, of this city.

The Viola, as usual, proved to be an easy winner. Although the Alma finished second, the Senga took second prize on time allowance. This was one of the prettiest races of the afternoon.

Dinghys—14 feet.

Three boats were entered in this class, all being owned in the city. They were,

Agnes, owned by H. Rathbun.

Yno, owned by Mr. Sprague.

Jo-Jo, owned by J. Caldwell.

The boats started off in the order named and finished in that position. The three craft are evenly matched, and certainly made a good race.

The Punt Race.

But three punts were entered and it was anticipated that there would be a good race between them, but unfortunately the fates ruled otherwise. Only one finished, namely, After You, owned by J. Callaghan. The Alaska, owned by C. Cornell, and So Long, owned by W. Smith, started, but the former upset and the latter was dismantled.

Motor Boat Race.

There were two motor boats entered for a race over the course, namely, the Wren owned by J. Diamond and G. Ballantyne, and Mr. J. W. Evans' boat. At the start the Wren forged ahead and kept the lead until the finish.

This was the last event upon the score card and the crowd wended their way homeward, pleased with the sport provided.

The Officials.

The officials for the afternoon, who did their duty well, were as follows:

Starter—Wm. Rogers.

Judges — T. Thomson and D. R. Leavens.

Timer—John Borbridge.

Died in Ottawa.

The Ottawa Free Press thus records the death of a gentleman who was married to a Belleville lady, Miss Maud Rankin, daughter of Mr. Hiram Rankin, who was for many years a resident of this city:

Friends regret to learn of the death at 373 Waverly street of John J. Nevens, who passed away last night in his 50th year. Mr. Nevens, who was of a very retiring disposition, possessed many staunch qualities which acquired him sincere friends, especially among his fellow-employees. He was a railway mail clerk of 24 years service and was very highly spoken of as thoroughly conscientious and painstaking. Mr. Neven was a Mason of the Scottish-rite. He leaves to mourn a wife, one son, Claude, and a little daughter, Ava. His eldest son, Guy, predeceased him only fifteen months ago. Besides his immediate family there remain three brothers, Samuel, Albert and Charlie, of Georgetown, Ont.

The funeral, which will be private, will take place on Thursday at 2.30 to St. George's Church and thence to Beechwood cemetery. Rev. Mr. Johnson will officiate.

A dog's bark is often worse than his bite, a mosquito's bite is always worse than his bark.

Stewart-Campbell.

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Campbell, Marysville, Ont., on Tuesday, Aug. 24th, when their eldest daughter Estella G., was united in holy matrimony to David E. Stewart, of Vancouver, B.C. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. H. Creeggan in the presence of the immediate relatives of the family. The bride entered the parlor on the arm of her father and presented a charming appearance, attired in a waist of embroidered net over ecru silk and skirt of brown panama cloth. The groom's present to the bride was a diamond locket and chain. The young couple were the recipients of some very handsome presents. After partaking of a dainty wedding breakfast, the happy young copule were driven to Napanee where they took the International Limited for Toronto, where they will spend a few days before leaving for their future home in Vancouver, B.C. Mr. Stewart is an old Belleville boy and carries with him the good wishes of ahost of friends.

Local Shots Won Several Prizes.

Messrs. H. Day, F. Roote, E. B. Harris and Ald. Sprague, members of the local Gun Club, who went to Gananoque yesterday to participate in a clay pigeon shoot, were most successful. In one of the events, Mr. Day broke 14 birds out of 15, winning a Stevens rifle. He also, with the others, secured a number of cash prizes. They report having had a pleasant outing.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. S. Kyle and Mr. and Mrs. Gribble wish to express their heartfelt thanks to the many friends whose expressions and acts of sympathy during the illness and after the decease of the late Mr. Chas. Kyle made that sad event easier to bear.

When paring fruit, grease the first finger and thumb before paring fruit or vegetables, and there will be no stain on them.

Patriotic French-Canadian Declares That Aldermen Voted Against Him In Spite of the Fact That He Had "Fixed" Them—Furnishes List of His Benefices to the Aldermen. His Benefices to the Aledrmen—Accepted Commissions.

Montreal, Aug. 26.—Rodolphe Brunet, the patriotic friend of the French-Canadian, had a hard time of it yesterday before the Royal Commission. On Tuesday he was quite communicative, but yesterday information had to be dragged from him. He finally became angry, and stated that the Royal Commission was worse than the Spanish Inquisition. He was compelled, however, to answer; and finally admitted accepting commissions or rake-offs from the Lawrence firm of paving contractors and of using his "influence" with the aldermen to get their products accepted. He also furnished a list of the amounts he contributed towards the election of certain aldermen, as follows: Mr. Resther (1902), $75; Mr. Larocque, $75; Mr. Rochon, amount not specified; Mr. Houle, amount not specified; Ald. Duquette, $100 to $200; Ald. Lamoureux, $50; Ald. Sadler, carriages; Ald. J. B. A. Martin, amount not specified (several hundred dollars); Ald. Major, $300 to $400; Ald. Noe Leclaire, $200; Ald. Labrecque, $100 (recently elected for Delorimier).

In this connection Mr. Brunet had to relate two pathetic incidents: both Ald. Lamoureux and Ald. Leclaire had voted against him in spite of his subscriptions. He told Ald. Lamoureux about it, and mentioned certain qualities of gratefulness. He had also seen Ald. Leclaire, and thanked the alderman for voting against him.

"But, of course," Mr. Brunet told the commission, "I did not really thank him."

Quebec Paper Men Anxious.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Aug. 25.—(Special.)—Owing to the continued limited demand for ocean freight space September's shipment, an easier feeling has developed in the market of late and rates to most ports have eased off about 2s 6d per head for cattle and now agents are asking 32s 6d to 35s for Liverpool, 25s to 30s for London, 32s 6d to 35s for Glasgow and 32s 6d for Manchester. At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market this morning the offerings were 750 cattle, 650 sheep, 700 lambs, 825 hogs and 350 calves. A feature of the trade continues to be the weak undertone to the market for cattle and prices are steadier, tending towards a lower level, which is due to the increased offerings and in consequence prices to-day scored a further decline ¼c per lb. At this reduction, however, the demand was good, owing to the large attendance of buyers, and an active trade was done, which resulted in a good clearance being made at an early hour. There were some export buyers on the market, but as choice beeves were rather scarce no business was done in this direction. Top quality steers sold at 5c, good at 4c to 4¾c, medium at 3c to 3¾c, cows, at 2½c to 3½c, and bulls, at 2c per lb.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for sheep or lambs. Supplies were larger, but as the demand for local consumption was keen prices were well maintained and an active trade was done. Sheep sold at 3¾c, and lambs at 6c per lb. Calves are becoming rather scarce as usual at this period of the year and prices in consequence are advancing under good demand, with sales at from $3 to $15 each, as to size and quality.

A stronger feeling developed in the live hog situation on account of the comparatively small offerings, for which there was a keen demand from local packers and dealers and prices in consequence advanced from 10c to 15c per cwt., with sales of selected lots at $8.50 to $8.75 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the supply of live stock for sale this morning consisted of 350 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 650 hogs and 150 calves. The demand was ample to absorb all the offerings and a good trade was done at much the same prices as quoted above.

WILL REINFORCE FLEET

Asquith Gives Out Imperial Defence Scheme.

Canada Will Build Cruisers of Bristol Class and Destroyers of River Class —Australia and New Zealand Will Contribute Indomitables — Pacific Fleet Will Be Strengthened as Soon as Possible.

London, Aug. 27.—Premier Asquith, imparting to the House of Commons yesterday afternoon the results of the conference on Imperial defence, held recently in London, gave a detailed account of the proposed remodelling of the Pacifict fleet, which both Australia and Canada are anxious should be of appreciable strength.

The remodelled fleet will consist of three units, the East Indies, the Australia, and the China squadrons, he said, each unit to be composed of a large armored cruiser of the Indomitable type, three cruisers of the Bristol type, six destroyers of the River class, and six submarines.

It has been arranged that New Zealand and Australia present the Empire with vessels of the Indomitable type, instead of the proffered Dreadnought, and these ships will form a part of the Pacific fleet.

Subject to the approval of the Canadian Parliament, it was agreed that Canada should make a start by building cruisers of the Bristol class and destroyers of the River class, making use of both Pacific and Atlantic ports for the construction work.

Premier Asquith stated that it had been arranged at the Imperial Defence Conference to so organize the military forces of the Crown as to preserve complete autonomy for each dominion, while allowing of assistance in the defence of the Empire by coming into one homogeneous Imperial army.

Replying to a member, Mr. Asquith said the resolutions of the conference had to be submitted to the various Governments before they were binding. The South African delegates did not feel in a position to submit the problem for naval and military defence, or approve any proposal arrived at by the conference until the Union of South Africa had been accomplished.

Mr. Asquith, after replying to a member, explained that after the main conference in the Foreign Office, a military conference took place in the War Office. At this it was recommended by them that complete control be given each dominion over the military forces raised by those dominions, and that the forces should be standardized, the formation of the unit arrangements of transport, etc., being as far as possible assimilated to those recently worked out by the British Army. The military conference entrusted to a sub-committee to work out the detailed applicaton of those recommendations, and a complete agreement was reached.

The Bristol type of cruiser, which Canada will build, establishing a shipyard for the purpose, is a second-class protected vessel, being of 4,800 tons burden, and capable of developing a speed of 26 knots an hour. Britain is at present building five such vessels herself, to be completed next year. They will have turbine engines.

The Indomitable, of which class Australia and New Zealand will contribute to the navy, was the flagship of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, on his visit to the Quebec Tercentenary last year.

The Indomitable, with her length of 530 feet, is the longest and largest armored cruiser afloat. Her artillery is immensely powerful, she carrying eight huge 12-inch guns each 45 feet long and capable of firing an 850-pound shell twice a minute. The guns are mounted on four turrets, which are so arranged that all the eight big guns can fire on either broadside. At 500 yards, projectiles will penetrate 12 inches of strongest steel armor.

The Indomitable also carries sixteen four-inch guns to deal with torpedo boat attacks. Equipped with turbine engines, she can develop 41,000 horsepower and can exceed 24 knots an hour. Her equipment, including wireless telegraphy outfit and signalling apparatus, is of the newest design.

Two cruisers, which Great Britain will loan Canada for training purposes, will be of the Apollo type, of second-class cruiser, of 3,400 tons, and carrying eight large guns.

These ships will require re-fitting and alterations, which will be done on this side at the expense of the Canadian Government.

The officers of these ships will also be loaned to Canada, and be paid by Canada.

A representative of a leading firm of shipbuilders will shortly proceed to the Dominion to select a site for a shipyard.

Regarding the site of a shipyard on the Pacific a prominent naval expert was asked his opinion by a Canadian official and he replied: "Vancouver is more suitable than Esquimalt, though it might also be necessary to have a dock at the latter."

The Canadian Associated Press understands that the idea of having submarines on the St. Lawrence River and the Pacific Coast has been received with some favor.

The cause of the attack is said to have been an article reflecting on the sister-in-law of Jeffries.

Laurier For South Africa?

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—Mr. T. R. Preston has received a letter from a prominent politician in England to the effect that the British Government is to offer Sir Wilfrid Laurier the position of first Governor-General of South Africa as a tribute to his reconciliation of races in Canada.

Sir Wilfrid, of course, refuses to discuss the rumor, and in official quarters it is reported as most unlikely he would accept, even if the offer were made.

One "Victim" Is Alive.

"Keewatin" Collided with Log Raft.

Owen Sound, Aug. 27.—Fifteen hundred thousand feet of logs, belonging to the John Harrison & Sons Co., were let loose near Cabot's Head by a collision with the steamer Keewatin. It was about 3 a.m. when the crew and passengers of the Keewatin were rudely jarred by a sudden shock. The steamer had run into a big raft in tow of the tug Harrison, bound for Owen Sound. She had struck almost fair in the middle, smashed the booms and generally scattered the raft—on which her officers claim there were no lights.

Big Summer Hotel Burned.

Strathcona at Niagara-on-the-Lake is Destroyed.

Big Resort at Chautauqua Park, Valued at $25,000, is a Mass of Ruins and Guests Have Barely Time to Get out Alive—About Forty Have Lost All Their Valuables—Some Were Bathing at The Time.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Aug. 27.—The well-known summer hotel Strathcona, at Chautauqua Park, was burned to the ground yesterday afternoon shortly after 4 o'clock. Smoke was noticed coming from the basement and shortly after the whole five stories was a roaring furnace.

About forty guests barely had time to make their escape and everything was a total loss, including clothing, etc. A number of guests bathing at the time did not save enough clothing to dress with.

The hotel was owned by C. D. Warren, Ed. Gurney and Brown Bros. of Toronto, who refused $25,000 for it last week. The manager, J. Tasker, had $1,500 insurance on the contents in the Rimouski. This is only about one-half his loss.

A number of the guests who lost their all are: Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe and daughter, Mrs. Dr. Kelly, Louisville, N.Y.; Mrs. Janes and family, Buffalo; Mr. and Mrs. McKiernan, New Orleans, La.; Mr. and Mrs. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. McAdams, H. G. Buckland and family, Mrs. J. McVittie and Mrs. Coombes of Toronto; Mr. Heron, wife and son, Cleveland, Ohio; and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, Cincinnati. The latter was ill, and was with difficulty carried out.

There was no fire protection, the water pipes being too distant to be of use.

The fire is supposed to have started in the servants' quarters in the basement by the explosion of a lamp one of the girls had been using to curl her hair.

The sufferers are being housed by those who occupy the cottages near by.

Killed on Railway Tracks.

North Bay, Aug. 27.—The mangled body of M. Busson, prominent citizen of St. Constan, Que., who was taking advantage of the cheap excursion rate, west, was found on the railway near Ridout, two hundred and sixteen miles west of North Bay.

Busson had a ticket for Brandon, but left the train at Ridout, where he telegraphed his wife to send him $50. She telegraphed the money, but before it arrived Busson started to walk east along the tracks.

Train Backs Into Waiting Room.

Boston, Aug. 27.—Several persons were injured, but none of them seriously, in the South Station yesterday, when a train of cars which was backing in crashed through a bumper and plunged into a waiting crowd, fortunately stopping before going very far into the broad area in front of the gates against which people were jammed.

Danger in Free Hides.

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Dr. James Law, until recently dean of the state college of veterinary medicine at Cornell, said yesterday that the clause in the new tariff bill which removes the duty on hides opened the door by which anthrax and other dangerous cattle diseases, fatal to man, may come into the country.

A Serious Charge.

Cobourg, Aug. 27.—Ferdinand Vonsicklin on Monday appeared before John Thackeray, J.P., at Roseneath, charged with assault on his 18-year-old daughter, and was fined $9.55. Later he was charged with having improper relations with his two daughters, aged 16 and 18. He was committed for trial.

Home For Aged Masons.

John P. Sullivan, of Kingston, was working near Sault Ste. Marie. A twig struck him in the left eye, and he had to have the eye removed.

John A. Hurley, one of the best known and most expert telegraphers in the States, was fatally injured at Hammond, Ind., while in the act of boarding a train.

About midnight Wednesday the store of Will Applegath, of Hamilton, King and MacNab-streets, was discovered on fire. Flames were shooting from the upper storey when the fire department arrived, but only $300 damage was done.

An Imperialist Address.

London, Aug. 27.—(C. A. P.)—Dr. Thompson's address at Winnipeg is discussed editorially by all the papers here. The Standard observes it is couched in Imperial language, his advocacy of the establishment of reciprocity between the universities being a suggestion which should do much to draw the Empire together. The News and Post comment on the renascence of physics, the latter observing that discoveries and advances in that branch of knowledge have been so rapid and dramatic that they exceed, both in importance and interest, those achieved in any other field.

He Did Not Know.

Montreal, Aug. 27.—Ald. Giroux, chairman of the roads committee, yesterday denied before the Royal Commission that he had any idea that Brunet, the middleman, would clear $50,000 on this year's paving contracts. If he had, he would have tried to get the work done cheaper.

Joachim Webster testified that he paid Brunet a rake-off simply to avoid his competition and not for his influence with council.

It was announced that the court would examine the 23 aldermen who have been voting with Ald. Giroux and who gave him his majority.

Friends Will Help Him.

Chatham, Aug. 27.—Fritz Diehn, accused of being Eddie Quinn's accomplice in switching a Sovereign Bank clerk's valise containing several thousand dollars in Tilbury a year ago, arrived in the city last evening. Diehn was extradited from Los Angeles. Quinn was captured some six months ago and implicated Diehn.

It is said that Los Angeles sympathizers are ready to spend a large amount of money in his defence.

Best Wheat in Years.

Montreal, Aug. 27.—F. W. Thompson, vice-president and managing director of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., said yesterday:

"We find as a result of the tests made in our laboratory and baking department of over 100 samples of new wheat, that the quality is the best we have had in years, both as respects strength and color. We believe that the total yield will approximate 115,000,000 bushels."

Suicide in Barroom.

Halifax, N.S., Aug. 27.—Frederick Ward, aged 22, a resident of Dartmouth, committed suicide yesterday afternoon.

He entered a saloon and called for a glass of liquor, which he drank, and turning to the bartender, remarked: "Shake hands, it is not likely that you will ever seen me alive again. Then taking from a pocket a bottle of carbolic acid, he drank about half the contents.

Laurier Won't Go West.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—It is not at all likely that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be able to accept the invitation of the Liberals of the prairie provinces and British Columbia to visit the west this autumn. As Parliament will meet not later than Nov. 18, and perhaps a fortnight earlier, Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues will require all the time at their disposal to make ready the sessional program.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Yes, the Canadian summer would be delightful if July and August could be kept in the refrigerator.

One moment, Mr. Masson: If the city fines a cyclist for riding on the side-walk, should it not give him a bonus for riding over the lower bridge?

A correspondent writes: "It is alike an honor to Mr. Knight, of the Belleville High School, her Instructor ,and to the young lady herself, that Miss Mackintosh, of Madoc, has carried off the Mathematical Scholarship of $120 at Queen's Very true. The Intelligencer heartily congratulates all concerned.

If one of our artistic moving picture shows would exhibit a film showing the bakers selling a three-pound loaf for five cents, it would make a tremendous hit.

In another column we show the wonderful flying machines at Rheims. The aeroplanes, it will be remembered, stayed up a while and then came down, which was where they differed slightly from the price of bread.

The cool weather last night was a blessed relief. Pity we couldn't bottle some of that hot air up for use in a couple of months.

If there is not enough room in the schools when they start, Mr. Flint might take a private class in lower mathematics, with this as a problem: How can a man make $100 in taxes do the work of $150? Solution, ask an alderman.

Hon. S. H. Blake is after the Anglican Hymnal with a big stick. He says "The Book of Common Praise" should be called "The Book of Uncommon Praise." Orthodoxy will never lack a champion while Hon. Mr. Blake is able to wield a pen.

A Toronto paper is sending two members of its staff to places where local option is in force, one man writing of the good effects of local option, and the other of its bad effects. The articles, of course, are meant to be read conjointly. But some esteemed contemporaries, with more zeal than fairness, copy one of the articles—whichever one suits their point of view, and cheerfully ignore the other. The plan is more ingenious than ingenuous.

Guelph water has been pronounced very pure. The Guelph newspaper men can now have no reasonable excuse for side-stepping it any longer.

When the Toronto Fair opens there should be an exhibit of borrowed suit-cases. Some Belleville men would make a strong bid for first prize .

One of the most delightful airs at the band concert last night was that which blew in off the bay.

The Toronto Globe is doing good work in trying to get the price of bread lowered. It is a live question in Toronto, and many other places too.

A Long Island saloon-keeper has this strange sign over his bar: "If your family needs your money I don't want your trade." That saloon-keeper must have a side line or two by which he makes al iving.

Makes Drinking Water Safe

Scientists working in McGill University Laboratories, in Montreal, recently discovered a Typhoid Fever preventative that should be universally used wherever there is danger of infection from drinking water.

It is simply "Sovereign" Fruit Juice, added to the water fifteen minutes before it is to be drunk.

When this is done, the scientists say every Typhoid germ in the infected water is destroyed.

"Sovereign" Lime Fruit Juice with water makes a delicious, cooling drink, as well as a perfectly safe one

Brisk Tourist Trade.

Kingston, Aug. 26.—The tourist trade on the St. Lawrence River continues to flourish. All the hotels, summer cottages, and boarding houses are full, and the steamboat companies say that this season is a record breaker for their carrying trade. Instead of the number of tourists slacking off there are more arriving every day.

Heavily Fined.

The Dominion Mercantile Co., who are holding a twelve days' sale in Bancroft, were convicted on Tuesday on seven charges of violating the transient traders' by-law of the village of Bancroft, and a fine of $5 and costs was imposed on each charge, amounting in all to $65. The money was paid over under protest. Mr. Rendoll Snell, the erstwhile editor of the Marmora Herald, appeared for the company, and expressed his intention of appealing the case.

Back From Cuba,

AND PRINCE EDWARD MAN IS NOT MUCH ENAMORED OF THAT COUNTRY.

A Wellington correspondent writes: Mr. W. H. Titus and family, who went to Cuba a couple of years ago, returned on Saturday, pleased to locate once more in good old Prince Edward. Mr. Titus does not give a very glowing description of that country and would not give a flip of his finger for all the eastern part of Cuba. When it takes five yoke of oxen atached to an ordinary cart six hours to go three miles, one ought to be satisfied to live in old Prince Edward on bread and water. On their arrival at their destination and being shown to their room he had scarcely got into bed when some object hit him in the face and on investigation he discovered it to be a frog and eighty of them were perched along the plate of the house ready to pounce upon him. He says snakes and spiders are very numerous and that it is no place for any human being to live. Mr. and Mrs. Titus' many friends are pleased to shake their hands again and welcome them back.

A Fish Story.

Kingston, August 26.—Yesterday afternoon Chas. Laird of Bath, was fined $25 by Game Warden Hunter at Napanee for selling undersized white fish. A week ago last Saturday, Inspector Taudvin seized some undersized white fish which were being sold on the market by Mr. Barage. Mr. Barage stated that he had purchased the fish from Mr. Laird as fish of lawful size. Mr. Barage was given a warning that if he were again found selling undersized fish he would be prosecuted also.

Some Things Money Could Not Buy.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 26.—There are some things money can not buy. Vanderbilt found it out when he tried to buy a one-acre farm from an old negro at Biltmore. N. C. Rockefeller found it out when he tried to buy the little farm at the entrance to his vast estates at Pocantico Hills, N.Y.

Henry C. Frick, the steel magnate, has found it out even stronger, when his offer of $1,000,000 for the little old Loting form was refused by the two sweet old ladies, who declared they were born and reared there and intend passing their declining days there.

Frick has a $2,000,000 mansion next door to that of President Taft. It is the "show place" of Beverly. In front of it is a $100,000 fence, through which no visitors pass. That fence is fashioned of bars of iron, squared, fifteen feet high, set six inches apart, supported every fifteen feet by magnificent granite columns.

Between the Frick villa and the waters of Salem Bay is the little farm of the Loring sisters. Frick can not strut from his villa to the sea front without trespassing on their land.

Neither the eloquence of his agents nor the eloquence of his money will persuade the sisters to sell. His latest offer of $1,000,000 was refused. "What do we want with a million dollars?" asked the old ladies. "It could not make us any happier."

Frick wanted to lay a pipe through the Loring farm, so he could have sea water for his baths. The old ladies refused him permission. He had to get the city to let him lay the pipe around the Loring farm and then down the streets. In return he built a $3,000 workshop in the city industrial school.

Farmer's Hard Luck.

A streak of bad luck has been following Mr. Thos. Cain, who lives about four miles north-west of Marmora village, during the past couple of weeks. First a splendid mare, one of a matched team worth $300, got cast in a ditch and was found dead by its owner. Then dogs got into his flock of sheep and killed seventeen, and afterwards drove a fine fat steer into the lake, where it was found drowned.

The Band Concert.

A fair crowd enjoyed the band concert last night, and the music was pleasing. Mr. "Bob" Blaind's solo, "Old Kentucky Home," with variations, was played in fine style.

SINCLAIR'S

Daily Intelligencer.

Study the Interests of Eastern Canada.

The idea that Eastern Canada is to become the manufacturing district of Canada as a recompense for its loss in agriculture might as well be given up, candidly says an exchange. At the present time, even as far west as Portage la Prairie, the Americans have captured the industrial market, and that without establishing Canadian branches. When branches are established the struggle will begin in earnest between Americans and Canadians for the western trade, but Eastern Canada will have very little to say in the matter. There are a variety of reasons for it. The west will supply its wants. Flour, bacon, etc., and all forms of manufactured goods can be got there as cheaply as here, without having to add freight. The same is true, as in the American west, of all manufactured articles. Chicago is New York gone west. St. Louis, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Kansas City, etc., are built up by the manufacturing needs of the west. The New England States farms are largely deserted fields, while in manufacturing they supply the south, the north market, and very little of the west.

We have no north, no south. We are west and east. While it is wise to develop the west, it should not be done by us at our own sacrifice. Ontario is the sure place of development for us, and the only certain one for the future. Straining ourselves for the west looks a good deal like unwisdom, and in a few years, when factories spring up there, it will look worse. In the meantime why abandon, as the St. John Telegraph clearly points out, our own half-developed part of Canada. We are impoverishing ourselves—all except the financiers.

Why the Restrictions On Canadian Investors?

Finance Minister Fielding's notions with regard to the Canadian public appear to be so thoroughly tinged with the thought that it is enough for them to pay interest on loans that he cannot see the proper method to enable Canadian money a chance to invest in the borrowing he is doing.

When the Ontario Government decided to give local investors the opportunity it offered its bonds at a reasonable rate—four per cent. practically—and established no annoying restrictions; and the result was that it sold a lot of them. If it had had agencies in every town and city as the Dominion Government has in the post office, it would have sold them all.

When Mr. Fielding decided to follow the Ontario Government's example he took a different method. The Dominion Government has advertised the conditions under which our people can secure the Government bonds which Mr. Fielding vouchsafed mere Canadians a chance to get as the result of much pressure and agitation. To begin with, they must be depositors in the Government savings banks. If they have deposited their savings in the much more convenient banking institutions, they are shut out—unless they forthwith get their money, deposit it with the Government and leave it there three months. Even that will not do unless they give notice, one month before the three months expires, of their intention to convert heir deposit into bonds.

No such restrictions hamper the British investor in the United Kingdom who desires small denomination Canadian bonds, and the fact that the Canadian Government acts in the manner it does show how little the people really enter into its plans—except to pay the piper.

GREAT PROGRAMME THIS

FINEST BILL OF SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS THE CANADIAN NATIONAL EVER PRESENTED.

The programme of special attractions at the Canadian National Exhibition which has just been issued shows that the entertainment part of the big Fair is to be more extensive than ever before.

The programme in front of the Grand Stand is divided into three parts of an hour each. The first hour is given to vaudeville and the bill has to be well squeezed to get it on to the four stages in that space of time.

The second part is given over to the Military Tournament, which includes the musical drive by the Artillery, the musical ride by the Dragoons, and a dozen competitions in many of which, the corps will be matched against corps.

The third hour is filled to overflowing with British Army Quadrilles and Tattoo with ten massed military bands, the march past, the Siege of Kandahar and the Battle of the North Sea.

The whole concludes with a fifteen minute display of everything that is new in fireworks.

Add to this bill, the model military camp, the blowing up of ships by submarine mines on the waterfront, harness horse races, daily displays of Japanese day fireworks, athletic sports, etc., and it will be readily admitted that this is the greatest bill of specials the Canadian National ever presented.

In Memoriam.

MRS. JOHN NIGHTINGALE, AMELIASBURG.

The subject of this sketch was the second daughter of the late Asa E. and Martha Wallbridge, of Massassaga Point, in the Township of Ameliasburg, County of Prince Edward, at which place she first saw the light of day 18th of April, 1844. From early childhood the deceased, by her kindly disposition, jovial and witty manner, made many friends, who entertained towards her during the years of her life more than the usual interest in her sorrows and joys. In 1871 she became united in marriage to her now sorrowing and bereft husband, John Nightingale, ex-Reeve of Ameliasburg. Their marriage was a happy one, and both were never in better spirits than when in each others company. Five children were the result of this marriage, only two of whom survive, Thomas and Ignatius. Wm. Wallbridge, Annie Elizabeth and Florence having predeceased their mother some years ago. The loss of these children was a severe blow to the parents, the effects of which time has not been able to remove. The late Mrs. Nightingale became very much interested in church work some years ago, and took particular comfort and enjoyment in taking part in all the different classes of church work in connection with the Anglican and Methodist churches. For over thirteen years the deceased had been a zealous and faithful worker in the W.M.S., holding continuously during that time the office of Treasurer. About a year ago the late Mrs. Nightingale had a severe sickness, but recovered, and, up to about two weeks previous to her death enjoyed good health for one of her years. Her last illness, which was a complication of several complaints, compelled her to undergo considerable suffering, which she was able to bear with complete resignation to the Divine will. To those nearest and dearest to her from the beginning of her sickness she expressed a firm conviction that it would be her last, and when the end came on the morning of August the 19th, surrounded by members of her family, she was ready and peacefully passed away. During her sickness she expressed a desire to see her son, Ignatius, who was in Vancouver. Unfortunately he did not arrive until Sunday, four days after his mother's death, but in time for the funeral the following day. The service was conducted at the house on Monday, Aug. 23rd, at 1 p.m., by Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, a large number of relatives and friends being present to pay the last tribute of respect to a faithful friend, an affectionate mother, and a devoted wife and sister. In addition to a sorrowing husband and two sons who are left to mourn her loss, an adopted daughter and four sisters keenly feel the loss they have sustained. The sisters are Cynthia, Mrs. Robert Pye; Mary, Mrs. R. P. Jones; Miss Bessie Wallbridge, and Carrie, Mrs. Jas. Howatson. The interment took place in the family plot, Belleville cemetery, the bearers being Jas. R., Geo. W., Alfred W., Wm. G. and W. E. Anderson, cousins, and Jas. Wallbridge, nephew of the deceased.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Elk City, Ont., capitalists are reported to have offered $100,000 for the Jeffries-Johnson fight. Stage money, most likely.

Detroit trounced the Phillies handsomely yesterday, and have a good lead again in the American league.

The proposed battle between Tommy Burns and Sam Langford in London next October, has been called off. Burns demanded a $20,000 guarantee, win, lose, or draw. Promoter McIntosh, who wanted to pull off the mill, turned Burns down hard in spite of the fact that he is Burns' manager.

As Ketchell and his manager, Britt, are still in 'Frisco, the impression prevails here that they will finally back out of the ten-round bout with Langford at the Fairmont A. C.

Where They Bar the Windows and Leave the Doors Open.

The City of Mexico swarms with life, yet it is still life. It is the hour of the siesta when you arrive and the streets are deserted of moving things, though every darkened doorway possesses its own colony of slumberers who have cast themselves down where they stood to sleep away the heat laden hours when no man works. Even the very dogs slink into the shadow of the dazzling walls and loll pitifully. The tinkle of mule bells is hushed. The cry of the muleteer sounds no longer. To walk through these streets with imperious foot, after the British fashion, seems sacrilege. One might be walking through a city of the dead.

But the hot hours pass, the city awakens, the mules strain and plunge at the collar, the dogs prowl about between the legs of those who pass, the shops are opened, the scent of garlic saturated cookery rises strongly, mantilla shrouded faces peep from ancient casemates protected by massive iron bars, and the city of sleep becomes a city of leisurely wakefulness. You notice these barred casemates particularly. They are a feature of Mexico. Householders bar the windows and leave the doors unfastened, and here you have an epitome of Mexican character: Do nothing openly, everything on the sly, even to wooing your ladylove.

You might spend a long lifetime in the City of Mexico and still leave much unseen, there are so many features to note—the actual city life, the life beyond those jealously guarded windows, the life lived in the flower scented patios where cooling fountains play with musical softness. Here comes a vaquero riding nonchalantly up the street, a typical product of Mexico, a cattle hand from one of the outlying ranches, a perfect fury unchained when the liquor of the country is in him, a gentle, dreamy child when the liquor has evaporated, and yet between the two events he might have committed a dozen murders without the slightest compunction. His swarthy face is alight with merry laughter. His earrings sparkle in the declining sun. The gay trappings of his magnificent horse fling back dazzling specks of color. In his chaparajos (those fringed overalls which protect the speckless white riding breeches from the dust of the way), his bell buttoned jacket, his sombrero, with the haft of a machete protruding from his crimson sash, he might be a hero of old legend instead of a commonplace cowboy.—Frank H. Shaw "

A WELSH FESTIVAL.

Eisteddfod is Opened by Musicians In London.

In a pretty glade in Kensington Gardens, in London, near the Serpentine, the Welsh bards celebrated recently the ritual of the Gorsedd, which marks the opening of the national eisteddfod.

According to the ancient tradition, the rites must be performed "in the face of the sun, the eye of light," and though the somber skies made it impossible to carry out the letter of the law, it was fulfilled sufficiently in the spirit by the performance of the rites in a druidical circle erected in the open air.

The circle consists of unhewn stones, outside of which three other stones are placed. In the centre of the circle is the Maen Llog, a large stone supported on three others.

A trumpeter, standing upon this stone, sounded the Corn Gwlad, thus formally opening the Gorsedd, and the prayer of the Gorsedd was recited in Welsh.

The bards, in their blue, green and white robes, presented a striking spectacle, and the insignia of his office rendered Dyfed, the archdruid, a notable figure. With his flowing white robe, oakleaf crown, and golden torque of horseshoe shape, he was impressive indeed as he mounted the Maen Llog and cried aloud thrice in a voice of thunder the formal challenge, "A oes Heddwch?" (Is it Peace?).

"Heddwch!" the assembly shouted, and Dyfed sheathed again the eight-foot sword which, in symbolic rite, he had half drawn from its scabbard.

Speech-making in Welsh followed, and then the bards and onlookers trooped off to the Albert Hall, where the eisteddfod met.

The proceedings at the hall during the morning were disappointing in a great many ways, and there appeared to be a deplorable lack of organization.

The best singing was heard in the chief choral competition, in which the first prize went to the Carnarvon Choral Society, and the second to the Llanelly Choral Society.

At the afternoon meeting Mr. Balfour made a most interesting speech in praise of music.

"Music has ever been one of the great arts in which Welshmen have excelled," he stated. "There cannot be a gift which carries with it higher pleasures—pleasures more easy of attainment, pleasures which leave no after-sting, no after-taste of evil, but which raise and must raise the whole level of civilized pleasures among the people who practice them.

"Music knows no national barrier; music is not subject to the limitations which unhappily beset language. Music speaks to men of all races and of all tongues."

Costly Pennies.

Who was Wiglaf? Numismatists know, and gave £449 for two of his silver pennies at Sotheby's. Wiglaf, or Withlafe, as his name is sometimes spelt in the old chronicles, was that King of Mercia tributary to Egbert, first King of England, and held nominal sway between 825 and 839. His silver penny, without bust, with a cross in centre and a pellet in each angle within a beaded centre on the obverse, and lunettes and pellets on the reserve, caused exciting bidding, which reached £275 (Spink). Only one other of this particular type is known, and it is fortunately in the British Museum. Another Wiglaf penny, with a rude head in a circle and a cross-crosslet in centre of reverse, realized £174 (Lincoln). This was found at Dorking in 1817. The sale was that of the famous Rashleigh collection. A penny of Ecgberht (765-791)—not to be confounded with Ecgberht, son of Offa of Mercia, but the King of Kent mentioned in old charters—without a bust, but with the King's name, made £153 (Lincoln). Only three other coins of this type are known, two being in the Hunter Museum, Glasgow. An East Anglian penny of Eadvald, 819-827, realized £52 (Lincoln), and one of Jaenberht, who was Archbishop of Canterbury between 766 and 190, £93. This was discovered near Netley Abbey, and wears the names of Offa and the Archbishop. In the digging of the foundation for the Martyrs' Memorial at Oxford, another of this prelate's pennies was found, and this fetched £20. A penny with the diademed bust of Cynethryth, who was Offa's Queen, made £30 (Spink).

Lord Balcarres as a Walker.

It was Lord Balcarres, a trustee of the National Portrait Gallery, who announced the saving to England of Holbein's picture, "The Duchess of Milan." His lordship has crowded much good work into his thirty-seven years of life. Not only has he distinguished himself in the cause of art and architecture — he is a trained architect—but he has also served the state in the House of Commons as one of the Unionist Whips. A notable characteristic is his rapid walk. "Burns' gallop is nowhere in it with Balcarres' walk," growled a recalcitrant member on one occasion after being fetched back to the never-ending divisions while trying to escape. "It's no good unless you are streets ahead."

Helping the Enemy.

A coal heaver was getting in a load of coal in the suburbs of London. He was shoveling in the coal at a good rate when he was startled by a terrific yell from the house adjoining.

"Wot the dickens is the matter?" queried the coal man, starting up.

A disheveled looking individual made his appearance at the door.

"Matter, you thickhead!" shouted the man, frantically endeavoring to pull his hair up in clots by the roots. "You are putting the coal down the wrong hole. My wife's people live there!"—London Tit-Bits.

Canadian National Exhibition

TORONTO

HORSES AT THE FAIR.

Everything Points to an Immense Exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Horse entries are coming in so fast at the office of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, that the success of that department promises to be more pronounced than ever before.

The prizes given for speeding in the ring aggregate $4,000, and that in itself is a guarantee that the fastest harness horses in Canada will again be found in the races on the afternoon of August 30th and 31st and Sept. 1st and 2nd.

In Clydesdales everything points to an entry that will exceed last year's show, when they were there in numbers and quality that cannot be equalled anywhere on the continent. Hackneys are growing better year by year and the show of them is excellent, while Toronto is a centre for hunters and jumpers of the very highest class; the competitions in this line excite almost world-wide interest.

In harness horses there is always a great exhibit, while the pony classes have been enlarged and extended in keeping with the growing popularity of the children's pets.

TREASURES IN ART.

Will be a Feature of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

Famous pictures from the leading art galleries of Europe will again be a feature of the Canadian National Exhibition. The permanent agent cables that he has secured many of the leading pictures of the year, and that the list is coming by mail. In addition to this there will be an exhibit of art photography by the leading art photographers of England, Germany, France and Italy, and a graphic art exhibit by the leading illustrators of New York, including such men as Frederick Remington, Maxfield Parish and Charles Dana Gibson.

GOODS WHILE YOU WAIT.

Process of manufacture an Interesting feature of Canadian National Exhibition.

The process of manufacture department is always one of the most interesting features of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and this year it promises to be far more extensive than ever before. In all there will be about forty industries at work showing just how shoes, silk, cotton goods, prints, and many other of the articles you use every day are made. It is impossible here to name more than a few of the exhibitors, but here are some well worth looking up.

The United Shoe Manufacturing Co., Montreal, manufacturing ladies' and gents' boots and shoes, showing the different stages from the cutting out of the leather to the finished shoe.

Merchants Rubber Co., of Berlin, demonstrating the manufacture of rubber shoes, showing every process from the crude rubber to the finished boot.

Davis & Henderson, manufacturing and printing envelopes.

The Canadian Silk Co. weaving silk and badges with photos on them.

Gundy, Clapperton, cutting glass, showing the process in which the fine quality of cut glass is produced.

Shredded Wheat, showing process in which their products are prepared and made portable and palatable.

Dominion Textile Co., Montreal, showing process of manufacture of fine cotton goods, prints, etc.

SHEEP AND SWINE.

Sheep and swine come in for a large share of attention at the Canadian National Exhibition. The best in Yorkshires, Berkshires and Tamworths fill the pig pens at the big Fair, while in the sheep pens are Shropshires, Cotswolds, Leicesters, Oxford Downs of the first quality. All the best that Canada and the United States can produce are found in this department. That the exhibit is a large one is shown by the fact that permanent pens have been built on the grounds for 700 sheep and 600 pigs. Then there is poultry and pet stock enough to fill a building 220 ft. by 60 ft.

The Department of Agriculture is putting on a display of wholesome and diseased meats at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, and will send two lecturers from Ottawa to tell the people how to discern the good from diseased meats. This should be of interest to cattle men, as well as meat producers.

EXPLODING SUBMARINE MINES.

Ships to be blown up on the Waterfront at Exhibition Grounds.

The submarine mine which plays such an important part in naval warfare will be part of the military display at the Canadian National Exhibition. These hidden guardians of every port in war time will be laid in front of the Exhibition grounds and every day at 5 o'clock a ship will be blown up by one of them. There is nothing more spectacular than what happens to a ship when it runs on to one of these hidden dangers of the deep.

EXHIBIT,

of specially selected plants and seed taken from seed plots of members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, Toronto Industrial Exhibition, Aug. 30 to Sept. 13, and Canada Central Exhibition, Ottawa, Sept. 10 to 18 inclusive. With a view to giving greater publicity to the work which is being done in Canada by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association in the improving of cultivated plants, and in order that a medium may be provided through which the officers of the Association may come in touch with a greater number of those who are specially interested in the problem of crop improvement, arrangements have been made to place a special educational exhibit of selected plants and seed in the Agricultural building of each of the above mentioned Fairs. The exhibit will be in charge of the Secretary or some other officer qualified to discuss the general work of the Association. It is to be hoped that a large number will take advantage of this opportunity to learn more of this important movement.—L. H. NEWMAN, Sec. C.S.G.A.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITS.

All the provinces will be in line with exhibits in the Provinces building at Canadian National Exhibition this year. Each Provincial Government is at work on a display that will do justice to its territory, and the gold and fruit of British Columbia, the golden grain of the prairies from Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba, the various products and minerals of Ontario, right down to the best coal and farm products of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, will form one of the many features that makes the Fair truly National in character.

CORPS VS. CORPS.

Real Live Competitions in the Military Competitions at the Canadian National.

The Military Display and Tournament at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, will have more features of real interest this year than anything of the kind previously attempted in Canada. In such competitions as the Victoria Cross and wrestling on horseback, corps will be arrayed against corps, the Royal Canadian Dragoons stationed at Toronto, against the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery stationed at Kingston. The rivalry between these corps is very keen, so much so that the men are also anxious to mix things up a bit with a single stick in the Balaclava Melee, if the permission of the officers can be obtained. However, the officers have not yet decided. Some think a few hard knocks would not hurt the men, while others are inclined to think that the competition would resolve itself into something too much like actual warfare.

COMEDY IN FIREWORKS.

Some Funny Things Pictured in Lines of Fire.

"The Battle of the North Sea" and "The Siege of Kandahar" are the features but by no means the whole of the fireworks display at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. In addition there are 62 distinct numbers on the fireworks programme and they include everything that can be imagined in pyrotechnics. And in these numbers comedy has its place. For instance a Punch and Judy show is one of the numbers. Another number pictures a boy fishing. A big policeman comes along and orders him away. Another boy seeing this brings on a giant firecracker, sets it behind the policeman and fires it off—result a big policeman kicking on the ground and boys disappearing around the corner.

IMMENSE BANKS OF FLOWERS.

The decorative floral display will again be a feature of the Floriculture department of the Canadian National Exhibition. These immense banks of flowers which cover 500 square feet of floor space make one of the beauty spots of the entire Fair. The premiums for this exhibit alone total $1,110.00, a sum that guarantees plenty of competitors.

DAIRY EDUCATION.

Proper Care of Milk to be Demonstrated at the Canadian National.

The educational features in connection with the Dairy department of the Canadian National Exhbition, Toronto, promise, to be of unusual interest this year, not only to farmers, but to consumers of milk in cities and towns as well. The demonstration work and lectures in the Dairy amphitheatre will be under the immediate charge of Mr. Geo. A. Putnam, director of dairy instructions for the Province, and the Dominion Department will also furnish a man to give some definite instruction along the cow-testing line.

The proper care and handling of milk will be one of the subjects dealt with, and it will be accompanied by demonstrations of milk testing as well as charts showing the value of cow-testing associations.

The Model Military Camp at the Canadian National Exhibition will be fitted with hospital tents for men and women and all casualties on the Exhibition grounds will be handled by the Army Medical Corps which will form part of the permanent corps in the Model Militia Camp.

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

back, after all My engagement to Eugene was entered into in a sort of glorified self-seeking only a little better than a direct effort to seize personal happiness. Better? I am not sure that it was better. It was not half honest. I anticipated a sort of exaltation of feeling and sense of success in my own endeavors. I was not thinking all of him, or of what I should be to him. It was what my relation to him should enable me to be to myself, the gratification of my miserable, egotistical desire for self-development. I see it all now. Oh, what shadows, what shadows of sacrifice, what sham devotion, what a farce all the way through! I shall have the substance now. I shall give my life up to him indeed, not as I meant, but as God means, in earnest. It is right. It is just. I wanted the semblance, the beautiful, the romantic, self-flattering semblance. I shall get what I deserve, the hard, painful reality."

"And you think my boy would want you on these terms?" There was an angry sparkle in the clear blue eyes, and a crimson spot on each of the pale cheeks. This was very bitter for Mrs. Winter to hear.

"He will not know,' said Rhoda, sinking back into the spiritless attitude which for the most part she had maintained throughout. "I told you and in your inmost heart you believe me, that Eugene does not want me as I am, as you see me. I represent a group of conditions to him which are most attractive when I keep what you like in me and what I have liked in myself out if sight. I can understand him; this has made me understand everything so much better. I must have annoyed him, bored him, infuriated him, a thousand times. But in spite of it all I count for something in his life, for even a great deal, something he shall not lose. And I care for him enough to be glad with one side of my nature to give it to him. I am fond of him. I—I love him dearly. Oh, I'm not like other women, after all! Do you suppose any one ever felt just like this before?" she cried desperately, wonderingly.

Mrs. Winter could only answer by a mute caress. As Rhoda had said, what was there to say?

CHAPTER XIV.

IN THE PORCELAIN ROOM.

Di Loria wakened one morning and lay looking out through the broad carved arches of his windows to the softly growing dawn. There was something exquisite in the breaking of this day. The sun, yet far below the horizon, announced his coming by no pomp of crimson and gold, and only a tender rose-color spread over the eastern sky dispelling the shadows that rested on the bay, and showing its lightly rippled expanse in a violet hue so deep and dark that the white houses guarding slumber on the shore shone like silver in contrast.

The windows were not open—what Italian window is at night?—and a vine that wreathed the frescoed framing without, blown by the early breeze tapped softly on the pane with all its buds and blossoms, as if in gentle reminder of the white fingers that had caressed its pendant streamers from the neighboring loggia but a few days ago. Di Loria heard the soft salute, looked at the graceful nodding spray and smiled. He remembered, quite well he remembered every slightest action, every movement she had made, every look she had given, every word she had spoken in this his home. He rang for his valet, Michele, who came, after proper delay, with sad reproach shining in his great Calabrian eyes at this untimely summons. But the magic of his master's smile was potent for this fervent servitor as it was for others of a higher degree and less familiarizing intercourse, and he concluded the brief services required of him with an ardent "God guard thee, Signore!" which was so often on the lips of Di Loria's dependants. He asked so little and gave so much that it seemed always necessary to beseech the highest power to care for the beautiful young signore who seemed placed above the need of lower aid.

"Beautiful!" murmured Michele, back as he saw his master seat himself by the little table on which he had placed the cup of black coffee, the little heap of many colored fruits, and the roll of wheaten bread which was to break the night's fast. The coffee was served in Capo di Monte, of which a whole service, delicate as the pearls of a princess at her first communion and rare as gold in the hands of a beggar, was locked away in the great carved chests in the banqueting room. The fruit, purple, rose, and golden, was piled on a plate of Gubbio ware, burnished and lustrous, and the bread lay on a silver trencher wrought into an intricate beauty of leaf and flower and half-hidden bird many centuries ago. But it was not the meal that his faithful hands had prepared that Michele considered in his softly breathed exclamation, but the figure of the young marchese, who plucked a grape now and then, and stirred the coffee with the curious spoon of twisted gold, but who seemed to ponder gravely, looking out to sea the while. He was clad in a morning dress of dark velvet, and Michele had livened its just discernible blue by a scarf of dusky orange which he had tied about his master's throat. The attire, the pose, the delicate, haughty features, the uniform pale olive tint of the skin, and the long, aristocratic hands, the deep darkness of the eyes and hair suggested a portrait by Moroni; indeed there was one hanging in the gallery of the old palace in the city which might have been painted from the present owner of the Di Loria title and estates, as in fact it had from an earlier generation. But the face wore an expression which certainly never illumined the countenance of the doughty warrior who had handed down the ancestral physical type unimpaired to his latest descendant, little recking of the modifications which time and change and the growing moral life of the world were to work in a soul inhabiting a body the counterpart of his own.

Di Loria's personal beauty was less exceptional in his country than it would be elsewhere, but even among the well-favored men of his nation it

REDI'S EXPERIMENT.

Out of It Grew the Great Fabric of the Germ Theory.

It was a fixed belief of the ancients that many living creatures could come into existence in a spontaneous fashion, to which allusion has often been made. The true beginning of the germ theory arose out of a ludicrously simple observation made by Redi, a Florentine physician, about the middle of the seventeenth century. He debated with his confreres in Florence the question of the origin of the maggots appearing in decomposing meat. The old view held, of course, that the maggots were bred within dead and putrefying substances. Redi, taking a piece of meat, covered the mouth of the jar in which it was contained with a piece of fine gauze. He beheld the flesh flies, attracted by the smell of the decaying meat, coming to deposit their eggs, after the manner of their kind, in the decomposing substance. The gauze, however, kept them from effecting this natural object, with the result that the eggs were laid on the surface of the gauze and the maggots there hatched out, while the decay of the meat went on uninterruptedly without a single maggot appearing in its substance.

On this childishly simple experiment the great fabric of the germ theory of today was founded, for if the law of universal parentage applied to the case of maggots and meat it was clear, argued Redi, that it must apply universally. Subsequent experimentation proved the words to be true, and so today, when our attention is focused upon germs or microbes so minute that we might accommodate many hundreds of thousands of them on the surface of a postage stamp, we again come face to face with Redi's first principle that each germ could only have sprung from a preceding and parental organism.—Brooklyn Eagle.

MISTAKES IN TITLES.

"Love's Discourses" Has Nothing to Do With Cupid's Pranks.

It is interesting to collect certain of the instances of mistakes in regard to the titles of books. Thus the old farmer who asked for "Edgworth on Irish Bulls" got no doubt something he did not expect, and the dainty youth who applied for "Love's Discourses" did not really wish a volume of sermons by Christopher Love. If application is made by messenger, mistakes of a different sort may occur. An excitable boy once asked for Bishop Cocks and Hen's "Earnest Communicant;" he meant Bishop Oxenden's. Similarly by Warne's "Moral Cookery" he meant his "Model Cookery." A maid forgot all about the title of the book she had been sent for except that it was "something like tomato soup." She was served with "Red Pottage."

It may have been a fault of pronunciation on the part of the purchaser who asked for "rubber bands" that he received a copy of "Robert Burns," but it was certainly the bookseller who was at sea who referred an applicant for "Vega's Logarithmic Tables" to the "funiture department." In cataloguing booksellers frequently err. Thus Mr. Madan, the Oxford scholar, who wrote a grammar and dictionary of the Swaheli language, had those works catalogued as "Madam Swaheli's Grammar" and in the line beneath, "Do. do Dictionary." Recently, too, a book of Mr. Lucas', "A Swan and Her Friends," giving an account of Miss Seward, "the swan of Lichfield," was classified as "Annie Swan and Her Friends."—Manchester Guardian.

That Settled It.

The commissioners in lunacy were nonplused. The man on whose mental condition the courts had appointed them to pass seemed perfectly sane in spite of all testimony to the contrary. His every action, his every remark, was rational. They were about to give up in despair when matters took an unexpected turn. "Oh, doctor, permit me to return the umbrella I borrowed from you last week," said the patient.

And then, at the thought of earning their fees with no qualms of conscience, the learned men decided that any one who would voluntarily return a borrowed umbrella should be placed under restraint.

This simply proves how trifles will ever mold our destinies.—New York Times.

He Followed Directions.

Red tape leads one to curious lengths. A writer in the Columbus Dispatch tells of a street railway car that picked up a young heifer on its fender and carried it some distance through the street.

In making out the required report to the superintendent the employee wrote in answer to the query on the blank form, "What did the victim say?" "She was carried along on the fender and then rolled off and ran away without saying a word."

The Way Out.

"Think, love!" said Mrs. Gobsa Golde. "I ordered a dinner gown, and that tiresome dressmaker has sent me a traveling suit."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" Gobsa Golde demanded.

"The only thing is for us to go abroad again," she sighed.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Amiable.

"They say Thelma's husband is a very amiable man."

"Amiable! I should say so! I have known that man to laugh at a joke when he was taking down the stovepipe."—Baltimore American.

It is impossible to make your conduct perfect, but it is easy to make it better than it has been.—Atchison Globe

FLYING MACHINES AT RHEIMS.

GREAT MARATHON OF THE AIR.

Map of the Aerial Course at Rheims

The eyes of the world, during the past week, have been on Rheims, where the most ambitious international display of aeroplanes and dirigible balloons in flight yet organized took place. The prizes offered were most substantial ones, amounting in the aggregate to $40,000. This fact, apart from the glory of victory in the aerial flight induced a large number to compete, and among those were Messrs. Bleriot, who successfully crossed the English channel; Latham, his rival; Farman, Simnon, the Count de Lambert, and other noted "flying men."

In one important particular, however, the flying races did not resemble horse races—the aeroplanes were not permitted to start together. The danger of collision in sweeping round the turns would be too great. The aviators started, one after another, being timed by a timekeeper, sitting in a box so arranged that each machine came into his field of vision directly it left the ground.

One thrilling contest never before attempted, was most spectacular. This was the attitude prize.

The several speed races also produced many thrills. In his second cross-channel attempt, when he fell into the sea near Dover Pier, Hubert Latham achieved a speed of sixty miles an hour. This rate of travel was exceeded here, the aeroplane rivalling express trains.

There are three entries for the Coupe Coupe Internationale d'Aviation from the Aero Club of Great Britain, the maximum number permitted on behalf of each contesting nation. The names of the pilots need not be announced till twenty-four hours before the actual struggle, on August 28. France, America, Austria and Italy are the other nations which will be represented.

This is the championship contest of the meeting, and the Aero Club de France has fixed the length of the race at twelve and a half miles, the winner to be the pilot covering the distance in the shortest time.

The race will be flown around a special course, six and a quarter miles in circuit, so the aviators will have to go twice around. Owing to the necessity of making wide sweeps at the bends, each competitor will have to travel more than the twelve and a half miles minimum.

One aviation prize of $20,000 will go to the six pilots who have covered the greatest distance without coming to the ground. Another of $4,000 will be divided among the four pilots who have made the best times over a distance of about nineteen miles.

Another prize of $2,000 will go to the pilot who carries the greatest number of passenger a distance of six miles, the fastest time to determine the winner if the number of passengers is equal. A $2,000 prize will be given to the pilot who ascends highest.

DIRIGIBLE CONTEST.

The fifth of the aviation prizes will go to the pilots who make the round of the six-mile track in the shortest time, on any day of the meeting; the fastest will get $1,400, the second, $600.

President Fallieres will attend many of the races in an unofficial capacity. There is a special saloon for him on the grand stand.

On a lofty signal tower, experts will record the progress of aviators by means of colored discs.

From Journalism to Playwriting.

Quite a number of popular playwrights served their literary apprenticeship as journalists. J. M. Barrie was a reporter on a Nottingham paper before he came to London. Henry Arthur Jones wrote articles and stories from boyhood, and did not enter a theatre until he was eighteen years of age. Hubert Davies was for some years a journalist in America, while Hall Caine, after being trained as an architect, became a journalist and leader-writer on the staff of the Liverpool Mercury, and after coming to London wrote for the Athenaeum, Academy, and other papers.

Cecil Raleigh, the author of so many Drury Lane dramas, wrote for Vanity Fair, and was at one time sub-editor and dramatic critic for the Lady. Cosmo Hamilton has filled the editorial chair of the World. Adrian Ross has done much journalistic work, while it would be impossible to say how many papers and periodicals George R. Sims has written for.

Haydn Manuscript as "Rubbish."

Dr. Cummings, principal of the Guildhall School of Music, in an address on Haydn at the rooms of the Incorporated Society of Musicians, Hanover square, a few days ago, said that some time ago he visited a second-hand music seller's in St. Martin's lane and purchased a Haydn manuscript for two shillings and sixpence. The manuscript was rescued out of a sack of what the music seller described as rubbish.

IRELAND.

George Meredith's plea for home rule is embodied in his last poem, "Ireland," which leads off "Scribner's" for July, accompanied by a hitherto unpublished portrait which was painted in 1897 for J. M. Barrie by Amy Draper Sumner. We quote three of the seven stanzas:

Fire in her ashes Ireland feels
  And in her veins a glow of heat.
To her the lost old time appeals
  For resurrection, good to great;
Not as a shape to spectral eyes,
  But humanly maternal, young
In all that quickens pride, and wise
  To speak the best her bards have sung.

May she not call herself her own?
  That is her cry, and thence her spite
Of fury, thence her graceless tone
  At justice given in bits and bits.
The limbs once raw with gnawing chains
  Will fret at silken when God's beams
Of freedom beckon o'er the plains
  From mounts that show it more than dreams.

A nation she, and formed to charm,
  With heart for heart and hands all round,
No longer England's broken arm,
  Would England know where strength is found,
And strength to-day is England's need;
  To-morrow it may be for both
Salvation: heed the portents, heed
  The warnings, free the mind from sloth.

Had It Lowered.

Sir Augustus Harris once settled the pitch question in his own offhand fashion. A famous prima donna of his opera company came to him complaining that the piano used for vocal rehearsals was too high and asking that it might be lowered.

"Certainly," replied Druriolanus, with a bow. "Here, Forsyth, have a couple of inches sawed off the legs of this piano."

An Awkward Text.

A butcher of a certain village, being a devout Christian, whenever he sent a business note invariably accompanied it with a text.

A certain lady, wishing him to kill some of her pigs, sent him a letter to notify him of the fact, to which he sent the following reply:

"Dear Madam—I will call on Friday to kill your hogs without fail. Yours, Mr. B. N. B.—'Be ye also ready.'"—London Graphic.

He Had Noticed.

Father (who is always trying to teach his son how to act while at the table)—Well, John, you see, when I have finished eating I always leave the table. John—Yes, sir, and that is about all you do leave.—London Mail.

Miss Keegan Will Air Suffrage Views In New York City.

FORMER BELLEVILLIAN SAYS SHE WILL TRY TO GET MRS. PANKHURST TO COME TO CANADA.

Ottawa, August 26.— Miss Keegan, the militant British suffragist, who spoke in Ottawa recently, is in the city again, after having spent a pleasant holiday among the Gatineau hills, and is staying at the residence of Mrs. J. P. Sherwood, 622 Bronson avenue. She will leave at the end of the week for New York, where she intends to do some work in the interests of the suffrage movement.

Miss Keegan has heard from Mrs. Pankhurst in regard to the latter's visit to the continent this fall. It will not be till October, and then, Miss Keegan said, she will have only a few weeks to spend on this side of the ocean. Whether or not she would visit Canada, she was unable to say, but if she did, she would most certainly visit Ottawa.

"I am going to try to persuade her to visit Ottawa," Miss Keegan said, "but I am afraid she will have to hurry back to Great Britain for the trial of the ninety suffragists, who were remanded till the fall sessions of the division court. They tried to go as a deputation to the Prime Minister quite recently, and were arrested, but at the trial we expect that the question of whether the Prime Minister was not at fault in refusing to receive a deputation will be brought to the fore, and with it the question why the women, when they are arrested, are not treated as political prisoners."

Speaking of the way in which the suffragists have refused food in prison, known in newspaperdom as the "Hunger strike," Miss Keegan said: "The papers seem to think that they are fasting in Holloway that they may be released, but this is not the case. That isn't the question. They can all get their release as soon as they will agree to sign a bond, but they are doing it as a protest against the Government for treating them in jail as if they were pickpockets or ordinary criminals. They are really political offenders and should be treated as such. The authorities would, however, hate to have one of them starve and die in prison — something of which they are afraid. The women are displaying splendid courage, and that they are stronger than the law is shown in the fact that they are released before their term is expired through fear on the part of the authorities."

Eight Months in Central For Boat and Pig Stealers.

LAID BLAME ON COMPANION, WHO ESCAPED FROM JAIL—HE SHOT THE PIG, THE PRISONERS SAID.

Wm. Crashley and Wm. Howard Jenkins, who a week ago pleaded guilty to stealing a boat and a pig from a party near Tweed, were this morning brought up before Magistrate Masson for sentence. The parties in question were companions of George Acomb, who on Monday last effected his escape from jail. The trio were arrested about three weeks ago and brought here.

Before pronouncing sentence the Magistrate gave Crashley and Jenkins an opportunity of saying something, if they desired, and both took the opportunity of doing so. They contended that their companion, Acomb, was the party who shot the pig, but they assisted in stealing it. They both asked to be leniently dealt with.

The Magistrate, after giving the prisoners some wholesome advice, sentenced them to eight months in the Central Prison.

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM A. HUFFMAN.

Mr. Wm. A. Huffman, a former well-known citizen of Belleville, died at Picton this morning, after being ill for some months. Deceased, who was about 65 years of age, was for many years a resident of this city, residing on Benjamin street. For some time he conducted a restaurant on Front street, but of late years had lived a retired life. A few weeks ago he removed to Picton, being then in failing health. Mr. Huffman was a member of the A.O.U.W., and had been for years a member of the Methodist church. He was a man respected by all who knew him. A widow, but no family, survives. The remains will be brought here to-morrow for interment in the Belleville cemetery.

MRS. MARIA FRODSHAM.

Mrs. Maria Frodsham died this morning at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Chas. H. Brooke, 86 Victoria avenue. Deceased was born in England about 66 years ago, and came to Canada with her daughter, Mrs. Chas. H. Brooke, about eleven years ago. Her husband predeceased her some years ago. Mrs. Frodsham was a member of the Anglican church, and a lady respected.

No matter how low you might mark it, you couldn't get rid of red tape in the store of general life.

Bogus Cheque Game Worked on Front Street Merchant.

A. BROOKS DONE UP FOR $20 BY MAN NAMED LASHER.

Mr. A. Brooks, who conducts a clothing store on Front street, was on Wednesday evening done out of $20 by a party named Lasher. It appears that Lasher was an employee of Mr. John Consaul and obtained a blank cheque belonging to that gentleman, filling it out for $20 and signing Mr. Consaul's name. He received from Mr. Brooks some clothing and the balance of the $20 in money.

Yesterday, when the cheque was shown to Mr. Consaul, he repudiated the same, as he had not given Lasher a cheque or even signed one for $20. The whereabouts of Lasher are not known, but it is surmised that he has left the city. The affair has been reported to the police, who are endeavoring to locate Lasher.

Union Picnic.

A union picnic composed of members of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Anglican Sunday Schools of Marmora village, was held at Massassaga Park yesterday, and was largely attended. The excursionists were conveyed to Trenton by the Central Ontario Railway, and were then taken to the Point per steamer Brockville. A number spent the day in the city. At the Point, in the afternoon, sports were indulged in. Mr. Geo. A. Simmons, B.A., was in charge of the Anglican children; Messrs. W. A. Hubble and F. S. Pearce the Methodists, and Mr. Geo. McQueen the Presbyterians.

Trenton is Easy.

Trenton Advocate: There should be a town solicitor to handle the town's work. If any one falls off his stoop on to the pavement the town settles as soon as a writ is served. These parties should be fought and whipped a few times, and all this nonsense would stop. In a year a solicitor would save his salary to the town.

Usefulness of the Kindergarten.

There is no doubt in the minds of educationalists to-day as to the value of the kindergarten in our schools. The word educate does not correctly mean to instruct, but to draw out, and this is the main idea of kindergarten work. It does not seek to fill the child's brain with information, but to teach him to use the faculties he possesses. The use of the kindergarten material trains the eye and fingers, and also stimulates the imagination and inventive powers, and the songs develop the musical sense. In everything the child is, almost without his knowledge, taught strict discipline, which is the first hard lesson of school life. Primary teachers say that children from the kindergartens are much easier to teach than others, not so much because of any definite knowledge taught them, as on account of the splendid discipline and training resulting from a well regulated kindergarten and obtainable from no other source.

HE ENJOYS HIS MEALS NOW

For He Keeps a "Little Digester" Handy

Mr. Glassco, of Toronto, wrote us on May 13th last:

THE COLEMAN MEDICINE CO.,
509 Church St., Toronto.

Dear Sirs,—

I wish you would send me another box of your "Little Digesters". All the members of my family have been using them and have obtained the most satisfactory results.

I congratulate you on your success in putting up a tablet for the cure of Indigestion. I suffered for years and tried everything that was recommended to me. Nothing gave me relief, until I was persuaded to try "Little Digesters". Now I never suffer from Indigestion. I enjoy my meals and am not afraid to eat, because I know a "Little Digester" after each meal will digest my food.

I recommend them to all my friends who suffer from Indigestion and would further say that you may publish the above if you wish. I know there are thousands of people suffering from Indigestion who will be glad to know there is a safe and sure cure for them.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) E. S. GLASSCO.

"Little Digesters" cost 25 cents at your druggists, or by mail from Coleman Medicine Co., Toronto. 25

RUSSELL WINS AGGREGATE.

Ottawa Man Carries Off Big Event at D. R. A.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—Sgt. G. W. Russell, of the G.G.F.G., Ottawa, won the Grand Aggregate at the D. R. A. yesterday with the fine score of 334. Pte. Clifford, Grenadiers, Toronto, was six points behind, and a number of Western Ontario men were well up.

The marksmen were bothered yesterday by a very strong and tricky wind, so that the scores were not so high as has been the case hitherto.

A feature of yesterday was the splendid record of the Royal Grenadiers, who won the Lansdowne, Gillespie, Kirkpatrick and Gordon Highlanders' Challenge Cups—a clean sweep.

The first stage of the Governor-General's match was concluded yesterday by firing at the 600-yard range. The 200 and 500 yards were shot early in the week and the final ranges will be shot to-day.

Pte. F. Bibby, of the 77th Regt., stands at the head of the list with 102, out of a possible 105, and wins the D.R.A. silver medal for the event. The Transvaal Cup and medal, open to Canadians who served in the Boer War, and make best score in first stage, was won by Major McCrimmin, 7th Fusilier, 98. Sgt. Russell, Ottawa, was second with 101, and Sgt. D. McInnes of the 19th Alberta Mounted Rifles 3rd with 100. Others who qualified with good scores of 94 and better were: Sgt. Youhill, 6th D.C.O.A.; Capt. Forrest, 6th D.C.O.R.; Lt. Morris, 18th M.R.; Corp. Whitehorn, 10th R.G.; Maj. Elliott, 12th; Sgt. Maj. Huggins, 13th; Pte. Emslie, 48th; Pte. Taylor, 77th; Pte. Latimer, 10th R.G.; Capt. Crowe, 30th; Sgt. Sprinks, 10th R.G.; Pte. Clifford, 10th R.G.; Col. Sgt. Freeborn, 13th; Mr. McHarg, D.C.R.A.; Lt. Sgt. T. Mitchell, 13th; Sgt. Nichol, 13th; Maj. Dillon, 34th; Q.M.S. Davidson, 48th; Col. Sgt. Bowden, 38th; Major Rennie, Q.O.R.; Sgt. Guild, 30th; Captain Olmshield, 48th; Sgt. J. Phillips, 10th R.G.

Moors Lose Heavily.

Lisbon, Aug. 27.—Special despatches from Melilla, Morocco, say the fighting is general on the Moroccan coast.

The new Spanish artillery has wrought terrible havoc among the Moors, who have lost 1,000 men in the last three days. The Spanish casualties amount to 350. The Spanish column has destroyed three villages near Restinge.

A Moorish deserter, who came into the Spanish lines, declares that Spanish prisoners are being tortured and mutilated. They are then decapitated by their captors and their dead bodies flung into a hole on Mount Ouruga. This hole is a mass of decomposed corpses. Estimates place the number of Spanish prisoners at 1,000.

Billed for an Income Tax.

Montreal, Aug. 27.—A prominent firm of Montreal exporters recently perused a demand for an income tax of $40 to be paid to the Government of New Zealand.

The tax, which is duly provided for by a New Zealand statute, is at the rate of five per cent. on the net profit of specific sales effected by the Canadian firm in the sister colony without the intervention of the resident agent there. The same impost has already attracted a good deal of attention in England, where it hits a large number of exporters.

TO STUDY ABORIGINES

Canada May Soon Have an Ethnological Bureau.

Scientists in Session at Winnipeg Say Empire Should Have Institutions For the Study of the Native Races —Caution Is Necessary in the West—Needs No Exaggeration as to Its Future.

Winnipeg, Aug. 27.—Imperial problems loomed large at yesterday's session of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. At three sections, questions of an interest to the Empire as a whole were discussed.

In the engineering section, which was attended by Lord Strathcona, Sir William White, the eminent naval designer, in his presidential address, discussed Imperial defence, and the connection between a powerful fleet and the development of mercantile shipping.

Sir William dealt with the important influence engineering has had upon the foundation and development of the colonies and dominions beyond the seas, with particular reference to Canada. He discussed at some length questions of economy in the cost of overseas transportation and of increase in speed and dimensions of ships. He also illustrated the intimate connection between a powerful fleet and the development of mercantile shipping and commerce.

In the educational section, Dr. Gray, head of Bradfield College, in his presidential address, pointed out the ignorance of many of his countrymen, even the best educated, in regard to Canada, and advocated the teaching of more geography in the English schools, and subjects bearing on the history, economics, etc., of the Empire.

In the anthropology section, Prof. John L. Myers, in his presidential address, advocated the establishment of an Imperial bureau of ethnology to study the races of the Empire. It was a dream he hoped would soon be fulfilled. What was more practical and nearer conception was a Canadian bureau, and he hinted that during the convention plans would be laid for founding one.

What kind of men is Canada making out of the raw material which Europe is feeding into God's mills on this side? This was the question that they should study. They studied grains, cattle, land, etc., but not men.

Other questions of particular interest to Western Canada were also under consideration. At a joint session of the economic and agricultural sections, papers of vital importance to the west were read. One was on "The evolution of wheat culture," by Prof. Albert Perry Brigham, secretary of the Association of American Geographers, and the other "Agricultural Development in the Northwest of Canada," by Prof. James Mavor, of Toronto University.

Prof. Brigham dealt with the migration of the wheat centre from New York westward, and the probable present centre of wheat for North America.

He thought that it would not be many years until the United States home production would be such that it could no longer export to Europe. He predicted that in a few years Canada would be shipping wheat to the Republic.

Prof. Mavor's paper went fully into the agricultural resources and developments of the west. He placed the total area in the west available for wheat culture at 17,250,000 acres, with a total production at 18 bushels per acre of 317,375,000 bushels, leaving about 232,250,000 for export. He refused, however, to assume responsibility for the figures.

He closed with an optimistic statement as to the future, and a plea for caution and care in developing the country.

"The country," he said, "needs no fantastic exaggeration or attention either to its achievements or its possibilities. What it needs at present is a cool estimate of these, and consolidation, rather than excessive expansion."

In the geological and geographical sections, J. B. Tyrrell gave a paper on the geology of Western Canada and Prof. A. B. Coleman read a paper on "The extent of the ice sheets of the great plains."

Somewhat of a sensation was created in the chemical section when the president, Prof. Armstrong, attacked methods of advertising used by some scientists.

"I thought," he said, in conclusion, "the reputation of scientists was liable to be besmirched by the way they were seeking notoriety. I know that not a few who have labored steadfastly and seriously in the old-fashioned, exact and painstaking way, have been deeply hurt by the manner in which their efforts have failed to meet with encouragement, whilst those who have thrown caution to the winds have been favored."

Rifle Club For Kingston.

Kingston, Aug. 27.—A movement is on foot to organize a rifle association for civilians only, and to have weekly shoots. Such an association, if it had the required number of members, should receive support from the Government in the way of rifles and ammunition. The rifle association had a flourishing club here until eight years ago, when condemnation of the Barriefield butts deprived the club of a range, but there is a new range now.

TERRORS OF THE JUNGLE.

The Mosquitoes of Africa Are Worse Than the Lions.

"The African mosquitoes intoxicate you. They inject so much poison into you that you are dazed, your eyes roll and you stagger and speak thickly. In a word, you're drunk," said a missionary.

"In the Nyassa country I'd always start getting ready for bed and the mosquitoes an hour before sunset. I'd set up my mosquito net with the utmost care. I'd clamp down its edges with valises and boxes. I'd light inside it three green wood fires, filling it with a bitter smoke that all insects are supposed to loathe.

"Finally I'd get in myself. I'd smoke big pipes of the black native tobacco, and I'd long miserably in that hot, smoky atmosphere for the dawn.

"Despite all my precautions quite 200 or 300 mosquitoes would get inside my net as soon as darkness fell. They were like a whirlwind in there. It couldn't have been worse. Their noise and their nipping made me feverish—made me really delirious at times.

"At last, in exhaustion, I'd get a few hours of troubled sleep, awakening for breakfast drunk from the poison injected by hundreds of tiny needles into my veins.

"No; it isn't the elephants or the giraffes that trouble the African hunter, but the skeeters."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

MISSED ONE POINT.

The Lady Told Him What More He Could Have Said.

"I am going to tell you the truth about yourself," he said.

"Go on," said the young and ambitious actress.

"I have in my time had rare opportunities to observe beautiful, graceful and talented women, and I violate no confidence in saying that you are the queen of them all. You unite in your lovely person that peculiar magnetism which lays audiences at your feet. Your genius, shining through all the deficiencies of stagecraft, enables you to triumph over every obstacle. So supreme are you that you have the right to rise above all conventionalities, to marry, to love, to discard whom you please, and no one will dare to criticise. Your work will live. You are the very personification of the highest art. United with this your perfection of beauty gives you the just title to a lasting fame."

"Is all that true?" she asked softly.

"Absolutely. Would you have me say more? What more could I say?"

She sighed.

"You might," she answered, "have mentioned my clothes and my figure." —Puck.

Disinterested.

Lord Monboddo, an eminent member of the Scotch judiciary and one of the clear cut figures in Boswell's immortal "Life of Johnson," was a great beau in his youth and in his later years a brilliant and learned if whimsical man.

He was a friend of the Garricks and one day was their guest at their villa at Hampton Court when Hannah More was also visiting there. They were walking together in the garden when his lordship astonished the fair and sprightly Hannah by a declaration of love and an offer of his heart and hand. Meeting with a positive refusal, he soon returned to the house and made a clean breast of it to Mrs. Garrick.

"I am very sorry for this refusal," he said in conclusion. "I should have liked so much to teach that nice girl Greek."

Our Languages.

What a lot of languages we talk, even if we talk only English! I was assailed by a man across the luncheon table with a language about a cup tie final and confessed that it was quite unintelligible. Then another man talked about golf, which is another language. And then the woman's language elbows these columns. "The Countess —— wore a sea green cloth skirt with a bolero of the same color and a white marabou stole, and a black taffeta bow garnished her huge hat of burnt tagel straw." It is a fine example of women's slang. But to the man it means nothing—but expense.—London Outlook.

BERESFORD TAKES REST

Will Not Give Out Interviews or Attend Receptions.

Toronto's Illustrious Visitor Will Go to Niagara Falls Over Sunday and Will Open Exhibition on Tuesday —Says He Will Save His Views for His Speech at Fair—Ex-Governor-General's Son With Him.

Toronto, Aug. 28.—Lord Charles Beresford will spend Sunday quietly at Niagara Falls, accompanied by several prominent men and his private secretary, Hon. W. Carlton.

Immediately after his arrival in Toronto by special train from Montreal this afternoon, the ex-commander of the Channel fleet will board George H. Gooderham's yacht, Oriole II., and will be the guest of Mr. Gooderham until they return to the city on Monday morning. Others of the party will be W. K. George and M. H. Irish. The yacht will head for Niagara and will anchor there until Monday morning, when she will return to Toronto.

On Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock, Mayor Oliver will pay Lord Beresford a call in his official capacity, and later the city council will tender the admiral an address. On Monday evening he will be entertained privately by Toronto friends.

Charles Beresford

Toronto's National Exhibition will be ceremoniously opened at 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon.

Lord Charles will go out to the Exhibition grounds at 12.30, and take a jaunt around on a brief inspection of the various attractions at the grounds prior to touching the button at 3 o'clock, which will set the great fair humming for two weeks.

Although the admiral was greeted by a number of reporters as soon as he reached Quebec yesterday, he displayed devotion to naval ethics.

Having came to Canada especially in acceptance of an invitation to open the Toronto Exhibition, he gently but firmly, declined to be interviewed.

"The pith of my views which I came to Canada to circulate will be given in my reply to the president's address at the Exhibition," said Admiral Beresford, explaining that to do otherwise would be discourteous to the Exhibition management.

His Lordship is accompanied by Earl Dudley Carlton, a great grandson of Lord Dorchester, Ex-Governor-General of Canada, and valets. His program for his Canadian visit is by no means decided.

"I had a little time to spare and this invitation came most opportunely," he said. "I also wished to know something more of Canada and the Canadians, whom I like for their wide-awake energy."

He has not yet decided to visit the far west, but he will spend a day at least in the Cobalt country. He will also speak in Montreal on his way home. His intention is to be back in England early in October, for the great banquet that will be held in commemoration of the Battle of Trafalgar.

Mayor Hopewell, of Ottawa, will be in Toronto to-day, to personally tender an invitation to Sir Charles to visit the capital during fair week.

Safe-Breaker Arrested.

Toronto, Aug. 28.—Albert Walmsley, a noted crook, was arrested by Detectives Mackie and McKinney on Yonge street in front of Scholes' Hotel, about 9 o'clock last night. The warrant was issued over a year ago, and was sent from Blythe. It charges Walmsley with breaking open the safe of a bank and helping himself to $1,000.

Accused is a smooth-looking young man and has been arrested in Canada and the United States several times for picking pockets.

The New Commandant.

Kingston, Aug. 28.—On Oct. 12 the term of Col. E. T. Taylor as commandant of the Royal Military College will expire. It is his intention to obtain leave before that date in order that he may visit friends before sailing for England.

His place at the college will be taken by Lieut.-Col. Crowe, of the Royal Field Artillery, who is a graduate of the staff college, and who entered the artillery in 1882.

Boy Dies of Heart Failure.

Keene, Aug. 28.—Tom Campbell, the 15-year-old son of William Campbell, died of heart failure while swimming at the wharf here yesterday. He was climbing out onto the wharf and fell backwards into the water and sank. His companions pulled him out at once, but he was dead. His parents are visiting their daughter in Saskatchewan.

Carpenter's Bad Fall.

Galt, Aug. 28.—While at work at his trade on a bungalow, Alex. Broomfield, a carpenter, fell 25 feet and sustained injuries that may prove fatal. Broomfield plunged through an opening in the floor to the cellar, tearing the scalp off his head and receiving internal injuries.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Catherine Griffith, an English writer, has been arrested as a shoplifter in New York.

Albert McKinn of Tamworth, jumped off a load of hay and had his leg at the ankle broken in two places.

For the murder of Mitra Hewka at Sandilands on the night of March 3, Mike Pidhoney, a foreigner, was hanged at Winnipeg yesterday.

The loss by the destruction by fire of the Strathcona Hotel at Niagara-on-the-Lake is placed at $53,000, including $15,000 on guests' property.

The royal palace at Peterhof, Russia, has been thoroughly disinfected as a result of an army officer coming down with the Asiatic cholera while on duty there.

Five coal miners were killed and twelve others seriously injured in the naval colliery at Rhondda, Wales, through the falling of an elevator cage. The connecting rod broke.

The accidental discharge of a rifle in the hands of Orval, the young son of Albert James, a Woodville blacksmith, inflicted on him a severe wound. The bullet penetrated the groin.

Joseph Miron of Hull, was whirled round in a shaft in the paper mill of the E. B. Eddy Co., Hull, until his clothes were all torn from his back. The shaft then threw him headlong onto a cement floor. No bones were broken.

Suddenly bolting away from a trained nurse in whose care she had been placed, Miss Edna Schaeffer, aged 25, a Philadelphia school teacher, ran to the bridge which spans Rancocas, N.S., Creek, and jumped to death.

Aldermen Innocent.

Montreal, Aug. 28.—None of the seven aldermen examined yesterday before the Royal Commissioners, being part of the majority who have supported Ald. Giroux in the city council, would admit that they had received any advantage for their support.

Ald. Guay, Labresque, Major, Messier, Turner, Nault and Gadbois all denied they had known that the middlemen were making large profits in the city's paving contracts or that their votes had been influenced in any way.

For his trouble, expense, loss of time, etc., entailed in going from the city to St. Helen's Island via the ferry, Ald. Couture charged and received $100 in cash, and wanted $200 at first, according to his own testimony before the commission yesterday afternoon. It was paid by one Dubois, who was building a miniature railway.

Dynamite Kills Two.

Daily Train Service.

Port Arthur, Aug. 28.—Gen. Manager McLeod, of the Canadian Northern, states that the daily passenger train will be kept in service on the line between here and Winnipeg all winter, six days a week, at any rate.

Fight That Proved Fatal.

Arthur Bollard Dies Suddenly at Chemong Park

Son of Toronto Tobacconist Succumbs to Injuries Said to have Been Received in a Quarrel Following a Dance at Summer Resort—Two Versions Are Given of Fight Which is Blamed For Fatality.

Peterboro, Aug. 28.—Arthur Bollard, aged 19, son of Arthur E. ("Alive") Bollard, tobacconist of Toronto, died at Chemong Park yesterday afternoon as a result of an alleged assault on Monday night of this week.

There are conflicting stories about the tragedy. One is that Bollard was set upon while returning through the thickly-wooded park to his home after attending a dance in the pavilion. Another is that death is the result of injuries received in a fist fight.

Chemong Park is located six miles north of Peterboro on the shore of Chemong Lake, and is a popular summering place for Peterboro and Toronto people, and also many Americans. The Bollard family has been staying at the park for the past month, having rented a cottage there. Arthur came from Toronto nearly two weeks ago.

From the stories told by people at the park, it would seem that there was bad blood between Arthur Bollard and Harry Joppling, a youth whose home is in the Village of Bridgenorth, about half a mile from Chemong Park.

They got in to a fight, so it is related, after a dance at the pavilion on Monday night about 10 o'clock, and Joppling was worsted. His older brother, Fred Joppling, came to his assistance, it is said, and a fight took place between him and Bollard.

Another version is that Bollard was waylaid in the park by a number of young men and was roughly handled; that a friend of his, Harry Marks, of Toronto, was walking ahead of Bollard with a young lady, and that he was held and prevented from giving assistance to his friend. Marks has returned to Toronto.

Says She's Orville Wright Wife.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 27.—A woman here asserts that she is the wife of Orville Wright, the famous aeroplanist. She is supporting her son, Lester, by doing day work and nursing and says she has heard from Wright, and has his promise to arrange for the education of the boy, who is 11 years old. The girl, who says Orville Wright married her in October, 1897, was Ada Miller, of Central City, Neb. To-day she is Mrs. J. R. Carson.

"I was only 15 when Orville married me," said Mrs. Carson. Both our parents opposed the marriage. A year later Lester was born. Then Orville left me, and his uncle told me he was dead. When I came west nine years ago I met J. R. Carson, a boyhood friend, and we were married in Vancouver. Carson and I separated, and he is now in Wyoming."

Will Operate on Harriman.

New York, Aug. 28.—Conflicting stories continue to circulate as to the ailment from which E. H. Harriman is suffering.

The arrival at Arden to-day of two tanks of oxygen and a small collapsible hospital cot was responsible for serious conjectures, but all that could be learned from the residence was that Mr. Harriman was sitting on the porch conversing with workmen. Later, an auto with three strangers arrived and rushed past the guard of newspapermen at the gate. The pressmen are on the watch day and night, intercepting everybody they can.

$25,000 Stolen From Strong Box.

Prince Rupert, Aug. 28.—With her strong-box broken into and a package containing $25,000 missing, being the pay roll designed for the canneries on the Baas River, the Boscowitz steamship Deniz arrived early yesterday morning from Port Essington. She anchored in the harbor to prevent anyone leaving the ship.

Search seemed to implicate several of the crew, including the steward, fireman, and Chinese cooks, money being hidden in mattresses, loaves of bread, and various places. All but $2,500 were recovered, and the suspects are in jail.

Big Coal Docks Planned.

Port Arthur, Aug. 28.—T. W. McDermot, of Ottawa, representing Ottawa and American capitalists, is asking the city for assistance in locating a big coal dock plant to cater to the western trade. He states $50,000 would be expended in construction.

Ruttan and Tates announce plans to erect two new modern fireproof business blocks on Arthur street, frontage 66 feet, depth 110 feet, and three storeys high.

C. N. R. Loses Case.

Bracebridge, Aug. 28.—After fighting in the courts against the Canadian Northern Railway for four years, J. Beaumont, who owns a 1,000-acre farm on the Muskoka River, four miles from here, has secured an order from the Railway Commission that the material used by the railway for filling in Coulter's Narrows was to be removed by April next.

Boy Drowns.

Cayuga, Ont., Aug. 28.—Yesterday afternoon Norman, the five-year-old son of Mrs. Thomas McDonald, while playing on a dock used by the Imperial Plaster Co., slipped into water about five feet deep and was drowned. His hat was noticed floating on the water.

Mr. Wells was Commissioner of Lands and Works in the Dunsmuir and Prior Governments from 1901 to 1906.

English Aviator Wins.

Bethany Aviation Field, Rheims, Aug. 28.—Henry Farman, the English aviator, a dark horse in the aviation contests, in a bi-plane of his own design, yesterday broke the world's record for duration of flight and distance in a heavier than air machine and won the Grand Prix De La Champagn—the endurance test—by a remarkable flight officially recorded as 180 kilometres (111.78 miles) in three hours 4 minutes 56 2-5 seconds, although he actually covered an extra ten kilometres and remained in the air ten minutes after 7.30 o'clock this evening, the hour that the timekeepers under the rules ceased to keep a record of the flight.

A. O. F. Officers.

Sarnia, Aug. 28.—The following officers were elected at the High Court meeting of the A. O. F.:

H. C. R., John Young, Hamilton; H. S. C. R., E. Ramsey, Montreal; H. C. Treasurer, H. C. Wilson, Toronto; C. M. E., L. Secord, Brantford; Permanent Secretary, W. Williams, Toronto; H. C. S., W. R. Woodstock, Toronto; H. C. J. W., A. Webber, Winnipeg; H. C. S. B., C. C. Wightman, Toronto; H. C. J. B., M. A. Saunders, Sarnia; H. C. Auditor, F. Abbott, Meaford; Laws and Relief Committee, W. J. Vale, Toronto; H. S. Chick, Toronto; J. J. Haygarth, Hamilton; W. Mills, Ingersoll; W. Richards, London.

Tragedy of Child-Lovers.

New York, Aug. 28.—The quarrel of two youthful Brooklyn lovers, Frank Williamson and Florence Wood, each 17 years of age, ended suddenly last night, when Williamson, sitting at the girl's feet on the verandah of her home on Decatur street, pulled a revolver from his hip pocket and fired, first at her, and then at himself. The first shot went into the girl's head, near the ear, and the second bullet penetrated his own temple. The two were taken unconscious to an hospital.

Steamer Adrift in Current.

Brockville, Aug. 28.—Shortly after entering the Narrows yesterday afternoon an eccentric strap in the engine-room of the steamer America snapped. She floated to a point near Fernbank, but no excitement prevailed, although she was crowded with nearly 500 passengers.

The mishap occurred in one of the most dangerous spots on the river, but there was no wind blowing and the boat managed to keep clear of the shoals.

Asquith Rents a Castle.

London, Aug. 28.—Premier Asquith has rented Lympne Castle, near Hythe, in Kent, for the remainder of the summer and the autumn, and it is there that he, with Mrs. Asquith and their children, will make his home for a number of weeks to come. Lympne Castle stands on a lofty cliff, with an outlook over the English Channel.

Still Want Canadian Shingles.

Vancouver, Aug. 28.—An advance of 20 cents per thousand in the duty on shingles entering the United States, making the tariff now 50 cents, has not by any means shut out of the States the product. The British Columbia Shingle Mills business shows no dropping.

Big Trees in Danger.

Yosemite, Calif., Aug. 28.—A forest fire at the entrance to the Yosemite Valley threatens destruction of the Big Tree Grove, known as the Merced group, one of the world's famous collections of sequoias.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Speak well of the bridge that carries you over, even if it gives you as many bumps as the lower bridge.

By the way, it is said that, some time ago, the Council gave orders that both the upper and lower bridges should be replanked. If that be so, why was the order not obeyed, and why does the driveway on the lower bridge continue to be a menace to public safety and a laughing stock to strangers who drive over it?

* * *

Go to church to-morrow, even if it is hot. You'll be hotter than ever some day if you don't go to church like a decent Christian.

* * *

Still; to help along the fitness of things a bit, they might start off the morning service with "Greenland's Icy Mountains," or something like that.

* * *

Toronto's big fair is the next attraction, and it saddens us to think of all the Belleville men who will go up there and blow in their hard-earned money at the King Edward. They might much better stay at home and chip in their change towards the sewerage system.

"One flag, one fleet, one throne." This motto, with a Union Jack in colors, is printed on the new readers which are being issued for use in the public schools of Ontario. And Canada contributes less toward the fleet than one of the new readers costs, and that's only about 13 cents.

Mr. Donald Sutherland, director of Ontario colonization, deplores the draining of this province by so many young men going on harvester excursions to the West. He is largely correct, but the prevention does not seem to be so easy, of solution. Railways will quote low fares as long as they can get the crowds, and the Western lure is going to exist for a great many years yet.

Christmas is less than four months off now. Don't spend all your money at the fall fairs.

* * *

The shortest days in the year will be from now till next Wednesday, when the schools open.

* * *

The summer's drowning accidents continue. The number due to carelessness suggests how lightly life is held in Canada.

* * *

It is reassuring to hear a scientist of the standing of Sir Joseph J. Thomson, president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, assure us that some day the sun will furnish the power for the world's work. We're getting the heat now, all right.

* * *

The Brockville Times opines that cheap power is the lodestone that draws progress. That's very true. When are Bellevillians going to drop unimportant issues and all pull together for cheap power?

* * *

All the big cities want to see Lord Charles Beresford, who is to open the Toronto Exhibition. Of course they do, and we'd like to see "Condor Charlie" ourselves. Why not invite him to Belleville? He won't find a prettier place or more hospitable people anywhere.

* * *

The difficulty in securing qualified teachers for rural schools may be gathered from the fact that in Lanark County at least one school is in charge of a teacher who never attended a high school. And the three R's are probably just as well taught.

* * *

A coffin combine is the latest. Canadians who have paid the debt of nature, so says a despatch from Montreal, must be buried in union coffins or be cremated. Hard as it is to live now, they are making it harder to die.

* * *

A Massachusetts man became intoxicated in a balloon and, falling out, landed in front of a saloon. Lucky for him he didn't fall in prohibition state.

* * *

A Boston man has been given a new face by means of a surgical operation. This should cause hope to spring up in the breasts of some people.

* * *

A man in New England, upon being told that he could not recover from an illness married. Then he recovered. It was a desperate remedy.

* * *

Judging by the following, from the Hamilton Times, some wicked urchin must have been looting the editor's fruit trees: "If the parents of the children who are training for penitentiary by raiding every lot where there happens to be fruit trees or vines do not wish them to be cut off early in their careers, they should caution them against stealing and eating unripe fruit, which they knock down and carry away. In some uptown instances girls accompany the boys, carrying baskets. Of course those whose gardens are pillaged and destroyed can hardly be expected to hope the young thieves will not have the stomach ache."

* * *

There was a week some years ago when Rudyard Kipling lay at the point of death, and thousands who had never seen him were holding their breath for the crisis. To an English writer the memory recurs of snatching an evening paper as he drove in a hansom, tearing at the latest bulletin and, as he got out of the cab, handing the paper joyfully to the driver with the cry, "Kipling's all right!" The driver took the paper, and wrinkled his brow. "I don't seem to remember the name of the 'orse," he said.

No Settlement Says James Ross.

HE SAYS THAT PEACE CAN COME ONLY THROUGH THE MEN RETURNING TO WORK.

Sydney, N. S., Aug. 27—Mr. James Ross, president of the Dominion Coal Company, has handed out the following statement:

"With regard to the rumors that negotiations were in progress for a settlement of the strike, I can assure everyone that there is not one word of truth in rumors. No one has been authorized by the Dominion Coal Company to discuss a settlement.

"The strike was called by the representatives of the U. M. W. of America because the Dominion Coal Company refused to recognize them, and this refusal will stand for all time, so there is nothing to discuss.

"The strike has been in operation for more than six weeks, but the Coal Company's output is steadily increasing.

"The only settlement is for the men that remain in the district to come back to work, and every person who has their interest at heart should advise them that this is their only course. The Dominion Coal Company will never recognize the U. M. W. of America."

Makes Drinking Water Safe

Scientists working in McGill University Laboratories, in Montreal, recently discovered a Typhoid Fever preventative that should be universally used wherever there is danger of infection from drinking water.

It is simply "Sovereign" Fruit Juice, added to the water fifteen minutes before it is to be drunk.

When this is done, the scientists say every Typhoid germ in the infected water is destroyed.

"Sovereign" Lime Fruit Juice with water makes a delicious, cooling drink, as well as a perfectly safe one

Canada's Attitude on Empire Defence.

The German peril, which is as much industrial as military, was the immediate cause of the calling together of the late Imperial Defence Conference at London. As La Patrie says, things happened there that Great Britain never dreamed of. That conference was a great disappointment to the people of the "old land" for the reason that the keynote of Canada's message was "Our fleet and our army must be our own." There is, as an exchange pertinently points out, no desire for the unification of the Empire in such bluster as that and none knows more thoroughly how to appreciate it at its true value than the home land. The French-Canadian press are jubilant and derisive. The Globe has fallen also into the backwash of Canadian independence. To insist that we must preserve our autonomy is senseless. Our autonomy is civil, not military or naval, and what is threatening it? The whole objection depends plainly on a different matter. There is a section of our people who fear extinction in the unity of empire and their end and aim is to prevent it. It is a great pity, but it is the simple truth. The good the late conference has done is, however, more real than apparent. It has brought this question of empire to a head. It is now the great issue before the Canadian people. Are we part and parcel of the ancient British empire, or are we merely an "ally?" An ally!

We may well ask what need Great Britain has of us as an "ally?" The thing is ridiculous and it is more. It is offensive. It is offensive to the Mother Country, who will elevate her eyebrows and say, probably, "Oh! well if you want it that way I can't object," and it is offensive to Canadians who cherish their allegiance to that empire which their fathers loved to dream of and their children have been taught to cherish.

A BLAZE OF LIGHT

NIGHT SCENE AT CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION ONE TO LIVE IN MEMORY.

The "Electric City" will be a fitting name for the Canadian National Exhibition grounds at Toronto this year. All the big buildings are being fitted with exterior decorations of electric light and they will turn the Exhibition nights into the whitest kind of days. This brilliancy added to the martial music, the movements of troops and all the panoply of display should make the night scene at the Canadian National one never to be forgotten.

ENOUGH RADIUM FOUND IN CALIFORNIA TO SUPPLY WORLD FOR ALL TIME.

Kennett, Cal.—According to a story told by Dr. S. Wilkins, who arrived here to-day, enough pitch blende has been discovered on the McCloud River north of here, to supply the world with radium for all time.

Dr. Wilkins had in his possession fine specimens of the precious stuff and so impressed some business men with his story that they sent an expert to visit the newly discovered ledge.

The ledge is twenty miles up the McCloud River, from the confluence of that stream with the Pitt River.

Did He "Work" Here?

The police of Toronto have under arrest a man named Albert Walmsley, who is charged with robbing a private bank at Blythe, Ont., of over $1000. It is said he is one of a gang which once operated in this city, when the John Sloan warehouse, then facing the Canifton road, was burglarized.

IMPORTANT FACTS.

"The composition of wheat is higher in protein and heat of combustion than any other cereal prepared for human food"

Results of analysis by Bureau of Chemistry, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

ORANGE MEAT is simply the whole wheat berry, steam cooked, mixed with malt, flaked and toasted. This process develops in each wheat berry the highest percentage of grape sugars. It converts the starches into a form most easily digested and assimilated.

MILL STREET BELLEVILLE

HIS OTHER WAISTCOAT.

It Cost Its Unlucky Owner Half a Million Dollars.

"I was so prosperous in 1862 as to be able to have two vests," said a veteran newspaper man, "and one of those vests cost me $500,000. Solomon in all his glory never put up as much as that, I believe, for his whole wardrobe. I could get a vest every bit as good as that now for $1.50.

"This happened on Oil creek in the early days of petroleum. I had wandered over there in 1862. I was only a kid, but I had saved $50. About that time the flowing oil wells were being struck. Men who were poor one day were finding themselves millionaires the next. I suppose there are a good many people out there yet who remember Jim Sherman. When I first met Jim he hadn't as much money as I had, but he had a lease on one corner of what was known as the Foster farm and was trying to find oil on it.

"For some reason or other speculation hadn't cast the eye of favor on the Foster farm as yet, but Jim Sherman believed it had the oil sand under it, and on the strength of Jim's faith his wife had put in every cent she had received as a legacy from her father, $500, to help Jim out in his venture. When I ran up against Jim I had been in the region only a couple of days, and my $50 was still intact. I had a boarding place about half a mile from where Jim was struggling to get his well into the sand he believed in. He had exchanged an eighth interest in his well for a drilling engine, and he had disposed of a sixteenth interest for $60 in cash and a shotgun, and that $60 and the $15 he sold the shotgun for, together with $100 he had received for a horse which he had traded another sixteenth interest in his well for, had all been absorbed and the drill had not yet struck oil.

"It was at this interesting condition of the Sherman well that I ran up against Jim. He was in despair. He had no hope of being able to obtain another dollar. He had been offering another sixteenth interest in his lease for $50, with no takers. I thought the matter over awhile and then said to Jim that I would take the one-sixteenth.

"'Produce the fifty!' said he.

"I felt for my fifty. It wasn't there, and I at once remembered that I had put on my other vest when I came out and had forgotten to change my little wad of wealth to it from the pocket of the vest I had taken off. I explained matters to Jim Sherman and started at once for my boarding house to get the money. I got it all right and was on my way back to invest it in the Sherman oil well when I saw people running wildly from every direction toward the Sherman lease and heard them yelling:

"'Jim's struck it, by ——, and struck it big!'

"So he had. While I was away to get the $50 I had left in my other vest the drill in the Sherman well had dropped into the sand, and she was spouting at a two thousand barrel rate, and she kept on spouting for two years. Before she quit she had spouted more than 2,000,000 barrels of oil, and the average price of oil during that time was $4 a barrel. Jim Sherman cleared up something like $6,000,000 out of it, and if I hadn't been so prosperous that I was able to have two vests 125,000 barrels of that oil would have been mine. That's how one of those vests cost me $500,000."—New York Sun.

Turkey's Star and Crescent.

No matter what happens in Constantinople, the star and crescent is likely to remain the emblem of the metropolis on the Bosporus to a remote futurity. It is not a Turkish emblem. Constantine antedated the Turk at that spot by more than eleven centuries. The emblem is older than Constantine. Long before the Roman emperor set up his eastern capital there and renamed the town for himself the Byzantians were besieged by a neighboring enemy, who one night tried to storm the place under cover of darkness. As they advanced a cloud rolled away, revealing the conjunction of the planet Venus with the new moon, which is one of the most beautiful phenomena of the nocturnal sky. The light exposed the skulking invaders, the walls were manned and the enemy driven back. From that moment the star and crescent became the emblem of Byzantium.—St. Louis Republic.

Wood Used For Putty.

A refinement in yacht construction, introduced last year by Fife in the construction of the Shamrock, consists in the substitution of a thin slip of wood, known as a "slip feather," for putty, in stopping the seams after they have been calked. The "feather" is covered with a very tenacious glue, driven hard home into the seams and left to dry. After the sides are planed off a remarkably smooth surface is obtained, the skin of the vessel being to all intents and purposes in one piece. This method has the further advantage that there is no calking to work out when the vessel is being heavily strained.—Scientific American.

Licenses to Fly.

Already the proposition is made to require persons who desire to fly to obtain a license. The instructor of the United States army balloon corps urges it and maintains that all such licenses be issued by authority of the national government. The purpose is primarily to safeguard the lives of aviators, but it is certain that the new method of transit will present problems that cannot now be foreseen that will be beyond the power of the states to solve. France has been considering the matter with a view to keeping out unwelcome aerial visitors from over the border.—Youth's Companion.

HIS HOLLOW KEY.

He Lent It, but Had Occasion to Crave Its Return.

"They hiss in the French theaters with the help of a hollow key," related Richard Harding Davis. "Paul Bourget once told me an odd incident upon this custom.

"A playwright—call him Duval—had the unhappiness one fine night to sit through a most successful production of his latest play. The house responded with jeers and hisses, and a young man, turning to Duval, said:

"'By Jove, how I'd roast this miserable piece if I only had a hollow key!'

"'My dear boy,' said Duval, 'I am happy to be able to accommodate you.'

"And he handed a hollow key to the young man, who at once set up a fierce and continuous hissing. Just then a critic appeared.

"'Duval,' he said to the playwright, 'I am sorry for you. Poor fellow, you don't deserve this.'

"The young man with the key looked amazed and ashamed.

"'What! Are you M. Duval? I beg your pardon a thousand times,' he cried.

"'You owe me no apology,' said Duval. 'Lunch with me tomorrow.'

"The young man accepted the invitation, and at the end of the luncheon next day, when the coffee and cigarettes were brought in, he drew a bulky manuscript from his pocket and begged leave to read a comedy to M. Duval, for he was a playwright too.

"Duval consented and listened attentively to the reading. At the end the young man said:

"'Well, monsieur, what do you think of it?'

"Duval smiled as he replied:

"'Could you oblige me by returning my hollow key?'"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

The Coloring of the Clouds.

The gorgeous coloring of the clouds, especially those of sunset, is due to the circumstance that the yellow and red rays of light have a much greater penetrative momentum than the blue. They make their way through stretches of the atmosphere which entirely arrest and turn back the blue, and they do this the more markedly if the air is at the time laden with extraneous particles that augment the aerial opacity.—New York American.

There is no substitute for thoroughgoing, ardent and sincere earnestness.—Dickens.

Most housewives judge the purity of a flour by its whiteness. White somehow signifies purity. But while pure flours are always white, white flours are not always pure.

Royal Household Flour

is the whitest flour that is milled. It is also the purest. You may think the flour you are using is about as white as flour can be. Yet if you place it beside Royal Household Flour it will look yellow by comparison. Ask your grocer for Royal Household, and make sure that he understands that you mean it.

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited) by CHARLES JAMES BOWELL, of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their office, No. 403, Front St., Belleville.

When you hear a girl speak of a young man as being a bear—well, you can draw your own conclusions.

Every man ought to be doing something more worthy of himself than just making a living.

A small boy doesn't have a very good time at a picnic unless he requires the services of a doctor a few hours later.

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

was rather remarkable, and Michele delighted in it and him with that affectionate pride so characteristic of Italian servants of the type which, when trustworthy, has an effusive, persistent ardor of devotion so little like the grim fidelity which is all that the best of us seem able to inspire in Northern attendants. He was penetrated this morning by something more noteworthy than usual in the appearance of the marquis. There was a certain indefinable resplendence in Di Loria's look the look of one to whom memory and anticipation open the way to a vista of unqualified joys, and who can gaze thereon and yet not be dazzled by the sight. Michele's loving heart breathed itself out once more in the word "Beatiful!" as he moved away. It was always a pleasure to look at the master; this morning he felt it a privilege. I think Michele was not without an inkling of the state of affairs, for love-making is the serious business of life to a Neapolitan, and affection can increase the insight of natural shrewedness. I am sure there was a fair vision of a coming marchesa before his mind's eye as he withdrew, and it was with no sense of undue familiarity with the intentions of the head of the house that he communicated his pleasant suspicions to his confreres.

"It will be a great day for Naples, let me tell you," he said, to the delighted circle in the servants' hall. "There will be the civil marriage first because she is a heretic."

"Poverina!" said a little underhousemaid who had served in the household of a priest.

Michele frowned. He was a liberal since Di Loria was. If the marchese had been a bigot, Michele would have vowed himself to the Church, always provided that he be permitted to serve Di Loria in some capacity.

"What will you?" he said scornfully "she is an American. In their country only the Irlandesi are of the faith. This lady is of high rank, else the signor marchese would not wish to marry her. She must therefore be of the Protestant religion; it is an affair of good manners."

"Yes, the civil marriage, of course, Michele," said the head cook, while the little maid humbly shrank back into her own corner. "And then?"

"And then perhaps she will demand to be wedded by one of her own priests, the Signor Browna; he was once among her people as missionary among the Indians."

"You said she was an American, Michele."

"Ah! I said it! Know then that the Indians are their peasants over there, Pasquale, and of a fierceness like that of our brigands."

The women looked with admiration at the learned Michele, and Pasquale sought to curry favor under general disapproval by murmuring "Truly, truly!" in his most propitiating tone.

"And then the ceremony at the chiesa—ah, that will be fine. And the palazzo will be thrown open and a great ball given, and guests will be bidden from Milan to Palermo. The king himself will be asked, and the queen will send the bride a gift. There will be such feasting as we have never seen, such feasting as there has not been since the grandfather of the last marchese married that Spanish duchess who brought so much gold to the Di Loria."

"Has she much gold, this lady?" asked the cook.

Michele turned on him superbly. "You ask that, and she an American!" he said with cold dignity. "She could buy Naples and give it to her husband for a bridal gift if it were for sale. They are all like that who come from her country. They have fields of gold there; I have heard them talk of them, those gentlemen who were with us in Syria. They use lire there like centesimi, and they give you one price for everything and will take not one soldo less."

Meanwhile Di Loria had finished his breakfast. He slipped a volume of his favorite Giusti into the pocket of his coat as he passed through his sanctum ,and strolled out into the dim old garden. Not dim now, however, for the sun had rolled gently into view, and long, slender rays like golden lances pierced the green darkness. It was very still there in the bosky alley, at the end of which a laughing Hermes peered through the leaves. Di Loria seated himself on a slab of marble which rested on the back of a quaint stone griffin, forming a seat by the side of a lazy fountain that stole with slow music from ledge to ledge of terraced basinsfi and opened his book. In vain! He was in no mood for that delicate and biting satire, so bitter and so mournful, and so sweetly and purely patriotic through it all. This was no time to remember the sighs of a fettered nation. It was dawn, Italy was free, and he was in love.

It is true that this was not the first time with Di Loria, for he had lived in Naples nearly all his life, and he was almost thirty ears old, but he was very sure that it was the last, and, like all lovers who have been, are, and shall be in love, told himself that it was really the only time. And perhaps he was not wrong. There is always the one letter kept out of the general holocaust; always the one trinket that is never sent back or discarded, always the one flower whose scent at the end of long years of ambition and strife and material cares and advancements recalls days and nights that seem in retrospect to have been filled with its fragrance. with an indescribable thrill and pang.

So to Di Loria, the one love, that for good or ill, was to remain in his memory when he too should be very old, was come. Other loves had been sensations, never experiments, but this was something more. He had always been rather happy, being one of those who are born to the sunshine, but he had never been quite satisfied, though, to be sure, that did not greatly disturb him, for he would have said that he saw no reason why he should be. But now!

The life of a young Italian noble may be either a very fine thing or a very slight one. The tranquil, dreamy existence in the beautiful old cities, now that permanent peace has come, tends to develop the saint and the scholar; the soldier, too, with those annals of past heroism written in the very stones; the lover always. It also tends to develop a type less easily described. Less brilliant and less easily described. Less brilliant and less vicious than the Parisian vaneur, more temperate and more courteous than the lounger of the London clubs, and with no faintest resemblance to the New York man about town, at once ingenuous and subtle, simple and sophisticated, these handsome and gentle young men who stand gravely in the sunshine before the club doors, or flit from villa to palace and back to the club again, lead a life that is never rude or vulgar or at all useful. It is curious to see the placid and eventless current of the days bearing down to old age these men who are yet freighted with strong passions

CANCER DEFINED.

The Theory of the Medical Experts of Columbia University.

According to the experts on cancer of the medical faculty of Columbia university, that dreaded disease is neither contagious nor infectious. As one of them expressed it, "you could breathe cancer, wallow in cancer, handle cancer with cut hands and not be in the least danger of contracting the disease, simply because cancer is not a germ disease."

Shorn of every scientific term, or, as one of the experts said, expressed in "primary grade" English that the most unlearned may comprehend, the following is what cancer is:

One of the myriad cells of which our tissues are composed fails to grow normally. It is either too large or too small. This abnormality of size pushes other cells around it out of plumb. These misplaced cells conglomerate into a mass of cells that, by reason of their abnormality, fail to receive proper nourishment. This lack of nourishment causes these abnormal cells to decay, thus forming a tumor or cancer. These abnormal cells, as they multiply, will go on knocking normally growing cells out of position, and as soon as this occurs these normal cells also become abnormal and begin to decay.

This process will continue at an ever accelerating rate, the decayed part growing and growing until the patient becomes so weak from the burden that he dies.

There is only one effective treatment so far devised—cut the tumor or cancer out as soon as possible after it is discovered. Nothing else will stop the decay of cells. Cancers have long, spreading roots. Every bit of this root must be cut out or the misplaced cells will begin growing faultily again and the cancer will reappear. If every bit of the root is extracted there is no likelihood of the reappearance of the cancer.

Because of the "ethics of the profession" the experts who imparted the information on cancer declined to permit the use of their names.—New York World.

"Sliding to Base."

At one time the slide was on the principle of getting there—to the coveted base—quick. The runner slid head first, like a football man tackling, and arrived in the center of a huge tornado of dust that admitted of no possible delusion as to his whereabouts. Now—and this is a McGraw invention; he calls it the "fall away" slide—the plan is to arrive not only fast, but also as invulnerably as possible. The runner slides feet first and well behind the bag. His right leg is straight ahead, as a brake, and his left leg, extended at right angles to the body, just touches the bag with the tip of the toe. The whole body is away from the tagger; he must touch the toe to tag the man out. For hours I watched McGraw line up his men and send them in turn at the bag to practice the "fall away" slide. It was much like the falling on the ball of a football squad and the result to the muscle much the same, I should judge, from the rueful countenance of each man as he rose.—Everybody's Magazine.

In a Tropical Forest.

Chief Engineer Burgess of the Honduras National railway, giving advice to engineers working in the tropics, says emphatically, "Don't get lost!" He adds that a man should no more think of going into a tropical forest without a compass than of going alone to sea without one. Without a compass one has no way of getting his direction. In a few minutes he is turned round. The sun can only be seen, if at all, when directly overhead. There is no moss on the trees to serve for a guide. Distant elevations or mountains, if any exist, cannot be seen on account of the density of the forest. Even on the treeless llanos of South America, where the mountains are too distant to be seen, the compass is the only guide. One can tell the direction of east and west at sunrise and sunset, but in the middle of the day the sun is useless as a guide because it is almost directly overhead, and often one may stand in the shadow of his own hat.

The Most Beautiful Bridge.

There will shortly be opened in Switzerland the Wieser viaduct, on the route from Davos to Filisur. It is entirely constructed of stone at a height of 90 meters, or 292½ feet, and has a central arch of 55 meters and six others each of 20 meters, the entire length of the bridge being 175 meters. It is, according to a Paris contemporary, the most beautiful bridge in the world.

The new line of Albula, moreover, presents some other admirable works of great boldness, among which is the Solis bridge, 25 meters in length and at an altitude of 77 meters, upon which the "diligences" stop to enable tourists to admire the beauties of the situation. Then, at 8 meters higher, is a second bridge, that of a railway, about 40 meters in length, which crosses an abyss of 85 meters.—London Globe.

Postal Service Supplies.

Some idea of the quantity of material used by the postal service may be gained when it is stated that during last year the division furnished 925,000,000 yards of twine, 3,260,000 pens, 283,000 penholders, 650,000 pencils and 2,600,000 blank cards. To wrap the bundles 5,400,000 sheets of wrapping paper were used. Blank forms are furnished by the millions. Of the form "Application For Domestic Money Order," which is seen in the lobby of every postoffice, there were 161,770,000 used last year, and during the same period 69,034 rubber stamps were manufactured and supplied to postoffices.—Assistant Postmaster General P. V. De Graw in National Magazine.

THE GHOST AT THE FEAST.

What the Ensign Saw and What Happened After Dinner.

In "The Story of My Life," by Mr. Augustus Hare, is told the following creepy story:

A regiment was passing through Derbyshire on its way to fresh quarters in the north. The colonel, as they stayed for the night in one of the country towns, was invited to dine at a country house in the neighborhood and to bring any one he liked with him. Consequently he took with him a young ensign for whom he had a great fancy. They arrived, and it was a large party, but the lady of the house did not appear till just as they were going in to dinner and when she appeared was so strangely distrait and preoccupied that she scarcely attended to anything that was said to her.

At dinner the colonel observed that his young companion scarcely ever took his eyes off the lady of the house, staring at her in a way which seemed at once rude and unaccountable. It made him observe the lady herself, and he saw that she seemed scarcely to attend to anything said by her neighbors on either side of her, but rather seemed, in a manner quite unaccountable, to be listening to some one or something behind her.

As soon as dinner was over the young ensign came to the colonel and said: "Oh, do take me away! I entreat you to take me away from this place!"

The colonel said: "Indeed, your conduct is so very extraordinary and unpleasant that I quite agree with you that the best thing we can do is to go away." And he made the excuse of his young friend being ill and ordered their carriage.

When they had driven some distance the colonel asked the ensign for an explanation of his conduct. He said that he could not help it. During the whole of dinner he had seen a terrible black, shadowy figure standing behind the chair of the lady of the house, and it had seemed to whisper to her and she to listen to it. He had scarcely told this when a man on horseback rode rapidly past the carriage, and the colonel, recognizing one of the servants of the house they had just left, called out to know if anything was the matter.

"Oh, don't stop me, sir!" he shouted. "I am going for the doctor! My lady has just cut her throat!"

Why Musicians "Tune Up" In Public.

Some people have been puzzled to understand why musicians tune up their instruments in public and not before they enter the orchestra. If they attended to them before entering the theater or concert room they might find the temperature different in the place of performance, and the instruments would not be in tune.

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS RESTORE DESPONDENT SUFFERERS TO HEALTH.

Nothing is so distressing as a weak stomach—the victims of this trouble suffer from indigestion, biliousness, dizziness and frequent headaches. No food agrees with them—meal time is a time of misery; not a time of pleasure. Relief from this suffering can be found through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—they never fail to make the weak stomach strong; to banish the distressing headaches, biliousness and dizziness. Mrs. C. S. Steeves, of Hillsboro, N.B., is one of the many who have been cured through the use of these pills. She says: "I suffered very much from stomach trouble and would often leave the table without tasting food. I got no relief worth speaking of till I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They gradually restored my health and strength, and now I am as well as ever I was. I would earnestly recommend them to all those who suffer as I did."

It is the blood—bad blood—that is the cause of nine-tenths of the ailments from which both men and women suffer. The blood is the life-giving fluid of the body. When the blood is bad it is bound to poison some part of the human system and thus it is that rheumatism, kidney trouble, indigestion, headaches and backaches and a host of other troubles make their appearance. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all these troubles — and they cure them thoroughly—simply because they fill the veins with rich, red blood. The genuine Pills bearing the full name "Dr Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," are sold by all dealers in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CHARMS OF UGLY MEN

Case of John Wilkes, the Famous London Alderman.

HE WEDDED A NOTED BEAUTY

And He Was So Homely That His Looks Frightened the Children In the Streets—Bailly, With a Face Like a Horse, Won a Famous French Beauty.

There was perhaps as much truth as boasting in the statement of John Wilkes, the famous London alderman and champion of British electors, "Ugly as I am, if I can have but a quarter of an hour's start I will get the better of any man, however good looking, in the graces of any woman."

Of Wilkes' abnormal ugliness there was never a question, for is it not recorded that the "very children in the street ran away affrighted at the sight of him?" And yet his powers of fascination were so great that "ladies of beauty and fashion vied with each other for his notice, while men of handsome exterior and all courtly graces looked enviously on."

There were, it is said, few beauties of the day whose hand Wilkes might not have confidently hoped to win, and when he led Mary Mead to the altar he made a wife of one of the richest and most lovely women of her time. "'Beauty and the Beast' they call us," Wilkes once said to his friend Patter, "and I cannot honestly find fault with the description."

Jean Paul Marat, whose name will always be associated with the evil history of the French revolution, was notoriously the ugliest man of his day in Paris. When this reputation reached his ears Marat is said to have remarked, "But why limit my supremacy to Paris?" And indeed the restriction was much too modest.

And yet in his earlier years, when he was the most popular of court doctors, his very ugliness seemed to exercise such a fascination over aristocratic ladies that they crowded his consulting rooms in order to catch a glimpse of and to exchange words with him under the flimsiest pretexts of imaginary ailments. The studied indifference with which he treated alike their charms and their flattery only made them the more insistent until he declared to a friend that he would have to fly from Paris to escape the persecution of his fair admirers.

Bailly, mayor of Paris at the time of the reign of terror, is said to have had a face almost exactly like that of a horse. His appearance was, in fact, so abnormal, so monstrous, that children shrieked and women fainted at the very sight of him, and yet his wife was one of the most lovely women in the whole of France—so lovely that as a girl she was known as "the beautiful angel."

That there is a powerful fascination for some women in extreme ugliness is proved by innumerable cases in which women who have been richly dowered with physical charms have fallen madly in love with men of almost repulsive appearance.

A London paper records a remarkable case of this kind in 1817, when Lady Mary X. married Mr. Mudford, a London attorney.

Lady Mary was a girl of peerless charms, the most beautiful of all the court ladies and the favorite toast of the world of aristocrats. She might—for her birth and fortune were almost equal to her beauty—have chosen her husband from among dukes, and even more than one royal prince sought her hand in vain.

To the consternation of society, she married Mr. Mudford, not only "a pettifogging attorney," but a man of almost unnatural ugliness of face and with a deformed hand and foot. Singular, too, as it may appear, her married life was one of unclouded happiness, and to her dying day, nearly forty years later, she never seemed to have a moment's regret for her choice of a husband.

Still more remarkable was the story told of a most beautiful heiress with an attachment for one of the freaks of a traveling show, and she persisted in marrying him in spite of all the efforts of her friends and relations. This singular object of her affections masqueraded under the title of "the man monkey, or the ugliest man in the world," and he had an excellent claim to the title.—Exchange.

Misfortune Camps on the Wrennick Family's Trail.

MR. N. S. WRENNICK, WHO WAS KILLED IN WHITEWOOD, SASK., IS THIRD MEMBER OF FAMILY TO SUFFER DEATH OR MUTILATION BY ACCIDENT.

Truly, misfortune seems to follow on the heels of some families. This is strikingly exemplified in the case of the Wrennick family, members of which dwelt for years in this city. David, who worked for the G. T. R., was killed in an accident at the station some years ago. William lost a leg and an arm while working for the Grand Trunk as a switchman. And last night the body of Nathanael Solmes Wrennick, another member of the same family was brought back to be buried. He was killed in an accident at Whitewood, Sask., and his mother accompanied the remains to this city. Mr. N. S. Wrennick formerly worked in the G. T. R. yard here, and was esteemed as a quiet, good citizen. He was about 30 years of age. Mrs. Wrennick, to whom sympathy will go out in her latest misfortune, was related to the late Mr. L. Appleby, formerly governor of the County jail here.

It seems that Mr. N. S. Wrennick's death was causedd by a runaway accident. He was driving a team of colts attached to a hay rake; they ran away and the unfortunate driver was thrown from his seat breaking his neck. He was a widower, and leaves no children.

Charged With Theft Of King's Property

FRED. RENFREW IN THE TOILS—DID HE STEAL STORES FROM THE FORTY-NINTH.

Frederick Renfrew, who is well known in police circles, is again in trouble. Last night he was arrested and the charge preferred against him is theft of Government clothing.

It appears that, some time ago, smocks and overalls belonging to A. Company, of the Forty-Ninth Regiment, which were stored in a room in the Star block on Front street, were found to be missing. Yesterday Renfrew was working out at Corbyville and Lieutenant F. Ketcheson, of the Forty-Ninth, who is also employed at Corbyville, noticed that he wore a smock which resembled one of those stolen. The affair was reported to the police and later on Renfrew was arrested. After his arrest Mrs. Renfrew brought to the police station two new smocks and a pair of overalls which bear the Government stamp. Renfrew was arrested whilst on his way from Corbyville to his home in this city.

Renfrew was this morning brought up before Magistrate Masson and the charge of theft preferred against him. As the Crown was not prepared to proceed in the case, the accused was remanded to jail for one week, without any evidence being taken.

Somebody Stole Sam Hibbard's Timepiece.

Mr. Samuel Hibbard, of this city, reports to the police that yesterday, whilst he was at work at Point Ann, a silver watch was taken out of his vest pocket. There is at present no clue as to who committed the theft.

Offer to Settle

No trace has yet been found of Walter Lasher, the young fellow who is alleged to have passed a bogus cheque on A. Brooks, the Front st. merchant. It is said that the fugitive's relatives will settle with Mr. Brooks for the loss he has sustained.

A Modest Disclaimer.

Mr. Knight, of the High School staff, writes:

"The value of the Mowat Scholarship in Mathematics, won this year by Miss Mackintosh, daughter of Inspector Mackintosh, of North Hastings, is $150, not $120, as stated in an item contributed to yesterday's Intelligencer. The item in question also errs by implication, at least, in assigning to myself, as one of Miss Mackintosh's teachers, a share in the honor due to her success. While duly appreciating your correspondent's kindly motive in mentioning my name in this connection, I should be unwilling to claim or accept credit for a result due almost wholly to a pupil's own energy and ability. Scholarships are won, not by schools or teachers, but by students.

Had a Joy Ride After the Shades of Night Had Fallen.

At a late hour last night a runaway occurred on North Front street, near the Thurlow township boundary, which resulted in a buggy being badly damaged, the horse hurt by coming in contact with a barb wire fence and the occupants of the vehicle badly shook up. Mrs. Clem Ellis and a male companion were occupants of the buggy, and the horse in some manner became frightened and off it started at a lively gait. The couple were thrown out, and Mrs. Ellis sustained some slight injuries about the head. The man escaped with slight bruises. The horse ran for a considerable distance before it was stopped. The outfit was the property of a city livery.

To Decorate The Council Chamber.

The special committee of the City Council, consisting of Mayor Marsh, Ald. Thomas and Sprague, to whom was referred the matter of having the Council chamber renovated and painted, met yesterday afternoon and Consulted a number of city decorators as to the work to be done. Tenders will be asked for and also for repairing the chairs and desks. When the work is completed the Chamber will, no doubt, have an attractive appearance.

Late Wm A. Huffman Was Laid to Rest

The remains of the late Mr. Wm. A. Huffman, who died at Picton, arrived in this city this morning, per steamer Alexandria. They were taken to Holloway street Church, where at 2 o'clock this afternoon, services were held, conducted by the pastor, Rev. B. Greatrix. Deceased was a member of the A. O. U. W., and a number of the local Workmen, attended the funeral and acted as bearers. Interment took place at the Belleville cemetery.

CELEBRATED HIS RELEASE—RUN IN AGAIN.

James Brown, of Trenton, yesterday was liberated from the County jail, after serving a thirty days term for drunkenness. The air of freedom made James thirsty, he celebrated the event by again getting intoxicated and was once more incarcerated. As he promised to leave the city at once the Magistrate gave him an opportunity to do so, after warning him that he would be sent up for six months if he was again brought up.

BROTHER TOLD BROTHER

One Suffered for Fifteen Years, the Other for Thirteen.

The convincing powers of a testimonial were never more clearly shown than in the case of Mr. Hugh Brown. A brother, Lemuel Brown, of Avondale, N.B., read in the paper about Hon. John Costigan being cured by "Fruit-a-tives." Knowing the Senator would only endorse a medicine which had cured him, Mr. Lemuel Brown tried "Fruit-a-tives." They cured him of Chronic Indigestion and Constipation, so he urged his brother to try them.

Hartland, N.B., Oct. 28th, 1907.

"Three doctors told me that I had Liver Disease and serious Stomach Trouble. My stomach was very weak. I took their medicines for thirteen years and grew worse. My brother (who was cured of terrible Indigestion by "Fruit-a-tives" after suffering for 35 years), recommended me to try these wonderful tablets. I bought half a dozen boxes and have just finished the sixth. I eat all kinds of hearty foods without distress and am greatly improved in every way. "Fruit-a-tives" also cured the Chronic Constipation which was so distressing in my case."

D. R. A. MATCHES END.

McInnes of Alberta Walks Off With Coveted Cup.

Ottawa, Aug. 28.—The chief features of the D. R. A. meeting, which closed yesterday, were the win again of a western man of the Governor-General's Cup, the success of the Ontario marksmen, who captured 13 out of the 18 principal prizes, and the high scores throughout the competition.

The finish of the Governor-General's Cup was most exciting. Sgt. McInnes of the Alberta Mounted Rifles and Pte. Bibby, a young shot from the 77th Regiment (Wentworth) had been running a neck-and-neck race, frequently tieing, and all along making the result doubtful. A great crowd gathered as the marksmen drew near the close of the thousand yards. At the end McInnes had only one shot to go to beat Bibby. He did so with a bullseye. His score was 198, Bibby's 194.

Sgt. McInnes is the first man to win the Governor-General's Cup twice, he being the winner in 1907. A western man, Capt. McHarg of Vancouver, won it last year.

Ontario's list of prizes includes the Walker Cup, Harold L. Borden Cup, Coates' Trophy, Gordon Highlanders' Trophy, Lansdowne Cup, Kirkpatrick Cup, London Merchants' Cup, Gillespie Cup, the Grand Aggregate Gold Medal, N. R. A. Silver Medal and N. R. A. Bronze Medal. Six of these went to the 10th Royal Grenadiers, Toronto, and three to the 13th Regiment, Hamilton.

Hon. Charles Murphy presented the prizes yesterday afternoon, and, in doing so, said that as a young Minister, he could make no promises for increasing the size of the ranges, but was in favor of doing so. The increased number of competitors this year has rendered an enlargement of the ranges necessary.

Morse Back on the Job.

New York, Aug. 28.—That Charles W. Morse, the financier, recently was released from the Tombs Prison under $125,000 bail, has begun his efforts to rehabilitate his fallen fortunes was indicated to-day by the announcement that he has purchased a majority of the claims outstanding against the Metropolitan Steamship Co., which amount to $1,157,012.

Mr. Morse, who testified a month or two ago that he was absolutely without funds or property, said that the money to buy in the claims was obtained from the Morse Security Co., of Bath, Me., which concern was organized to back Mr. Morse in his attempts to re-establish himself and to save the property which he had developed before the crash of 1907. It is proposed to reorganize the Metropolitan Line by the formation of a new company.

George Manville Fenn Dead.

London, Aug. 28.—The death was announced here yesterday of George Manville Fenn, the novelist. He was born in 1831.

Boys of the present, and thousands of men who were boys not so many years ago, will deplore the death of Manville Fenn. His books for juveniles were notable for the atmosphere of probability, his heroes acted and talked as real boys might do, and were not the paragons that most authors create. Neither did he have to go far afield for scenes of interest or derring-do—many of his most absorbing tales finding their locale in good old Merrie England. He was a favorite contributor to The Boys' Own Paper and other such publications.

Will Be Made in Canada.

London, Aug. 28.—Regarding statements cabled from Canada that the ships for Canada's navy are to be built in England, the Canadian Associated Press has the highest authority for saying that the vessels are to be built in Canada.

Re Canada and Australia laying the foundation of their own fleet, The Globe says it is an unfortunate determination and may have distastrous consequences.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not yet received an official communication from the Minister in London as to the deliberations of the Defence Conference. He hopes to have a conference next week with Sir Joseph Ward, Premier of New Zealand.

Highwaymen Foiled.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—A daring attempt at a hold-up took place Thursday night about midnight. John Hessenauer was driving in a buggy with two young ladies, when two men came out from behind some trees, and one got in front of the horse, and the other, standing outside the buggy, pointed a revolver at Hessenauer and demanded his money.

Hessenauer whipped up the horse and drove on.

Child Smothers.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 28.—Viola Parks, a five-year-old girl, met a shocking death while playing at hide-and-seek in her home near Clark's Lake.

The little one used an old-fashioned trunk which was up in the attic to hide in. The lid locked itself when the child lowered it over her head, and she was smothered to death.

The mother is almost insane from shock.

Longshoremen's Headquarters.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 28.—It is now practically certain the headquarters of the International Longshoremen's Association will go from Detroit to Buffalo. With headquarters in Buffalo the officers will be much more closely in touch with the Canadian organization, which has now grown to large proportions.

KILLED AT CROSSING

One Man Dies and One Is Hurt at Streetsville, Ont.

Level Crossing Disaster Results in Death of Thomas Gaunt and Fractured Skull to Fred Swithenbank—Third Occupant of Wagon Narrowly Escapes—Horse Is Cut to Pieces by the Train.

Toronto, Aug. 28.—The level and unprotected crossing has claimed another victim.

While driving over the level crossing out of Streetsville Thomas Gaunt, aged 21, and only son of John Gaunt, of that town, was instantly killed by the C. P. R Chicago flyer. In the rig with him were Fred Swithenbank, 11-year-old son of John Swithenbank, who received a severe fracture of the skull, and John Ward, also of Streetsville, who escaped.

The horse was almost cut to pieces and the rig was smashed into kindling wood.

By dropping out of the back of the buggy when the train was only ten feet away, Ward escaped.

The young men had hitched up Mr. Gaunt's horse and were enjoying a drive. They did not hear the train coming, and some people say that the whistle did not blow.

Before reaching the crossing the train sweeps around a sharp curve. At the junction of the track and the road is an orchard, which shuts out the view. The train was traveling at a high speed, and before the young men could realize was on top of them.

The engine struck the rig about the front wheel and Gaunt was carried down the track with the buggy and horse, while Smithenbank was thrown to one side of the track. The injured boy was brought on the train to Toronto and taken to St. Michael's Hospital, where he was still unconscious early this morning and very low. The body of young Gaunt was removed to the home of his father.

The deceased was boss weaver and Swithenbank an employe of the Oriental Textiles, Ltd., of Streetsville. John Gaunt formerly lived at West Toronto.

Coroner Lawson, of Brampton, was notified.

To Improve Detroit Channel.

Ottawa, Aug. 28.—The United States has applied for permission to carry on extensive works on the Canadian side of the Detroit River for the purpose of deepening and straightening the channel in the vicinity of the Bola Blanc Island.

The work would require an expenditure of about two million dollars. The traffic of the United States vessels is particularly heavy at this point, which is near the Lime Kiln Crossing, where the United States has already spent a couple of million dollars in works on the channel on the Canadian side.

The application has been referred to the waterways commissioners, but it is practically certain that it will be granted.

Rebuilding of Tudhope Works.

Orillia, Aug. 28.—J. B. Tudhope, M. M.P., head of Tudhope & Co., whose carriage works were destroyed last Saturday, gave emphatic denial last night to a report that the firm would remove its factory to Winnipeg.

"We have no such intention," he said. "Winnipeg would be no good for manufacturing in our line. Whether we will rebuild in Orillia is not yet decided, however, and will not be for a few days. We have received a number of invitations from other towns, and, while sentiment would have us stay, still it's a matter of business."

Wireless In Fiji Islands.

Sydney, N.S.W., Aug. 28.—Delegates representing the Colonial Office and the Federal Government are conferring at Fiji with the high commissioner of the Western Pacific regarding the installation of wireless telegraphy throughout the Pacific Islands and on the administration of the British possessions in Oceania.

It is understood that the Commonwealth desires to acquire increased status of control in the British Islands in the Pacific, making Australia the seat of administration.

Strike-Breakers Quite Work.

Pittsburg, Aug. 28.—Imported men, numbering 200, quit work yesterday at the Pressed Steel Car Co., McKee's Rocks, and in a body marched to the bank of the Ohio River, where they will camp until the company has paid them for their work. The men alleged they were given poor food, subjected to cruel treatment and that they were forced to work when they wanted to quit.

Why Men Wear Trousers.

No living man of this age ever deliberately chose to "adopt trousers." He was forced into them and all other eccentricities of dress by woman. In the very earliest sartorial experience of every man he is swathed in a queer bundle of incoherent bandages by a woman. Later she puts him into cute little dresses so that the neighbors can't tell him from his little sister. Still later she cuts off his curls and puts him into knickerbockers, and he puts on "long pants" when she gives the word and not before. That is all that man has to do or ever had to do with wearing trousers. Woman forced him into them in the first place, and now he is afraid to wear anything else for fear of making a sensation.—Providence Journal.

Virginia Cabbage.

Select a small, fine pointed head of cabbage, cutting off the top for a lid. Cut out the center, leaving a wall an inch thick. Chop one cupful of cabbage very fine, then add one cupful each of ground ham and veal, one grated onion and finely chopped green pepper, six rolled crackers, two beaten eggs, one cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one-half teaspoonful each of celery salt and salt, one saltspoonful of white pepper and two dashes of cayenne. Mix thoroughly, fill cabbage, tie on the lid, put in a cheesecloth bag and boil in salted water for one hour. Slice crosswise and serve with cream sauce. Delicious. Serve the potato croquettes on the same platter.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Fatherly Advice.

"Dad," said the country youth who had just graduated from the district school, "I have long cherished a desire to go on the stage and have at last decided, with your permission, to"—

"My boy," interrupted the old granger, "all the world's a stage. You hitch the mules to the big red plow and transfer the outfit to the ten acre lot behind the barn, where you can enact the star role in that beautiful drama entitled 'Down on the Farm.'"—Chicago News.

Courtship In the North.

The old Eskimo lit a cup of walrus oil and peered over the sealskin curtain.

"Aurora," he called, sharply, "is that young man down there yet?"

"Yes, pa," answered the Eskimo belle.

"Well, I want you to cut him out, understand?"

"Er—you'll have to do it yourself, pa. He has been here so long he is frozen to the snow settee."—Success Magazine.

Qualified.

The great magazine editor sneered. "What right have you," he asked, "to think you'll ever make a poet?"

"Well, sir," the youth said timidly, "I've been fasting man in a sideshow for the last two seasons."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

No man is wise at all times.—Pliny the Elder.

Aviators Cover Themselves With Glory at Rheims.

Glenn Curtiss Is Winner of the Speed Contest Defeating Bleriot by Small Distance—Hero of the Channel Has Bad Accident — Hubert Latham Goes Highest—Farman Also Gets a Prize.

Bethany Aviation Field, Rheims, Aug. 30.—A twilight vision of Paulhan's graceful monoplane, like a great white bird soaring above the plain so high that it seemed to rise above the distant hills and the fleeting "golden flier" as the Curtiss machine has been dubbed, smashing another world's record in the prix de la Vitesse were the closing glories of aviation week.

Curtiss only missed winning the lap speed contest from Bleriot by a small margin. He captured second place in that event which was over the full circuit of ten kilometres, or 6.21 miles, raising his total money winnings to 38,000 francs, besides the international cup, which goes to the Aero Club of America.

An accident removed Bleriot from yesterday's three lap speed contest.

The rudder suddenly failed to respond and the machine turned completely over three times, landing with such force that the petrol tank burst and catching fire from the hot motor, enveloped the machine and pilot in flames. Before Bleriot could extricate himself he was burned about the face and hands.

The prix de la altitude 10,000 francs to be awarded the aeroplanist attaining the highest altitude, was won by Latham, who reached a height of 155 metres (about 490 feet). Farman was second with 110 metres, Paulhan third and Rougier fourth.

The passenger contest was won by Farman. With two passengers he made the circuit of the course in 10 minutes, 39 seconds, and with one passenger, 9 minutes, 52 4-5 seconds, Lefebvre with one passenger completed the lap in 11 minutes, 20 4-5 secs.

The lap speed contest went to Bleriot, who covered the ten kilometres in 7 min., 47 4-5 secs.

The international cup of aviation, known also as the German-Bennett trophy, was won yesterday by Glenn H. Curtiss, the American aviator, in the fastest aerial journey of 20 kilometres (12.42) miles), ever achieved by man. His time, 15 min. 50 3-5 secs., was only 5 3-5 seconds faster than that made by Bleriot over the same course. The other two pilots who represented France, Latham and Lefebyre, finished respectively in 17 min. 47 3-5 sec. Cockburn, the Englishman, ran into a haystack as he was manoeuvring for the start.

Henry Farman, the English aviator, added to his laurels by carrying two passengers around the course.

Have Well-Known Crook.

Toronto, Aug. 30.—Lieut. R. A. Stenton of the Detroit police department and Provincial Detective Chas. Mahoney of Windsor, Ont., arrived in Toronto yesterday from California, with an alleged diamond thief, swindler and generally smooth crook, in the person of "Fritzy" (Frank) Dehin, alias Frank Chapman. They are taking him to Chatham on a charge of stealing a satchel containing $1,575 and some drafts from a messenger of the Sovereign Bank on December 1, 1906.

The robbery occurred on a Michigan Central train at Tilbury. The bank messenger had been in the habit of carrying his money down to Fletcher in a satchel and on this occasion the grip was "switched" and another put in its place.

One Killed In Wreck.

Capac, Mich., Aug. 30.—Rushing along at a rate of 60 miles an hour the Grand Trunk express, running from Chicago to Port Huron, collided with the rear end of a work train at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. The fireman, John Brush, of Battle Creek, was instantly killed and three others were injured.

The accident occurred without warning. Brush attempted to jump, but was pinned between the cab and boiler of his locomotive. James McCaren, engineer, also tried to jump, but was caught in the wreckage and loses a leg.

The other two injured were John Sturman, fireman on the engine on the work train, and D. H. Rathman, engineer.

Heroic Wireless Operator.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 30.—Geo. E. Eccles, wireless operator on the wrecked steamer Ohio, which was wrecked off the Alaskan coast early Friday, went below with the purser to search for the quartermaster and steerage passenger when the ship started to sink, according to a wireless message received yesterday morning. He returned to his station after the search and began sending a message when the vessel made the plunge that carried it to the bottom.

Eccles was seen to leap from the wireless station, striking on his head, and it is thought that he then rolled into the water.

Eccles secured a place at Susitna, Alaska, a short time before the Ohio sailed and had handed in his resignation, but as the company was short of wireless operators he consented to make one more trip before leaving the service of the company. He was born in Almonte, Ont.

His early messages for assistance brought the vessels that rescued the others.

Harriman Getting Better.

Arden, N.Y., Aug. 30.—"Mr. Harriman is better. You may say that Mrs. Harriman and all of us are very happy over the steady improvement in his health since he came to Arden House," said Rev. J. Holmes McGuiness, E. H. Harriman's personal chaplain, after dining with the Harriman family yesterday.

A Cleveland despatch says that Dr. Crile, the specialist summoned in haste on Friday, has wired that Mr. Harriman's condition is not serious and that an operation would not hasten nor give added assurance of his ultimate recovery. The nature of Mr. Harriman's illness is not mentioned.

Jacob Schieff, the New York banker, who conferred with Harriman Saturday, said: "Mr. Harriman is a well man."

Russia's Mimic German War.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 30.—War manoeuvres on a vast scale on the plains between Gatchina and Narva have occupied the Czar and the leading Russian generals the past week. The area of operations is located within a three days' infantry march of St. Petersburg and the entire scheme was remarkable for political candor.

The strategic advisers of the Czar started on the assumption that Russia was at war with Germany before the navy had been sufficiently reconstructed to defend even the upper coasts of the Gulf of Finland. German warships were assumed to have convoyed transports to Narva, where they had disembarked an invading army within a hundred miles of the capital.

They were headed by the Salvation Band of Guelph. The speakers were: Rev. Dr. Eby, S. Berr, J. Parkin, Rev. J. Wilson, and J. H. Christman.

The Assault Was Brutal.

Arthur Bollard Was Badly Treated Say the Authorities.

Statement Is Made That Post Mortem In Chemong Park Case Revealed Mutilation of Dead Young Man—Young Joppling Tells One Version of Bollard's Fight With His Brother, Fred.

Peterboro, Aug. 30.—The inquest into the death of Arthur Bollard of Toronto, who died on Friday as the result of injuries sustained in a fight early in the week, will be held Monday evening. A post-mortem was made on Saturday by Drs. Scott, Gray and Morgan. They refuse to make public the result, but it is stated that they found mutilation that indicated that the young man was the victim of a most ruffian assault.

According to Harry Joppling, brothed of Fred Joppling, who fought Bollard, and who is now in the hospital in a serious condition from blood poisoning, the fight followed a joking remark made by Harry to Bollard, which the latter chose to interpret as an insult, and he challenged Joppling to fight it out.

"As I am only 18 years old and a little fellow, and he was a trained athlete, I said I wouldn't," said Harry Jopling, "and Bolland said he could lick me and my chum, Billy Merrill. We drove on. That night I went to a dance with my sister and saw Bollard point to me and heard him say, 'That's the guy.' I was afraid he was going to met me so went down to the village to get one of the big fellows to come up.

"After the dance we saw Bollard and three others going on ahead and Fred said, 'Let's ask him what he meant by threatening you.' We left the girls behind and Fred approached Bollard and asked: 'What do you mean by hitting my little brother?' Then Bollard turned and struck me.

"Then Fred and Bollard took off their coats. Fred struck him only one blow which knocked him into the ditch. Bollard looked in bad shape as he arose.

"He then challenged my brother to a wrestling match, and the idea striking both of them as good fun, they shook hands and started in, Bollard saying that he was better in wrestling than boxing. Once Fred threw Bollard and the next time Bollard threw Fred down. At the third throw, Bollard was pitched into the side of the road where he vomited profusely for several minutes. After that he got up and went home with his friend."

Certain it is, that while this version may be, in a general way, accurate, it does not tell all that occurred, and the brutality of Bollard's assailants should call for the most rigorous prosecution that the law allows.

Monster Ship Planned.

Tokio, Aug. 30.—The Government announces its intention to build cruisers of 36,000 tons.

The Dreadnought is only of 17,500 tons, the superdreadnoughts 20,000 tons or less; the British Invincible class of cruisers are 17,250 tons. The biggest ship talked of for the United States navy is to be about 25,000 tons.

A 36,000-ton cruiser would be in the class as to size with the greatest Atlantic liners, the Mauretania and Lusitania alone excepted.

Wrights Sue Curtiss.

Corning, N.Y., Aug. 30.—Papers were served Friday in Hammondsport, N.Y., upon Mrs. Glenn R. Curtiss and L. B. Masson, secretary-treasurer of the Herring Curtiss Aeroplane Co., by a deputy marshal in behalf of the Wright Brothers of Dayton, Ohio, who are bringing suit for alleged infringement on their aeroplane patents. The papers are returnable in the U. S. District Court in New York on Oct. 20.

Final D.R.A. Results.

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—The following results in the D.R.A. matches are announced: Steward's jewel match, won by Sergt. English, 95th Regt., 213; running man match, Capt. H. Complin, 23rd Regt., 24; Gen. Lake match, 55 shots in 45 seconds at figure of man 500 yards distant, $20, won by Corpl. A. Rutherford, F.O.R., 25.

St. John, N.B., Aug. 30.—George Merissis, who was found guilty of selling Free Speech, an obscene publication, was sentenced by Judge Forbes to three months in jail and a fine of $300. He intimated that if prisoner would assist the authorities in the suppression of the paper he would commute the sentence.

Bank Clerk Drowns.

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 30.—Charles O'Shaughnessy, aged 21, ledgerkeeper in the Bank of Commerce, was drowned Saturday afternoon at English Bay. He dived from the float and it is supposed suffered a cramp, for he sank from sight. His parents live in Ireland.

Knights Come to Toronto.

Toronto, Aug. 30.—The Chapter General of America of the Order of Knights of St. John and Malta will hold their annual convention in this city on the 6th of September. About 200 delegates representing fourteen states and the Dominion of Canada will be in attendance. Reservation for the grand officers and delegates have been made at the leading hotels, and the headquarters will either be located at the Queen's or the Prince George. The first of the delegates to arrive will be the New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and Connecticut knights, who are arriving by Lehigh Valley and Grand Trunk early next Sunday morning, and will be followed during the day by those from the western and southern states. The meetings of the chapter general are purely business ones, all parading and entertaining being prohibited by constitutional enactment. The local officers of the commanderies will meet the incoming trains and look after the reception and comfort of the visiting knights. The sessions will last three days, and be held in the chapter rooms of Beaver Commandry.

Lord Rosebery Wobbles.

New York, Aug. 30.—W. T. Stead cables The American from London, Eng.: The political sensation of the week has been the announcement that Lord Rosebery, formerly the Liberal Prime Minister, has promised to address a public meeting at Glasgow to protest against the budget.

The publication of this report was speedily followed by a telegram from Lord Rosebery, which read:

"The report is premature at any rate."

I should not be surprised if this episode brings Rosebery's political career to a somewhat ignominious close. Lord Rosebery has always hated the new budget because of the land taxes. As he is a great landlord himself, he shares to the full the landlord's hatred of taxation, but he also hated the "death duties" as much and yet consented to remain as Prime Minister while his Cabinet passed the hated impost.

Lloyd-George Censured.

London, Aug. 30.—Mr. Lloyd-George is leaving no stone unturned in his efforts to obtain support for his proposals. During the week he has given interviews to two Opposition papers, a proceeding which in itself is an extraordinary proceeding for a British Minister of his rank. To a Liberal paper he gave a copy of an important memorandum before a single member of the House of Commons could see it. This was so opposed to all traditions of Parliament that the Speaker of the House, who was appealed to, administered a grave rebuke to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, describing his conduct as a 'regrettable occurrence."

Seeking Divorces.

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—Notice is given of application for divorce at the coming session by the following: Arthur F. Tero of Toronto, from Adelaide Viola Tero; by John Albert Green of Cutross, Bruce County, Ont., from Sarah Emily Green; Jessie M. Maxwell of Port Arthur, from Robert William Maxwell; John Green, Kingston; Mrs. Clara B. Holden, Toronto, from C. L. Holden, Chicago; Frederick J. G. McArthur, Winnipeg, from Mary A. Murder on Detroit Docks.

Detroit, Aug. 30.—In a fight on dock, in full view from the big windows of the Wayne Casino, at the foot of Second street, Thomas McCauley, a sailor from the steamer City of Alpena, was beaten to death and his body thrown in the river at midnight Saturday. His assailant, who is described by Joseph Rybioki, the only person who saw the combatants at close range, as a slim man of medium height, dressed in a blue blouse with sailor collar, dark trousers and a sailor cap, walked calmly around the casino to Second street after the row and disappeared.

Paddle Wheel Hit Him.

Windsor, Aug. 30.—Norman Clinton, aged 17, while swimming in the river yesterday opposite the Grand Trunk slip dock, was hit on the head by a paddle wheel on a carboat, and before he could be picked up sank to the bottom and was drowned.

Young Clinton had been warned several times against going too close.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Sudden drop in temperature last night made many people realize that the good old winter time is on its way, and the pertinent question comes up, where are our summer's wages?

'Tis but a short step, in Canada, from the furnace to the ice box.

A moving picture of Lord Charley Beresford opening the Toronto exhibition with a fur coat and ear muffs on, may be one of the features at London music halls soon.

Fire last night lit things up brightly. It was easy to see by their attire which of our citizens had been to church.

✦ ✦ ✦

Any bouquets lying around loose should be sent to the firemen, whose work last night aroused admiration. If any class of men in this city earn their salaries it is surely the men who fight the fire. Always on the job and always doing gilt-edged work. Hats off to Chief Campbell and his merry men.

The annual exodus to Toronto has begun Hundreds of people from this city and other places in Ontario will go to the Queen City this week and next and leave much of their change. The Toronto fair is a good one, and people who attend it get the worth of their money, no doubt. But let us hope they will not forget that the city in which they earn their money has some claims on them when they come to spend it. Belleville's stores carry fine stocks, and money spent in Toronto helps to pay no Belleville rents and taxes.

N. B.—Or salaries, either.

Kingston is worked up over the $50 annual tax imposed on Chinese laundries in that city. The Chinks say they cannot pay the tax and make a living, and some Kingstonians seem to think that they should either pay the tax or go out of business. Canadians had clean shirts and cuffs and collars before the Mongolians came over, they say.

The cool wave of last night must have made many campers and summer resorters sit up and sing "There's no place like home."

✦ ✦ ✦

Perhaps it is the yeast in the bread which makes it keep up so high after it has risen.

✦ ✦ ✦

A Peterboro man lost $18,000 while in Montreal, and the strange part of the story is, he got it back again. That's the latest modern miracle.

Somebody wrote a letter to the Aylmer EExpress in which nasty things were said about the editor, who replied as follows: "Owing to the fact that the public are not particularly interested in a personal discussion of our merits and demerits, and also that we are so confoundedly thick-skinned and thick-headed that we can hardly tell when we are hit, we shall not attempt to reply in kind." This is sensible. In more ways than one the Aylmer editor is onto his job.

Henry Farman the English aviator, on Friday last became the world's champion and won a prize of $10,000 by flying 118 miles. This is an answer to those who say England is neglecting aerial navigation. Looks as if old John Bull means to rule the air as well as the waves.

A western manufacturer has produced a paper bottle for the distribution of milk. The bottle is intended to be used but once. It may be destroyed when emptied, without worrying anybody about the loss. This is one of the things for which the world has been waiting. Milk is one of the most popular and necessary articles of our common food. Every precaution should be taken to guarantee its purity. The bread wrapper is also likely to come into general use. The butter wrapper we have with us already. In some places boards of health are demanding that bread should be wrapped in paper before being transferred to the delivery waggon. If one stopped to think about the condition of bread exposed to the dust of the streets and to promiscuous handlings one might lose his appetite for bread so exposed. If the doctors believe all they tell us about the dissemination of these disease germs, the wonder is that those connected with health departments have not insisted on the protecting wrapper long ago.

Makes Drinking Water Safe

Scientists working in McGill University Laboratories. in Montreal, recently discovered a Typhoid Fever preventative that should be universally used wherever there is danger of infection from drinking water.

It is simply "Sovereign" Fruit Juice, added to the water fifteen minutes before it is to be drunk.

When this is done, the scientists say every Typhoid germ in the infected water is destroyed.

"Sovereign" Lime Fruit Juice with water makes a delicious, cooling drink, as well as a perfectly safe one

A Pleasing Incident

The Sunday School of Holloway st. Church, on learning that Mrs. John Falle, one of the school's most valuable teachers, who has taught a class for the last twelve years, was about to sever her connection with the school on leaving for her new home in Bowmanville, yesterday presented her with a nice set of books as a mark of esteem and gratitude for her very valuable services during the last twelve years. Miss May Williams read the address and the Pastor, Rev. Mr. Greatrix, Rev. Mr. Martin, Mr. P. F. Canniff, Superintendent, and Mr. Geo. Woodley, ex-Superintendent, spoke in fitting and eulogistic terms of Mrs. Falle, who takes with her the best wishes of all in this city.

Budget of News From Calgary, Alberta

REV. MR. BLAGRAVE MADE GOOD RECOVERY — BELLEVILLIANS ARE COMING TO NEXT O. B. R.

A former Bellevillian, now resident in Calgary, Alta., writes thus to an employee of this paper:

Dear Sir,—Glad to hear of your safe arrival home from your holiday in the Old Country, and hope you have been benefitted with better health for having taken the trip.

There are so many former Bellevillians residing here, perhaps a few random notes will not be out of place.

The Rev. Mr. Blagrave, the popular young Rector of Christ Church, who has been on a holiday for the past two months at Stettler, Alta., was in this city to-day on his way to the coast. He has quite recovered from the operation which he underwent about two weeks ago for appendicitis and hopes to reach Belleville in the early part of next month.

Mr. R. P. Hamilton, who travels for a seed firm, was in the city, for a few days. It is seventeen years since his last visit here, and "Bob," as he is generally called, was amazed and astonished at the rapid growth of this city to thirty-three thousand, from the then small village of a thousand or two.

Already there is talk among the Belleville contingent residing here (and they number close to a hundred) of securing a special car and journeying to the beautiful City of the Bay, to take part and share in the next Belleville Old Boys' Reunion.

A new-comer, or tenderfoot, if he comes from the Quinte district, need not be here many hours before he is shown the Government buildings, C. P. R. station and a well-known hotel, which were put up some years ago by our well-known townsmen, Messrs. Walter Alford and Ald. Lang, but in almost every case they all have been remodelled and enlarged to about ten times the former size.

Yours, etc.,
BELLEVILLE OLD BOY.

Mrs. Austin announces that she is now prepared to manufacture and repair all kinds of furs. All orders entrusted to her will be completed satisfactorily as in the past. Prices are moderate.

Park Rail Did Damage.

As Mrs. Benj. Burton was passing into Victoria Park about dusk, last band night, she did not notice the rail that is placed across the entrance to keep vehicles off, and, coming in contact with the wooden bar, sustained facial disfigurement and pain to a marked degree.

A Correction.

Mrs. Clem Ellis informs The Intelligencer that she was not thrown from a buggy in a runaway accident on Friday night last, but that her husband, Clem. Ellis, was, sustaining a sprained ankle and some bruises.

A Pleasant Surprise.

Mr. Reginald Geen, of this city, son of Rev. A. L. Geen, sailed on Saturday last for London, per S.S. Pomeranian. Probably his most intimate friend in Canada was Mr. Wilkinson, now of Toronto, formerly organist of St. Thomas', in this city. Neither one knew the other was to be a passenger on the Pomeranian, and their surprise and pleasure can well be imagined when they met on the train at the station here, both en route for Montreal, whence they sailed together for the world's metropolis on the same steamship.

Accident to Child.

On Sunday morning a fifteen-months-old child of Prof. Phelps, organist of Bridge St. Church, wandered from its home on Foster Ave. through a back field into Albert street, where it fell from a high sidewalk into a ditch containing considerable water. Had it not been for the timely assistance of a Mr. Knox, 80 years of age, who was nearby, the little one would have smothered in the ditch. At one time this walk was protected by a rail, but for months there has been nothing to protect citizens or children from accident. Spring and fall, large quantities of water pass through a culvert under the road, which opens at the spot where the Phelps child fell in. The wonder is that an accident has not happened before.

A BLAZE OF LIGHT

NIGHT SCENE AT CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION ONE TO LIVE IN MEMORY.

The "Electric City" will be a fitting name for the Canadian National Exhibition grounds at Toronto this year. All the big buildings are being fitted with exterior decorations of electric light and they will turn the Exhibition nights into the whitest kind of days. This brilliancy added to the martial music, the movements of troops and all the panoply of display should make the night scene at the Canadian National one never to be forgotten.

Daily Intelligencer.

How Laurier's Extravagance Has Hurt Canada's Credit.

The following, from The Weekly Sun, an independent journal, is worthy the attention of all Canadians, irrespective of politics. It contains, alas! too much truth:

The Standard of Empire, in reviewing the recent borrowings by the Dominion Government on the London money market, states some facts which are deserving of serious consideration.

In June, 1908, this London paper says, the Dominion floated a loan of £5,000,000, bearing 3 3-4 per cent. interest, at par; in January of this year another loan of £6,000,000 was placed on the same market, at 99 1-4, although bearing the same rate of interest, viz., 3 3-4 per cent; in July last a third loan, this time of six and one half-million pounds, bearing 3 1-2 per cent. was floated at 98 1-2.

On the first loan only 50 per cent., the authority quoted says, was taken up by the public, the balance being left on the hands of the agents through whom it was offered; of the second 59 per cent. of the whole was left on the agents' hands, and of the third 45 per cent.

"During the same period," the journal already named goes on, "many other loans, offered by foreign countries and foreign industries, have been largely oversubscribed."

The Standard of Empire, it should be observed, unlike The Investor's Review, is effusively friendly to Canadian and colonial enterprises generally. Its friendliness is based, it may be said in passing, on the hope of inducing colonial Governments to come to the help of imperial jingoes in building armaments intended to dominate the common highways of the nations. It attempts to show that Canadian credit is, despite the facts just mentioned, in such a condition as to call for congratulations. It is difficult to see wherein, on the showing made, cause for congratulation is to be found. When over half of three large Canadian Government loans, issued within a year of each other, are left on the hands of agents employed to float the same, there is prima facie evidence that something is wrong. The evidence that the "something" lies in the over-borrowing and over-spending of the Laurier Government becomes conclusive when it is seen that in the same time foreign loans, floated in the same market, have been over subscribed.

Government by Commission

There is something instructive, as well as entertaining, in the following, from a Montreal paper. People who complain that the present form of municipal government is cumbersome and expensive will see that other people think as they do:

"What do you think would be the result if the commission form of government were adopted in Montreal?" a Witness reporter asked Mr. J. J. Jones, of Des Moines, Iowa, when the Municipalities Convention adjourned for lunch.

"Think of it!" he exclaimed, "Well, close your eyes and let your imagination run wild; let your first vision contain the fading away of ward lines; your board of aldermen disappears, with its myriads of slow moving boards and committees. All time-consuming, tax-eating, cumberous forms, and all the very human desire for honorable committee assignments eliminated.

"Now, if you can imagine that your mind is rid of present conditions, and you will see beautiful Montreal in a position to adopt the commission plan.

"Then imagine your city government divided into about five or six departments, with a man at the head of each department who has been elected by the entire city, and who for his misdeeds may be easily recalled. Imagine the five or six men unable to grant a franchise or perform other important acts unless it has initiated with the people or shall have been referred back to the people.

"Imagine yourself going to the City Hall with business to transact. When you get there you will go to the proper department and find there the commissioner whose responsibility is fixed and who will attend to your business now, without awaiting the slow machinery of a committee.

"Then imagine full and complete published reports of every dollar spent at stated periods.

"That is all good, quick, modern business methods, is it not? Well, that is all; it is just business; applying modern business methods involving integrity and quick and good results. It is business, that is all; just good business methods."

Horse Still King

Although no monarch, however precarious his tenure of office may be in these uncertain days of kingship, has recently offered his kingdom for a horse, the old reliable animal is still an indispensable adjunct to human welfare. Only a few years ago the machinist who had become enamored of automobiles, predicted that the horse was doomed to extinction at an early date. He said the same thing when bicycles came into use. But the horse is still doing business, in it.

Our horse population, taken over the fifteen years in which the automobile may be said to have been an effective competitor, has risen almost continuously, and especially in the past seven years. There were 15,893,318 horses in the United States in 1895, with an average value of $36 a head. There are now according to the figures of the fiscal year just closed, 20,640,000, with a total value of $1,974,042,000, or an average of $95 a head. In the same period the horse's plebeian but useful relative, the mule, has nearly doubled in number, or from 2,333,108 in 1895 to 4,053,000 in 1909, and more than double in value, as the average mule, which was worth $17 in 1895 is now worth $107. If the automobile were going to exterminate the horse, such figures as these would be impossible.

You can enjoy a good, hearty meal of wholesome food three times a day, if you take a tablet after each meal.

"For two years I suffered with Indigestion, and obtained no relief from anything I took, including several prescriptions from prominent physicians. Every meal was followed by acute pain until I feared to eat, consequently became run down for lack of nourishment. "Little Digesters" were recommended to me by a friend and I tried them with remarkable results, two boxes completely curing me. It is three months since I took any, and I have not suffered a pain, no matter how heartily I eat. I would certainly recommend them to anybody suffering with Indigestion." (Signed) E. THODY.

SPORTING NOTES

A Kingston paper says a cricket match is being arranged between Portsmouth and Belleville cricket teams. Didn't know we had one.

Toronto Lacrosse team put it over the Shamrocks to the tune of 12-1 Saturday, while Capitals beat Tecumsehs 5-4. The Torontos thus step up to second place in the N. L. U. Nationals beat Cornwall 5-2.

To-morrow night, the Harriers will have a three mile handicap. Will leave the Association rooms at 7.30 sharp. After the race all the members are requested to meet in the parlor for very important business.

Further evidence that John Kling intends to settle down and engage in business instead of battling for his livelihood on the diamonds of the major leagues was produced at Kansas City when he incorporated a baseball supply company bearing his name and with a capital of $500,000.

The Seagram horses will be shipped from Saratoga to Montreal, where racing begins at Blue Bonnets on Saturday next.

Kent won the English counties cricket championship.

An artificial ice rink, with a seating capacity of 3,500, is being built in Chicago, and will be called "The Ice Palace." It is proposed to have professional hockey. Tom W. Pryor is the promoter. He is keeping in touch with Canadian pro. clubs.

THE GREATEST EVER.

THAT'S WHAT THE CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION LOOKS LIKE NOW.

Entries in all classes have come with a rush at the offices of the Canadian National Exhibition and now the greatest year in the history of the Big Fair is assured. There are horses from across the ocean as well as from across the line. Jerseys from the Street Railway King of Toronto and horses from Sir William Van Horne's Manitoba farm. There are sheep from Canada and from the United States. There are manufactures finished and manufactures in the making. There's everything and an abundance of it. Add all this to the greatest bill of special attractions the Canadian National Exhibition ever offered and you have all the elements of a world's fair—and a few things thrown in besides.

The Modern Way.

One friend who has spent a long and useful life and looks good for another half century expects his reward in heaven and meantime is a philosopher. He can talk on any subject under the sun, from "the flower of poesy" to "the precession of the equinoxes." He apparently knows the "Iliad" and "Odyssey" by heart, so I knew that when he handed me a bit of verse it must be good.

"Here is a hymn on the solar system or some other lofty theme," thought I, placing the sheet in my letter case. When I arrived home I read:

The lizard climbed a wall. He climbed it once,
He climbed it twice—then crawled away.

The bee sipped a flower. He sipped it once,
He sipped it twice—then flew away.

The man kissed a maid. He kissed her once,
He kissed her twice—then walked away.

The wall wasn't sunny; the flower had no honey;
The maid had no money. Funny!

The problem now is whether the contribution is a joke or a gem.—National Magazine.

Pilkerton Won the Race.

At one of the regattas of the National Association of American Oarsmen during the early nineties James Pilkerton, for many years the champion sculler of America, was matched to row double against another team. He and his mate were the champions, and the general belief was that they would win without effort. But the night before the regatta public opinion suddenly and mysteriously changed. Mr. Pilkerton knew that this was not caused by any new development of strength in his opponent or any loss of skill on his own part. After making some quiet inquiries he discovered that there was talk of his rowing mate having been bought up by the other side and of an arrangement to throw the race.

He didn't say anything about his suspicions, but when the two men were seated in the shell and were well out into the deep water he leaned over to his mate and said:

"Look here, you blooming cutthroat! You've got to swim, drown or win this race! You know me!" He won.

Would Bequeath Her Ears.

Harriet Martineau displayed originality in the provisions she made at one time for the disposal of her remains. James Payn relates that, having consulted Toynbee, the distinguished aurist, with regard to her deafness, "she was so pleased with the interest he took in her case that she resolved to leave him, by testamentary bequest her ears. She announced this intention in the presence of her medical man, Mr. Shepherd, who to my infinite amazement observed: 'But, my dear madam, you can't do that. It will make your other legacy worthless.' The fact was, in the interest of science, Miss Martineau had already left her head to the Phrenological society. I asked the doctor how he came to know that. 'Oh,' he said, 'she told me so herself. She has left £10 in her codicil to me for cutting it off.'" The doctor, however, died before his patient, and the Phrenological society never received the legacy of her head.—London Chronicle.

A Cheerful Letter.

The following was sent by a countryman to his son in college not many years ago:

My Dear Son—I write to send you two pair of old breeches, that you may have a new coat made of them; also some new socks, which your mother knit by cutting down some of mine. Your mother sends you $10 without my knowledge, and for fear you will not spend it wisely I have kept back half and only send five. Your mother and I are well, except your sister Annie has got the measles, which we think would spread among other girls if Tom had not had them before, and he is the only one left. I hope you are well and will do honor to my teachings. If you do not you are an ass, and your mother and myself are your affectionate parents.

—Nantucket Inquirer and Mirror.

A Nice Bird.

"Do you like a nice bird?" asked the host as they sat down to the table.

"Oh, yes!" responded the guest immediately and enthusiastically.

"You ought to call on my sister," explained the other. "She's got one of the finest canaries you ever saw. Well, what kind of a sandwich do you think you can eat?"—London Telegraph.

An Arbitrary Classification.

"So you think every patriot has more or less clearly defined ambition to hold public office?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "As a rule, patriots may be divided into two classes—the appointed and the disappointed."—Washington Star.

Badly Expressed.

"For heaven's sake, be careful with that rifle, man!" exclaimed a musketry instructor. "You just missed me that time."

"Did I, sergeant? I'm awfully sorry!" responded the indifferent marksman.—

It Quieted Mother.

The house was all paid for. Mother was exultant, jubilant, reiterative. "Say, mother," burst out six-year-old Paul eagerly, "print it on your cards, mother, print it on your cards!"—Delineator.

The Usual Thing.

"What's the proper thing at a wedding?"

"Wish the pair happiness and tell everybody else there's no earthly chance for it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

There is a paradox in pride—it makes some men ridiculous, but prevents others from becoming so.—Colton.

Canadian National Exhibition

TORONTO

HORSES AT THE FAIR.

Everything Points to an Immense Exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Horse entries are coming in so fast at the office of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, that the success of that department promises to be more pronounced than ever before.

The prizes given for speeding in the ring aggregate $4,000, and that in itself is a guarantee that the fastest harness horses in Canada will again be found in the races on the afternoon of August 30th and 31st and Sept. 1st and 2nd.

In Clydesdales everything points to an entry that will exceed last year's show, when they were there in numbers and quality that cannot be equalled anywhere on the continent. Hackneys are growing better year by year and the show of them is excellent, while Toronto is a centre for hunters and jumpers of the very highest class; the competitions in this line excite almost world-wide interest.

In harness horses there is always a great exhibit, while the pony classes have been enlarged and extended in keeping with the growing popularity of the children's pets.

TREASURES IN ART.

Will be a Feature of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

Famous pictures from the leading art galleries of Europe will again be a feature of the Canadian National Exhibition. The permanent agent cables that he has secured many of the leading pictures of the year, and that the list is coming by mail. In addition to this there will be an exhibit of art photography by the leading art photographers of England, Germany, France and Italy, and a graphic art exhibit by the leading illustrators of New York, including such men as Frederick Remington, Maxfield Parish and Charles Dana Gibson.

GOODS WHILE YOU WAIT.

Process of manufacture an Interesting feature of Canadian National Exhibition.

The process of manufacture department is always one of the most interesting features of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and this year it promises to be far more extensive than ever before. In all there will be about forty industries at work showing just how shoes, silk, cotton goods, prints, and many other of the articles you use every day are made. It is impossible here to name more than a few of the exhibitors, but here are some well worth looking up.

The United Shoe Manufacturing Co., Montreal, manufacturing ladies' and gents' boots and shoes, showing the different stages from the cutting out of the leather to the finished shoe.

Merchants Rubber Co., of Berlin, demonstrating the manufacture of rubber shoes, showing every process from the crude rubber to the finished boot.

Davis & Henderson, manufacturing and printing envelopes.

The Canadian Silk Co. weaving silk and badges with photos on them.

Gundy, Clapperton, cutting glass, showing the process in which the fine quality of cut glass is produced.

Shredded Wheat, showing process in which their products are prepared and made portable and palatable.

Dominion Textile Co., Montreal, showing process of manufacture of fine cotton goods, prints, etc.

SHEEP AND SWINE.

Sheep and swine come in for a large share of attention at the Canadia Natinoal Exhibition. The best in York shires, Berkshires and Tamworths fill the pig pens at the big Fair, while in the sheep pens are Shropshires, Cotswolds, Leicesters, Oxford Downs of the first quality. All the best that Canada and the United States can produce are found in this department. That the exhibit is a large one is shown by the fact that permanent pens have been built on the grounds for 700 sheep and 600 pigs. Then there is poultry and pet stock enough to fill a building 220 ft. by 60 ft.

The Department of Agriculture is putting on a display of wholesome and diseased meats at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, and will send two lecturers from Ottawa to tell the people how to discern the good from diseased meats. This should be of interest to cattle men, as well as meat producers.

EXPLODING SUBMARINE MINES.

Ships to be blown up on the Waterfront at Exhibition Grounds.

The submarine mine which plays such an important part in naval warfare will be part of the military display at the Canadian National Exhibition. These hidden guardians of every port in war time will be laid in front of the Exhibition grounds and every day at 5 o'clock a ship will be blown up by one of them. There is nothing more spectacular than what happens to a ship when it runs on to one of these hidden dangers of the deep.

EXHIBIT,

of specially selected plants and seed taken from seed plots of members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, Toronto Industrial Exhibition, Aug. 30 to Sept. 13, and Canada Central Exhibition, Ottawa, Sept. 10 to 18 inclusive. With a view to giving greater publicity to the work which is being done in Canada by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association in the improving of cultivated plants, and in order that a medium may be provided through which the officers of the Association may come in touch with a greater number of those who are specially interested in the problem of crop improvement, arrangements have been made to place a special educational exhibit of selected plants and seed in the Agricultural building of each of the above mentioned Fairs. The exhibit will be in charge of the Secretary or some other officer qualified to discuss the general work of the Association. It is to be hoped that a large number will take advantage of this opportunity to learn more of this important movement.—L. H. NEWMAN, Sec. C.S.G.A.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITS.

All the provinces will be in line with exhibits in the Provinces building at Canadian National Exhibition this year. Each Provincial Government is at work on a display that will do justice to its territory, and the gold and fruit of British Columbia, the golden grain of the prairies from Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba, the various products and minerals of Ontario, right down to the best coal and farm products of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, will form one of the many features that makes the Fair truly National in character.

CORPS VS. CORPS.

Real Live Competitions in the Military Competitions at the Canadian National.

The Military Display and Tournament at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, will have more features of real interest this year than anything of the kind previously attempted in Canada. In such competitions as the Victoria Cross and wrestling on horseback, corps will be arrayed against corps; the Royal Canadian Dragoons stationed at Toronto, against the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery stationed at Kingston. The rivalry between these corps is very keen, so much so that the men are also anxious to mix things up a bit with a single stick in the Balaclava Melee, if the permission of the officers can be obtained. However, the officers have not yet decided. Some think a few hard knocks would not hurt the men, while others are inclined to think that the competition would resolve itself into something too much like actual warfare.

COMEDY IN FIREWORKS.

Some Funny Things Pictured in Lines of Fire.

"The Battle of the North Sea" and "The Siege of Kandahar" are the features but by no means the whole of the fireworks display at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. In addition there are 62 distinct numbers on the fireworks programme and they include everything that can be imagined in pyrotechnics. And in these numbers comedy has its place. For instance a Punch and Judy show is one of the numbers. Another number pictures a boy fishing. A big policeman comes along and orders him away. Another boy seeing this brings on a giant firecracker, sets it behind the policeman and fires it off—result a big policeman kicking on the ground and boys disappearing around the corner.

IMMENSE BANKS OF FLOWERS.

The decorative floral display will again be a feature of the Floriculture department of the Canadian National Exhibition. These immense banks of flowers which cover 500 square feet of floor space make one of the beauty spots of the entire Fair. The premiums for this exhibit alone total $1,110.00, a sum that guarantees plenty of competitors.

DAIRY EDUCATION.

Proper Care of Milk to be Demonstrated at the Canadian National.

The educational features in connection with the Dairy department of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, promise, to be of unusual interest this year, not only to farmers, but to consumers of milk in cities and towns as well. The demonstration work and lectures in the Dairy amphitheatre will be under the immediate charge of Mr. Geo. A. Putnam, director of dairy instructions for the Province, and the Dominion Department will also furnish a man to give some definite instruction along the cow-testing line.

The proper care and handling of milk will be one of the subjects dealt with, and it will be accompanied by demonstrations of milk testing as well as charts showing the value of cow-testing associations.

The Model Military Camp at the Canadian National Exhibition will be fitted with hospital tents for men and women and all casualties on the Exhibition grounds will be handled by the Army Medical Corps which will form part of the permanent corps in the Model Militia Camp.

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

scarcely known in the high pressure of a more crowded and artificial existence. If these be once roused they may be violent, but never brutal; the grace of an older and more finished civilization keeps them always from the coarse rages of younger nations, and the refinement of a frugal people who eat but little and drink not at all as those accustomed to the alcohol-consuming habits of certain enterprising nations understand it, keeps their eyes clear, their instincts healthy, and their manners winning. But it is not an active life as we understand activity. Di Loria had seen his friends grow up about him, gallant young fellows who had been his boon companions in ardent boyhood, and saw most of them, one by one, drift down a narrow river to a tideless sea. It is so easy in that lotos-eating land to lie careless at the mercy of a balmy wind and a caressing wave. But that he did not mean should be his fate. He would not yield to the soft enticements of a region which had been revenged on its rude and fierce barbarian conquerors by subduing them to inertness with its lulling witchery. And there had been some in his circle who had withstood the seductions of this realm of the irens, despite those urgings of the local temperament which so powerfully aid the lazy fascinations of the environment. It was not a very large company, but it was a very choice one. He would enroll himself in its ranks.

But a definite plan of life is sometimes the one thing that eludes the grasp that holds all else. Di Loria was a man of culture, but he had no special creative bent. He did not consider that he had a vocation for active politics, despite his passionate devotion to the welfare of his country and his hereditary sympathies were curiously divided, though his convictions were single in their purpose. His father's family had been strong churchmen, fervent, devout, arrogant warriors and loyal subjects of the local sovereign, whose whole attitude to the state at large Di Loria detested and condemned, perhaps all the more bitterly because it was impossible for him to escape from an admiration for the uncompromising character and dignity of the personal virtues which had distingushed them among the ease-loving and versatile Neapolitans. He was not without pride in and devotion to the Di Loria name, though he was too modern to have any illusions concerning its imperishable qualities, and he confessed to a more than equal allegiance to his mother's house. These people had been Italianissimi, some passionate admirers of Garibaldi and the House of Savoy, others adherents of the extreme wing of the Mazzinists. They were a noble race of fearless and devoted patriots, who had suffered much in the past, and had not lived to see the crowning of some of their hopes save in the persons of that younger generation who accepted their heritage of liberal beliefs with loyal enthusiasm. Di Loria's whole heart turned to these kinsmen with love and sympathy, but a certain reverential quality in his nature, blent with what was almost an exaggeration of the gentleness of the Italian temper in ordinary affairs, kept him silent when they passed from the righteous protest against the attempt to regain priestly dominance, in which he heartily joined, to the gay scoff and bitter sneer at all forms of religious faith. He shared in the common unbeliefs of the day, having a taste for speculative philosophy, influenced of course by the curious Neapolitan predilection for Hegel, and kept abreast of the times with the sad wisdom of the moderns, but it was not in this young nobleman to approach any question in a spirit of bitterness, or advocate the wholesale condemnation and demolition of any system that could show a vestige of good in it; a disposition not common among his countrymen, who, slow to rouse, by virtue of their great patience, are implacable partisans, a cause once perceived and, in any measure, espoused. Eager as he was when a question of material and needed improvement was raised, he would temporize in some matters to the disgust of the friends whose admiration and despair he was.

"That which is rotten will fall in upon itself," he would say with, it must be confessed, a touch of the easy local fatalism.

"It has fallen, practically. Come and clear away the rubbish!" these more positive ones would cry.

"I will come, yes, and break images with the rest, but I am but a weeping iconoclast at best," he would answer. "I shall always enrage you by begging that for the present you leave the Cross in the midst untouched for the sake of those who would never see the blue heaven but for those black lines across it, poverini."

"You are 'fra Marco e Todaro,'" said a young Venetian lightly, though betraying a not of irrepressible affection, "neither one thing or the other."

"Perhaps I am like that ass between the two bundles of hay of the English proverb, which is the equivalent for yours of Venice, Dino mio," said Di Loria with rather a melancholy smile.

"Per Bacco, veriamente. But you do not want the hay for yourself in either case, caro."

"Perhaps not. I do not know."

"You are the best agnostic I have ever seen," said another, who was possessed by more than the usual Italian admiration for things English, and especially for modern English terms of definition.

"It is well to be quite uncertain of uncertainties."

"Why then the Cross?"

"Have you anything more certain to offer then, my friend?"

"Ah, have I not? The religion of humanity, the commonwealth of intellect—"

"That goes well, Carlo, for you, for Dino, for me even, but for the mass of Italians, the contadini for instance, how for them?"

"I have great faith in the people," said Carlo, who was of a very sanguine disposition. "But if the new light blind them, why it must. Truth is truth.'

"Alas, it is always they who must be blinded, always they who must bear the strain of all new adjustment," said Di Loria sadly.

'And why not—if it be so, which I do not admit. Who else shall take the burden. You do not order that racers shall draw the heavy loads."

'Has the world had much of benefit from racers, amico, and where would it be without the patient draught horses?"

"Well, it is the draught horses who are used for the world, not the world which was made for the draught-horses," said Carlo, who was a red republican and fiery democrat in his public utterances, and an unalterable though unconscious aristocrat in his secret heart.

Di Loria liked them, all these ar-

SUCCESSORS OF ISRAEL

THE SPIRITUAL AND NATURAL BRANCHES OF CHOSEN.

If Ye Be Christ's Then Are Ye Abraham's Seed and Heirs (Galatians iii, 29) Is Text Taken by Pastor Charles T. Russell—Destruction of Wicked Has Been Perverted to Mean Their Everlasting Torture.

Watertown, N.Y., Aug. 29.—The issues of life, death and a hereafter are all in the hand or power of the Lord. He took counsel of none of us, and holds himself fully responsible, declaring that all of his purposes shall be accomplished, and that his Word that has gone forth shall not return to him void, but shall accomplish that which he pleases (Isaiah lv, 10, 11).

He owed us nothing in the beginning, and will be under no obligations to us in the end. We are his debtors for all that is profitable or enjoyable. He is a rich King and Father and is able and willing to do exceedingly abundantly for us, his creatures—more than we could have asked or thought.

But he has his own way for doing this, which, in the end, will be seen to be the best way. "His ways are in clouds and darkness," writes the prophet; and the poet answers, yes,

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

Eternal life is "the gift of God" for all of his creatures who will take it on his terms; and for all others he declares, "The wages of sin is death"—the blotting out of life. And who cannot see that this arrangement to destroy all who will not use life in accord with the Divine will, is really a mercy? To perpetuate life opposed to his will and law of righteousness would be a disgrace to God and an injury to the holy as well as to the unholy. God gave our race life in Adam, but, as he had foreseen, they lost it by disobedience and came under the penalty—death. As he purposed before the foundation of the world, he in due time sent his Son to be "The Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." As such Jesus died, "the just for the unjust," "tasting death for every man" (Hebrews ii, 9). This glorious purpose God set forth to Father Abraham in his oath-bound covenant, of which the Apostle writes in Hebrews vi, 13-20.

The context shows distinctly that the Apostles and the early Church drew comfort from the Oath-Bound Covenant, and clearly implies that this same comfort belongs to every true Christian down to the end of this age—to every member of the Body of Christ. The Apostle's words imply that God's promise and oath were intended more for us than for Abraham—more for our comfort than for his.

Note the Apostles' words: "That by two immutable things (two unalterable things), in which it was impossible for God to lie, we (the Gospel Church) might have a strong consolation, (we) who have fled for refuge (to Christ), to lay hold upon the hope set before us."

Doubtless Abraham and all of his family, Israel after the flesh, drew a certain amount of blessing and encouragement from this Covenant or promise and the oath of the Almighty, which doubly sealed it, which gave double assurance of its certainty of accomplishment; but the Apostle intimates in the words quoted, that God's special design in giving that Covenant and in binding it solemnly with an oath, was to encourage Spiritual Israel—to give us a firm foundation for faith.

God well knew that, although 3,000 years from his own standpoint would be but a brief space, "as a watch in the night," nevertheless to us the time would appear long, and the strain upon faith would be severe; hence the positive statement and the still more deliberate oath that bound it. We cannot but wonder at such condescension upon the part of the great Creator—that he would stoop to his fallen creatures and, above all, that he should condescend to give his oath on the subject.

Our Lord Jesus was the great heir of the Abrahamic promise, and the faithful of his consecrated people of this Gospel Age are declared to be his joint-heirs in that promise, which is not yet fulfilled. For its fulfillment, not only the Church is waiting, as the Bride or fellow-members of the Body of Christ, to be participants with the Lord in the glories implied in the promise, but additionally, the whole creation (the entire human family) is groaning and travailing in pain together waiting for the great fulfillment of that oath-bound promise or covenant (Romans viii, 19-23).

Those who follow the Apostle's argument and realize that we as Christians are still waiting for the fulfillment of this promise, will be anxious to know what are the terms of this Covenant which is the hope of the world, the hope of the Church, and the object of so much solicitude and care on the part of God, in that he would promise and then back his word with an oath. We answer that every Christian should know what this promise is, since it lies at the very foundation of every Christian hope.

How can this hope be an anchor to our soul in all the storms and trials and difficulties of life, in all the opposition of the world, the flesh and the Adversary, if we do not know what the hope is, if we have not even recognized the promise upon which this hope is based?

This is the pitiable condition of many of God's true children; for they are merely babes in Christ, using the milk of the Word. They have need of the strong meat of God's promises, as the Apostle speaks of it, that they may be "strong in the Lord and the power of his might;" that they might have on the whole armor of God—helmet, breastplate, sandals, sword and shield—and be able to quench the fiery darts of the Wicked One—able also to help the weaker ones in this day when the Adversary is assaulting the Word of God, the citadel of the truth, with various infidel arguments in the hands and mouths of those who profess to be ministers of the Word.

Need I quote the promise, the one so repeatedly referred to in the apostolic writings, the one which is the basis or anchorage for our souls?

The Apostle Paul referred to this very promise, declaring that the Seed of Abraham mentioned therein is Christ. All Christians agree to this, although they have not distinctly and properly associated it with the declarations of the promise. But the Apostle makes clear to us that in saying that Christ is the Seed of Abraham, he had in mind not only the Lord Jesus as the Head of the Body, the Head of the Christ, but also the over-coming saints of this Gospel Age as the Body of Christ. This he distinctly states in many places, for instance, Galatians iii, 16-29. Here he declares the matter expressly, saying: "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the promise."

"The Seed of Abraham" is the Gospel Church, with her Head, the Lord Jesus; as the Apostle states again, saying: "We, brethren, as Isaac was (typified by Isaac), are the children of promise" (Galatians iv, 28). It follows that the Seed of Abraham mentioned in the promise is not complete and will not be until the full close of this Gospel Age—the harvest time of which we believe we are now in.

But what a wonderful thought is involved in this plain interpretation of the Divine Word! It is big with hope for Spiritual Israel, the Spiritual Seed, and no less, it means a blessing for the natural seed, fleshly Israel, and ultimately the millennial blessings to all the families of the earth. Let us examine these three hopes: The hopes for these three classes centre in this great Oath-Bound Covenant. Let us thus obtain what the Apostle tells us was the Lord's intention for us, namely, strong consolation—strong encouragement.

All through the prophecies the Lord foretold the sufferings of Christ and the glories that should follow; nevertheless the glories to follow have been granted much more space in the Divine Revelation than the sufferings of the present time. The implication suggested by the Apostle is that when the glories of the future shall be realized, the trials and sufferings and difficulties of the present time will be found not worthy to be compared; but those glories and blessings have been veiled from our mental vision, and instead a great pall hangs over the future in the minds of many of the Lord's people.

Many of us have learned to distort the simple language of God's Word in such a manner as to cause us anguish and distress. For instance, "destroy," "perish," "die," "second death," "everlasting destruction," etc., terms used by the Lord to represent the ultimate, complete annihilation of those who will not come into harmony with him after a full opportunity is granted them, are interpreted to mean the reverse of what they say—life, preservation in torture, etc.

It is high time, dear friends, that we should learn that God's Book is not the foundation of these horrible nightmares which have afflicted us, and which in the past hindered many of us from a proper love and reverence of our Creator. It is high time that we should take the explanation which the Apostle gives us of this matter and of all the errors which assail poor humanity respecting the future. He says: "The god of this world has blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the glorious light of the goodness of God, as it shines in the face of Jesus Christ our Lord, should shine into their hearts" (II. Corinthians iv, 4). We cannot here and now discuss this subject, but have provided in the hands of the ushers, some free pamphlets on "What Say the Scriptures About Hell?" Should the supply prove insufficient drop me a postal-card and I will cheerfully send from Brooklyn what will satisfy both your head and your heart.

Now, what hope and interest has the Church of Christ in this promise made to Abraham? To us belongs the very cream of the promise, "the riches of God's grace." The promise implies the greatness of the Seed of Abraham, which Seed is Christ and the overcoming Church. This greatness is so wonderful as to be almost beyond human comprehension. The overcomers of this Gospel Age who "make their calling and election sure" in Christ, are to be joint-heirs with him in the glorious Millennial Kingdom which is to be God's agency or channel for bringing about the promised blessings—the blessings of all the families of the earth.

The great blessings of forgiveness of sins which are past, and even the blessing of being awakened from the sleep of death, would profit mankind but little, if the arrangements of that future time—the Millennial Age—were not on such a scale as to permit a thorough recovery from present mental, moral and physical weaknesses. Hence we are rejoiced to learn that in that time Satan will be bound, every evil influence and every unfavorable condition will be brought under restraint, and the favor of God through the knowledge of God will be turned upon the people—"The knowledge of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep." Blessings, aye, favor upon favor, blessing upon blessing, is the Lord's arrangement and provision! All shall know him from the least unto the greatest, and none shall need to say to his neighbor or his brother, "Know thou the Lord?" (Isaiah xi, 9; Jeremiah xxxi, 34).

The prophets spoke repeatedly of these blessings due to the world in the future. Mark how Joel tells that, as during this Gospel Age, the Lord pours out his spirit upon his servants and hand-maidens, so after these days, in the Millennial Age, he will pour out his spirit upon all flesh. There will be world-wide blessing through the knowledge of the Truth. Mark how Moses, the prophet, spoke of these coming blessings, and told how God would raise up a greater Lawgiver than himself, a greater Teacher, a better Mediator, and, under the better Covenant of the Lord, would bring blessings world-wide! Mark again how he represents the atonement for the sins of the whole world in the Atonement Day sacrificial arrangements! Mark again how he typifically foretold the blessings of the Millennial Age, representing it in Israel's "Year of Jubilee," in which every man went free and every possession was returned to its original ownership, thus representing the blessings of the future, man's release from the servitude of sin and Satan, and the return to him of all that was lost through Adam. Isaiah, Jeremiah, Hosea, Micah, have spoken of these coming times, so that the Apostle Peter, pointing to the future, could truthfully declare that the coming times of restitution of all things have been spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. (Acts iii, 19-21).

The second class to be blessed under this Abrahamic Covenant is fleshly Israel. We are not forgetting that the Jews were a stiff-necked and rebellious people; that they slew the prophets and stoned the Lord's ministers and caused the crucifixion of our Redeemer. Nevertheless, the Scriptures clearly hold forth that after they have had a period of chastisement, which they have been undergoing as a nation since our Lord's crucifixion, and after Spiritual Israel shall have been glorified in the Kingdom, then a blessing from the Lord will come upon natural Israel: they shall be saved or recovered from their blindness, and, as the Prophet declares, they shall look upon him whom they have pierced and shall mourn for him—because the eyes of their understanding shall be opened. We rejoice, too, that the promise is clear and distinct that the Lord will pour upon them the "spirit of prayer and of supplication" (Zechariah xii, 10). See also Romans xi, 25-23.

But if God is to have mercy upon the natural Israelite, whom he declares to have been stiff-necked and hard-hearted and rebellious, would it surprise us that the Divine, benevolent intention should be to bless others than the Jews—others who had not in the past the favors and privileges of this favored nation, and whose course, therefore, was less in opposition to the light? It should not surprise us. And so we find in this great Oath-Bound Covenant a blessing for all nations—all peoples.

"We make God's love too narrow
By false standards of our own."

Do not misapprehend us. We are not teaching that heathen and imbeciles and the unregenerate in general shall be taken to heaven, where they would be utterly out of harmony with their surroundings and require to be converted and to be taught. Such an inconsistent view we leave to those who are now claiming that the heathen will be saved in their ignorance. We stand by the Word of God that there is no present salvation without faith in Christ Jesus, and that the heathen and the imbeciles have neither part nor lot in the salvation of the present time. We stand by the Scriptures which say that salvation at the present time is only for the little flock, who, through much tribulation, shall enter the Kingdom. We stand by the Scriptures which say that this Kingdom class now being developed is the Seed of Abraham under the Lord, their Head, their Elder Brother, the Bridegroom.

The period in which opportunity will be granted to man is in the Scriptures termed the Day of Judgment—a thousand-year day, the Millennial Day. It will be a day of trial, a day of testing, a day of proving the world to see whether, with a full knowledge of God and of righteousness, which he requires, they will choose righteousness in preference to sin, choose life in preference to the Second Death.

Thank God for that wonderful judgment, the trial day for the world, secured for all through the precious blood of Christ. "When the judgments of the Lord are abroad in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness" (Isaiah xxvi, 9).

First English Prima Donna.

The distinguished vocalist, Madame Kirkby Lunn, who recently sang eight songs to a delighted audience of about one hundred and eighty invalid men and women at the Royal Hospital for Incurables, Putney Heath, has many claims to distinction. She was the first artiste of British origin and trained in England to achieve a prominent position at Covent Garden in the Grand Season, and at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. Madame Kirkby, who is a native of Manchester, and was trained under Signor Visetti at the Royal College of Music, tells the story of the little girl who was very cowardly. Her father finding that sympathy only increased this unfortunate tendency, decided to have a serious talk with his little daughter on the subject of foolish fears. "Papa," she said, at the close of his lecture, "when you see a cow, ain't you 'fraid?" "No, certainly not, Evelyn." "When you see a dog, ain't you 'fraid?" "No," with emphasis. "Ain't you 'fraid when it thunders?" "No," with loud laughter. "Oh, you silly child!" "Papa," said Evelyn, solemnly, 'is it true that you ain't 'fraid of nothin' in the world but mamma?"

"Jarvey" and the "Hard Man."

In a witty after-dinner speech, Lord O'Brien, who has just kept his sixty-seventh birthday, once related a story against himself. When he was Attorney-General he hired a Hackney car at Sligo, for a drive, after a wearisome day in court. He mounted the car beside the driver, and the "jarvey," believing the Attorney-General to be inside the vehicle, remarked: "That's a hard man inside." "Yes," said Lord O'Brien, "I believe he is a man with an indifferent reputation." At the journey's end the "jarvey" received a gold coin from his lordship. The surprised and delighted man, looking first at the coin and then at the Attorney-General, said: "Well, after all, the 'divil' isn't as black as he's painted."

Navy of France To be Formed

NEW MINISTER TO SWEEP AWAY ABUSES AND RESTORE FIGHTING STRENGTH OF WARSHIPS.

ADMIRAL DE LAPREYRERE.

Paris, Aug. 28.— Admiral Boue de Lapreyrere, the new Minister of Marine, is engaged in a complete reorganization of the French navy.

In an interview with a representative of the Matin he declared that the number of squadrons in the new navy would depend on the number of battleships available, but provision was made for a minimum of five squadrons of four vessels each.

Discussing the question of armored cruisers the admiral declared that he was not in favor of this type of warship.

"Our vessels ought to be capable of confronting any battleship," explained the admiral. "I do not think that speed can compensate for disproportion in armament and protection. If an effort has to be made, let it be complete.

"Concerning torpedo boat destroyers and submarines, I consider that they are indispensable for the protection of our coasts. They are not intended to accompany the squadrons. From this they are debarred by their weak tonnage. In short, their function is to be vessels of offensive defence."

The new Minister has resolved to strike off all obsolete vessels, among which are the Courbet, Formidable, Sfax and Elan, and as for "sailors who are to be found everywhere except on board their ships," a merciless campaign is to be undertaken against them.

$1,500 Blaze On The River's Bank Last Night

BELIEVED TO BE INCENDIARY IN ITS ORIGIN — CITY HOTEL STABLES AND BUILDINGS DESTROYED—FIREMEN DID SPLENDID WORK.

At a few minutes after 8 o'clock last night fire was discovered in a barn in rear of the City Hotel, and before the blaze was extinguished considerable damage was done. The barn where the fire originated was destroyed, also a hen house and shed adjoining, and a barn and storehouse near by owned by Mr. B. Sills.

Other buildings in close proximity to the fire were ignited by sparks, but by active work on the part of the fire brigade a more disastrous conflagration was averted.

How the fire originated is a mystery, but it had every appearance of being incendiary.

Mr. John Murphy, hostler at the hotel, was about the barn shortly after 7 o'clock, and there was no sign of fire. He fastened the place up for the night. The fire was first noticed by parties walking along Coleman st., directly opposite the premises and across the river. It was a small blaze then and was at the southwest corner of the building, at the river's edge. When the alarm was sounded and the firemen arrived upon the scene the barn was a mass of flames and the heat was intense. Two horses and buggies, which were in the blazing building, were with some difficulty taken out and removed to a place of safety.

Mr. G. W. Williams, who conducts the hotel, lost a valuable set of new harness and some other articles stored therein, besides some grain and hay. His loss will probably be about $150; no insurance.

The burned buildings in connection with the hotel were the property of Dr. Potts, of Stirling. They were insured, but for what amount could not be ascertained. The loss will probably be about $1500.

Mr. Sills had no insurance upon his barn and storehouse. A delivery wagon and some other articles were taken out, but the greater portion of the contents, including about two tons of hay, were burned.

Mr. Cook, a baker, had a considerable quantity of lumber stored in the building which was burned. He had no insurance.

Stables near by, occupied by Mr. Wm. Thompson, caught fire, but the blaze was extinguished before any damage of moment was sustained.

The fire brigade are certainly to be congratulated upon the manner in which they performed their duties, they doing excellent work in confining the fire to a comparatively small area.

GOLDEN GLOW GLEAMED AT BRIEGEL--MOON NUPTIALS.

PRETTY HOUSE WEDDING THIS MORNING — BRIDE ONE OF CITY'S MOST POPULAR VOCALISTS.

One of the prettiest weddings ever celebrated in this city took place at 11 o'clock this morning, at the residence of Mr. J. H. Moon, Albert St., when his daughter, Miss Flossie, became the bride of Mr. Hermann Frederick Briegel, of Montreal. It was a Golden Glow wedding, the house being beautifully decorated with Golden Glow.

The bride, one of the most charming young ladies and popular vocalists of this city, was attired in a gown of white satin with chiffon yoke and sleeves, trimmed with rose point and seed pearls. She wore as her only ornament a necklace of ovalines and pearls, the gift of the groom.

Miss Aileen McKeown was bridesmaid, she being handsomely gowned in white mulle, with white hat and yellow trimmings and carried Golden Glow.

Mr. Walter O. Briegel, of Peterboro, brother of the groom, was best man.

Miss Vera Riggs played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, and the bride was given away by her father.

Rev. J. P. Wilson, of Lindsay, a former pastor of Bridge St. Church, performed the ceremony.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a pearl pendant, and to the groomsman he gave a pearl pin.

The bride's going away costume was of old gold rajah, with hat of same shade, trimmed with wisteria.

The wedding presents were many and beautiful, including a sterling silver pudding dish, the gift of the Baptist choir, of which organization the bride was soloist for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Briegel left on the 1.45 train for the west, and, after a few weeks in the mountains, will take up their residence in Westmount, Montreal. The best wishes of a host of friends in this city will follow them.

Drove off With Another Man's Team and Wagon.

On Saturday afternoon Mr. Wm. Glenn, of this city, drove his team and vehicle under a shed in rear of the Kyle House. Later, when he went after his team, it was gone and there was no trace of the outfit. The team and wagon were afterwards found at the Village of Canifton, in possession of Wm. J. Montgomery, a yeoman of Thurlow township. The latter took the team in mistake for his own conveyance. Montgomery was considerably under the influence of liquor. He was placed under arrest, and was this morning charged before the Magistrate with appropriating to his own use a team of horses and outfit belonging to someone else. After some evidence had been taken Montgomery promised to pay all costs in the matter and was allowed to go, but not before the Magistrate had given him some wholesome advice.

CANADA'S FAMOUS MEN AND WOMEN

Gladly Testify to the Great Value of "Fruit-a-tives."

Hon. Senator Costigan (member of the Cabinets of five Premiers of Canada), says:—"Fruit-a-tives is the only medicine I ever took that did me any good for Constipation."

Mrs. J. R. Flock (widow of one of the most prominent physicians in London), writes:—"I was a constant martyr to Stomach Weakness all my life and no physician could cure me, but Fruit-a-tives gave me entire relief and I strongly recommend this medicine."

Mr. James Dingwall (Superintendent of St. Andrew's Sunday School in Williamstown, Ont., for nine years) states: "I am now over eighty years old, and I can strongly recommend Fruit-a-tives for Bladder and Kidney Trouble and Chronic Constipation."

Mr. H. Marcheasault (High Constable of Quebec), testifies:—"I suffered for ten years with Severe Pain in the Back. Nothing did me any good until I tried Fruit-a-tives."

Mr. W. J. McComb (the leading merchant of Trenton, Ont.), writes:—"I was a martyr to Headaches—consulted doctors — wore glasses — without the slightest relief. Then I took Fruit-a-tives and this remedy cured me."

This is the kind of evidence that convinces. Dealers everywhere have "Fruit-a-tives." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Sent postpaid on receipt of price. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WILL NOT KNOCK.

Not Here to Roast Home Government, Says Beresford.

Toronto, Aug. 30.—Geo. H. Gooderham's yacht, Oriole II., which conveyed Lord Beresford to Niagara, leaving Saturday afternoon soon after the distinguished visitors arrival from Montreal, anchored off the R.C.Y.C. quarters at the island about 9 o'clock last night. Those on board were the admiral, his secretary, Hon. Dudley Carlton, Geo. H. Gooderham, W. K. George and Mark Irish. The party did not land, but Commodore Marlatt and other prominent club members visited the yacht.

The admiral, so it is said, justified his reputation as a genial, whole-souled sailor with no mean gifts as a raconteur. He was delighted with the lake voyage, entering into the speed of the trip with a hearty zest.

The civic welcome to Admiral Sir Charles Beresford at the City Hall this afternoon will be of an informal character, and, as such, will probably appeal much more to the bluff "Condor Charlie" than would stiff and severe formality.

In conversation on Saturday at Montreal with Sir George Drummond, Lord Charles said:

"I am not here to attack my own Government. That would be bad taste. Neither would you appreciate it, but I do say that in the years past our naval questions were beyond politics, but now naval officers pander to politicians."

The admiral advocated the construction of cruisers, as against Dreadnoughts, to keep open the trade routes of the colonies.

Shooting Ends Row.

St. John, N.B., Aug. 30.—A shooting affray occurred yesterday afternoon in McDonald's camp, near Plaster Rock, on the line of the G.T.P., when Samuel Policy, an Italian boss, shot James Gorman, an Englishman, in the abdomen. Three doctors decided to operate with slight hopes of success.

The men, who had been drinking, got into an altercation and fought. Gorman got the better of the Italian, and the latter, retreating towards the bunk house, got a 32-calibre revolver and fired. Policy made no attempt to escape.

Cabby Finds Valuables.

Montreal, Aug. 30.—F. J. Gosselin, cattle dealer of Peterboro, a month ago was in Montreal and lost a valise containing bonds and papers worth $18,000. He took a drive round the city and says he was drugged, as when he woke up next morning he was in a strange room and his valise was missing.

The detectives, after a lot of hard work, discovered the cabman wanted. He proved to be an honest fellow, who was holding the bag intact, unaware of its value. Gosselin returned home yesterday very happy.

Sermon at Ball Game.

Minneapolis, Aug. 30.—A precedent in professional Sunday baseball was established yesterday by the holding of religious services as a prelude to the game between Minneapolis and Kansas City.

Labrador, according to a local tradition which the gleaners of folklore consider of much importance, is the land to which Cain was banished after the murder of Abel. That country, according to the legend, was cursed by God with perpetual silence on the day when it was granted to the first murderer. Certain it is that the whole region has been silent and desolate ever since it was first known to white men.

HUNDREDS DROWNED

Floods Sweep District Around Monterey, Mexico.

Four Days of Torrential Rains Swell River to Overflowing — Mackenzie and Mann's Property Is Badly Damaged — Dead Variously Estimated at From Four Hundred to One Thousand.

Monterey, Mexico, Aug. 30.—Several hundred lives lost by drowning, thousands homeless and a property loss of millions, is the result of a terrible flood which swept over this district between one and two o'clock Sunday morning.

The swollen Santa Catrina River, due to the continued fall of rain for the past 96 hours, swept everything before it and hardly a vestige is left of what was a few days ago, a conglomeration of small huts swarming with families belonging to the poorer classes.

The flood reached its crest between one and three o'clock Saturday morning. Many families were swept to death with hardly a chance for their lives.

Victims were swept from their homes, on the tops of which many had sought shelter.

The losses are estimated at from seven to twelve million dollars.

Monterey smelter, one of the largest in Mexico, suffered loss variously estimated at from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

The Monterey steel plant, the only plant of its kind in the republic, which cost $10,000,000, is reported to have been damaged to the extent of from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000.

The electric light and street railway system of Monterey, modern in every respect and constructed about three years ago by a Canadian company in which MacKenzie and Mann, Toronto, are heavily interested, was damaged to the extent of approximately $1,000,000.

The Monterey water and sewerage system suffered a loss estimated at $1,000,000 or more.

In addition is the loss resulting from annihilation of approximately 5,000 huts and some structures of more pretentious appearance.

Both the electric light and street railway systems and the waterworks and drainage systems were dominated by Canadian capitalists and their loss will be keenly felt.

Many vehicles yesterday were busy carrying the effects of residents to high ground. This is especially true of American families, many of whom reside at downtown hotels. The police, rural and soldiers played a prominent part Saturday night and yesterday, guarding and caring for the city.

There is fear that a food famine will soon come. Not a train has entered the city of Monterey either from the north or south for the last 72 hours.

While semi-official reports state that up to noon yesterday 400 bodies have been recovered, there has thus far been no attempt to bury the dead. They are being placed along the banks of the river on the higher ground where they await identification. The bodies are guarded by soldiers, who escort searcher for missing friends or relatives. It is thought some arrangement will be made to-day to inter the dead.

Automobile Race Fatal.

Brighton Beach, Aug. 30.—The record for the first nine hours of the 24-hour automobile race on the new aerodrome track was one driver killed, one very badly injured, another painfully burned and a policeman crippled, having had both legs smashed. The injuries resulted from three separate smash-ups.

Haunted and unnerved by the ever-recurring picture of the fatal disaster that she had witnessed only a few hours before, and while the scene was again vivid in her mind during her sleep, Miss Gertrude White, 20 years old, of No. 4 Manhattan street, rose from her bed and plunged through a third storey window. An hour later she died in the J. Hood Wright Hospital, muttering something about automobiles.

Strike Situation Tense.

Pittsburg, Aug. 30.—Redoubling their vigilance throughout the strike district of the Pressed Steel Co. at McKees Rocks, the Pennsylvania Rocks, the Pennsylvania state troops are taking every precaution to prevent a recurrence of rioting and bloodshed. Admittedly the situation is extremely tense. Wholesale desertions of imported workmen and subsequently stories told by the men of alleged brutality accorded them inside the plant has served to create a decidedly unfavorable impression and resentment among strikers and their sympathizers.

Cards, threatening death, are being received through the mails by minor officers of the company.

Celebrate Mass During Attack.

Melilla, Morocco, Aug. 30.—A solemn requiem mass for the repose of the souls of the large number of Spanish officers and men killed in the sanguinary battle with the Moors July 27 was dramatically celebrated yesterday morning. The altar was decorated with flowers and surrounded by four cannons, gatling guns and stacked rifles. At the moment of the elevation of the host the Moors opened a fierce fire from a distance and the guns of Fort Camelios roared a response.

Notwithstanding the attack, however, the religious ceremony was completed.

Stabbing at a Christening.

Montreal, Aug. 30.—Carvalle Cirbano, 118 St. Felix street, was stabbed last evening in the left breast by Antonio Malo, who had been drinking, and was making love to Cirbano's wife.

The quarrel arose at a formal gathering following a christening.

A NOVEL POLICEMAN.

Story About a Sagacious Dog and His Master's Money.

One day a man laid a wager with his friend that if he were to hide a silver half dollar in the dusty road his dog would find it and bring it to him. The wager was accepted and the coin secreted. When the two had walked some distance from the hidden coin the owner called his dog, explained that he had lost something and ordered him to find it. The dog turned back, while the two friends continued their walk.

Meanwhile a traveler driving along the deserted road saw the silver piece shining through the dust and picked it up and put it in his coat pocket just as the dog came to the spot. The man re-entered his phaeton and drove to the inn, closely followed by the dog. The dog scented the coin in the man's pocket and made wild leaps at him to obtain it, but the man, supposing the animal had taken a fancy to him and wanted a master, gave the dog food and caresses and took him to his bedchamber for the night. No sooner had the man undressed than the dog seized the coat and made for the door. The man opened the door to see if any one was without, when the dog bounded through the hall and did not stop until, coat in mouth, he reached his master's house. The traveler followed and accused the dog of robbery. "My dog is a very faithful creature, and if he ran away with your coat it is because you have money in your pocket which does not belong there."

The traveler grew angry, but when the master explained the burial of the half dollar and the dog's desire to find it he understood and cheerfully gave up the money, saying as he patted the dog, "You are indeed a novel policeman."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"YOU KNOW."

You may say to me: "How's the boy?
  How's things?"
And I'll pause before punching you.
"Wee gates?" "What's doing?" and kindred flings
  Will cost but a curse or two.
You may even gurgle, "Oh, look who's 'ere!"
  Or, "You're quite a stranger, Gene."
But never again, sir, let me hear,
  "You know what I mean."

I'll stand for "How are they coming, hey?"
  And perhaps for "Well, what's new?"
I'm glad to know "It's a nasty day,"
  And "You're looking fine" is true,
But listen—I might say "listen here"
  If I wanted to waste your spleen—
These words mean a fight when I am near:
  "You know what I mean."

"What's yours?" is good in its proper place,
  And "What'll you have?" is too.
There's a sort of a crude and vulgar grace
  In a blithe "Here's looking at you!"
You may say "Have another" with naught to fear,
  But to "get my goat" just lean
With a knowing look toward me and leer,
  "You know what I mean."
—Chester Firkins in New York American.

EARL GREY GETS LOST

Governor-General Narrowly Escapes Death in Woods.

While Hunting Near Jervis Inlet on the West Coast, He Goes Out With Only His Dog For Companion and Wanders For Five and a Half Hours—Nearly Fell Over a Precipice—Clothes Were Badly Torn.

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 31.—Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, who returned here yesterday from Dawson and Skagway by the Government steamer Quadra, had a narrow escape from death when lost in the woods of Jervis Inlet for five and a half hours on Saturday last.

He was on a shooting expedition without companions, other than his dog.

He tells of nearly falling over a precipice in the darkness, before being rescued by a search party, headed Major Clark, his orderly, and Second Office Johnston of the Quadra, one of the many search parties sent into the woods after fires were built along the shore line to attract the attention of the lost governor.

Earl Grey was utterly exhausted when found and his clothing was badly torn.

His Excellency left the Quadra at 5.30 p.m. and went into the woods, where Lord Lascellas, the previous day, had killed a mountain goat and two deer. After penetrating some distance into the woods, he lost his way, and night came on.

When he failed to return for dinner there was intense excitement on the Quadra, and the steam whistle was kept blowing constantly, fires were built on the beach and search parties sent into the woods.

Meanwhile the earl clambered over fallen trees, fought his way through undergrowth and slid down rocks in the darkness, tearing his clothing to rags.

On one occasion he came to the edge of a precipice, feeling his way with an alpenstock, which he carried as well as a rifle. The alpenstock slipped from his hand clattered down a considerable distance below. Then he realized what a narrow escape from death he had. His dog was missing and he feared it had fallen over the precipice, but it turned up afterwards.

He turned back, and failing in the darkness to find his way, tired with his many struggles, sank down exhausted, after five and a half hours of unavailing effort.

He was so hungry and exhausted that he leaned against what he took to be a log, but it proved to be a shadow, and he tumbled into the undergrowth. At last he sank down on a flat rock to await daylight, and soon afterward saw the reflection of a fire. Then he fired his rifle and the shot was heard by a search party.

His Excellency is none the worse for his adventure.

Nothing Serious, Says Harriman.

New York, Aug. 31.—E. H. Harriman has dictated a statement for the press, saying:

"My treatment abroad reduced my strength and vitality and weakened my digestion. The most expert physicians in Europe advised to have an examination by surgeons, as a matter of precaution. This has been done very carefully by Doctors Brewer and Crile, in conjunction with Dr. Walter James and Dr. Lyle, and the whole result is that they find nothing serious, and renew the advice previously obtained that I should have rest and not see many people at one time.

"If there was or should be anything serious I will let the press know, and as I have never deceived them, I ask that the press now withdraw its representatives and rely on me."

Pulp Mills Suffer.

Ottawa, Aug. 31.—Because of the new U. S. tariff regulations practically prohibiting the import of print paper, the output of the J. R. Booth paper mills here will be decreased about 40 per cent., necessitating the laying off of 150 employes. The Eddy Co. market is principally in Canada.

The ruling of the United States Treasury Board against wood pulp and paper from Ontario and Quebec has given considerable concern to the Canadian Government, and will be the subject of further inquiry by them.

The export duties were put on by the Provincial Governments over which the Federal authorities have no control.

Mr. McNichol said it is the policy of his road to develop Canadian territory, and it is not their purpose to invade the United States.

Nixon and Thomas Usher sent in an alarm and then worked their way upstairs to the rescue of a 15-months-old baby of Mrs. Klein on the second floor. The firemen made quick work of the blaze. The loss includes $100 to building and $150 to contents, with $85 in bills additional. The cash was to pay some employes of Mrs. Green.

Foresees Great Tariff War.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Congressman James R. Mann, who worked for reduction of tariff on wood pulp and print paper in the House of Representatives, believes United States is on the verge of a great tariff war with Canada, and states that the Dominion has the position of vantage in the matter of the pulp and paper tariff. He believes the situation rests in the attitude of Quebec and Ontario toward the provision regarding pulp and paper.

The Inquest Is Adjourned.

Medical Testimony Is Withheld in Bollard Case

Harry Marks in Testifying at Inquiry at Peterboro Says His Friend Complained That He Had Been Unfairly Attacked—Bollard Had to be Carried Home After the Fight—Buried Yesterday Afternoon.

Peterboro, Aug. 31.—The holding back of the result of the post mortem on the body of Arthur Bollard, who died at Chemong Park on Friday, was the feature of the resumption of the inquest here last night. The cause of the young man's death is still unknown as far as the public is concerned.

Harry Marks of Toronto, a friend of Bollard's, who was holidaying with him at Chemong, stated that Bollard had complained to him that Fred Jopling had caught him unfair during the fight and forced him to quit in that way.

The evidence went to show that after the fight with Jopling on Monday night, Bollard was so weak that he had to be carried home. He was better on Tuesday and Wednesday, although according to the evidence of Marks he frequently complained of being "all in." On Thursday Dr. Scott of Peterboro was called and found Bollard sinking rapidly.

The inquest in the court room was attended by over four hundred. The crown was represented by Crown Attorney R. E. Wood. F. D. Kerr was present for the Bollard family, and D. O'Connell, K.C., for the Joplings. The witnesses were: Harry Jopling, brother of Fred, Charles Forsythe, a Bridgenorth young man; R. W. Harstone, a cottager at Chemong Park, and Marks, who was holidaying at the Bollard cottage.

Jopling's evidence was to the effect that Bollard had threatened to trim him and that the witness and his brother followed Bollard, Marks and Miss Ada Minns through the park when they were returning from the dance at the pavilion. Fred Jopling wanted an explanation from Bollard as to why he was going to beat his brother. Bollard turned and clinched with Harry, putting him down. Fred then interfered and fought with Bollard. During the contest Bollard was injured and could not continue. Afterwards two friendly "wrestles" took place between Bollard and Jopling, each getting a fall.

The evidence of Forsythe and Harstone did not differ much from that of Harry Jopling. Both witnessed the fight. When Bollard and Fred first clinched, Forsythe saw Jopling strike Bollard with his fist and the latter cried "Dirty." Marks told a story much the same as the other witnesses up to the point where Bollard cried "Let go" three times, and "Rotten" twice. He vomited and was so weak that he had to be carried most of the way home.

The inquest was adjourned till this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Fred Jopling, who developed blood poisoning as a result of the fight, is in a critical state.

Funeral at Toronto.

The Bishop of Birmingham has dropped his action against Canon Henson for preaching in a non-conformist chapel in defiance of his inhibition.

Grand Forks, Idaho, was destroyed by fire in an hour Sunday night. The bystanders looted the three burning saloons. Three hundred people are homeless and without food.

William Zimmer, a Lehigh Railroad detective, was shot and probably mortally hurt in a running fight with car thieves at Batavia, N.Y. Zimmer and two other detectives surprised seven burglars.

Out on the railroad track, two miles west of Ailsa Craig, Chief Constable Alex. Reith of Lucan fought a lone battle with Frank Beadore, an escaped lunatic from London Hospital for the Insane.

The airship Zeppelin III. was disabled while returning from Berlin to Friederichshafen. The forward propeller was broken, tearing two large holes in the envelope of the forward compartments. Two days will be required for repairs.

The Chicago-Record Herald says that the site of the new $1,500,000 opera house to be managed by Oscar Hammerstein of New York, has been selected in the midst of a cluster of millionaires' residences. The theatre will have a seating capacity of about 5,000.

Saw Hundreds Drown.

Mexico City, Aug. 31.—A conservative estimate of the damage wrought at Monterey by the flood places the dead at fourteen hundred and the property loss at $12,000,000. The river has now gone down.

Eighteen blocks of residences were destroyed, and 15,000 persons are homeless. The water mains are useless and the city is without drinking water and as it will be impossible to resume the train service for a week the city is threatened with a food famine. Ten thousand persons are being fed on bread, coffee and soup by the municipal authorities.

Many abode structures, soaked by the rain, are falling, with some loss of life.

The greatest loss occurred when the large buildings on the south side of the river commenced to crumble and fall. Many of the houses had from 100 to 200 people on their roofs and all disappeared in the flood. In one school building 90 women and children were drowned when the walls of the building collapsed. While two priests were blessing the women and children the walls fell. Thousands of people on the north bank were unable to render aid, for the Santa Catarina was half a mile wide and flowing 20 miles an hour.

President Diaz yesterday afternoon telegraphed $30,000 to Monterey. Vice-President Coral has contributed $2,000 and Ambassador Thompson $1,000 to the fund. The fact that the Red Cross of the United States is to give aid to the sufferers has been learned here with profound satisfaction.

The National Bank officials estimate the loss in the business centre of Monterey at $5,000,000. The loss to the big smelter and industrial plants outside the city limits will amount to as much more.

It is estimated that the total losses in the whole district affected by the cyclone and floods will approximate $30,000,000.

THE DEADLY HOUSE FLY

Dr. W. A. Evans, Chicago, Health Commissioner, says:—"He is the filthiest, most dangerous and most common of disease-spreading insects."

The Montreal Star says:—'Born in filth, it is his habit to feed on the most disgusting, decayed and germladen material, and then to sport on the surface of human food, infecting it with deadly bacteria."

E. P. Feit, New York State Entomologist, says:—"Recent studies have shown a close parallel in large cities between the abundance of flies and the frightful mortality among infants during the heated term."

Dr. Daniel D. Jackson says:—"Flies are responsible for 5,000 deaths annually in New York from typhoid and other intestinal diseases.'

THIS DAY IN HISTORY.

Queen of Holland born, 1880.

Relief of Candahar by Lord Roberts, 1880.

More Hydrants Are Urgently Needed.

Public safety from fire in this city, we are told by those who have studied the matter, demands that more hydrants be installed at once. In fact, in the opinion of Ald. A. R. Thompson, chairman of the Fire Committee, and Chief Campbell, at least six new hydrants are needed between the upper and lower bridges, the same to be installed on the bank of the river, in rear of the stores which stand on the west side of Front St. This city has never had a better chairman of Fire than Ald. Thompson, and his opinions are certainly not to be lightly disregarded. The worth of Chief Campbell is too well known to need comment.

It must have been apparent to all who watched the fire in the City Hotel stables, last Sunday night, and saw the sparks flying, threatening destruction to many buildings, that only the vigilance and hard work of the fire brigade stood between the city and serious loss. What onlookers did not know was the fact that, in order to reach some places on fire, the firemen had to lay 1600 feet of hose—altogether too much in order to secure proper pressure. After water has been forced through 1600 feet of hose there is insufficient power to throw much of a stream. It needs no wiseacre to see that. Had the fire last Sunday night got beyond the control of the fire brigade Belleville would have faced a very serious situation. Fires of the same kind may happen again. Forewarned is forearmed. The City Council should at once provide for the installation of the new hydrants asked for by Ald. Thompson and Chief Campbell, the cost of which would not be by any means prohibitive — $100 apiece at the outside, we are told.

Another place where there is said to be insufficient hydrant service is formed by the four corners on which stand the Post Office, Hotel Quinte, etc., where there is only one hydrant. Experts say there should be four.

This matter calls for immediate attention. All who saw the sparks flying last Sunday night, and the miserable streams secured by the firemen after the water had been forced through 1600 feet of hose, will say Amen! to that.

Every day the wonder grows that the Public Works department of this city should continue to spoil thoroughfares by building granolithic sidewalks outside the trees. Because the plan worked well on some streets is no sure sign that it is called for in all cases. All streets are not the same width. Unless there is a certain width of roadway the walks should be laid inside the trees. Because certain streets in the city have been practically ruined by being made so narrow that there is hardly room, figuratively, to swing a cat, is no reason why the same senseless policy should be continued. If the City Fathers will kindly look into this matter, and insist on a little reason and common sense being used, they will earn and deserve the gratitude of a large number of people in this city.

Makes Drinking Water Safe

Scientists working in McGill University Laboratories in Montreal, recently discovered a Typhoid Fever preventative that should be universally used wherever there is danger of infection from drinking water.

It is simply "Sovereign" Fruit Juice, added to the water fifteen minutes before it is to be drunk.

When this is done, the scientists say every Typhoid germ in the infected water is destroyed.

"Sovereign" Lime Fruit Juice with water makes a delicious, cooling drink, as well as a perfectly safe one

A New Lighthouse.

Mariners on Lake Ontario are soon to have what will be in effect a new lighthouse, or rather a pair of lighthouses, for when the two cable towers now under construction at Charlotte are completed, they will be visible from the decks of vessels some twenty miles out on the lake. Not only will they be visible by day, but at night it is proposed to illuminate the towers with a thousand electric bulbs arranged in eight star-shaped groups, four such starry clusters to be at the pinnacle of each tower. The towers are to be 165 feet high.

Seven Children Burned To Death in Brooklyn Early This Morning.

(Intelligencer Special.)

New York, Aug. 31.—The bodies of seven children were found early today in the ruins of St. Malachi's Home, a Roman Catholic institution in Brooklyn for the summer care of orphans, which was destroyed by fire.

They were huddled together in one room on the second floor, having been overlooked in the struggle to escape.

The little bodies were burned beyond recognition.

The firemen and police are continuing the search, and it is expected more bodies will be found.

Until the firemen began the search among the ruins it was believed all the 600 children had been saved through heroic work of Father Kivloy and the nuns, who formed the fire drill and marched the boys and girls out of the building.

Eight hundred other children were marched out of the Andrew Sanitarium and St. George's Episcopal home near by, which were threatened by the blaze.

Armed Bandits Murder Engineer and Rob Train.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 31.— Armed bandits held up express train No. 39, on the Pennsylvania railway in Lewiston Narrows, fifty-two miles west of here, early to-day.

Engineer Poffenburger, of Harrisburg, is reported to be dying from a shot wound inflicted by the robbers.

The robbers, who wore masks, passed through the cars, leaving one man at the head of each coach, heavily armed, and threatened to kill the first one that made a move to draw a weapon.

Then they ordered all to throw up their hands, and, holding a big open-mouthed bag, a man passed through each car, going through the pockets of the passengers with expert hands.

The bandits' booty is estimated at $5,000. The crew was utterly helpless through the entire proceeding.

An Awful Arraignment of Tammany.

Ex-Police Commissioner Bingham of New Yrok, is telling the story of his relations in office with Mayor McClellan in one of the current magazines. It is a startling arraignment of Tammany and the methods in use in controlling the vote of New York city. The ex-chiefs declares that no less than 15,000 men are engaged in the white slave traffic in Manhattan and the Bronx: that through them and gangs of trained repeaters Tammany counts upon receiving in every doubtful election no less than 30,000 to 50,000 illegal votes and that, had he so desired, he could have become independepently rich in a year from the amount of graft available in the police department. Collusion with dive keepers and other varieties of law breakers forms a large part of the unpleasant list prepared by Gen. Bingham.

To the charges, Tammany, through its accredited representatives, makes but a sneering reply. The degree of insolence betrays the true weakness of the position of the blusterer, Tammany, in "Battery Dan" Finn, typifies the rantipole attitude of the organization in the expressed hope that "some mad dog will happen along and bite Bingham on his cork leg."

The story of the rise of Tammany, of its gradual control of one of the largest and wealthiest cities in the world, of its reckless defiance of the better element in municipal administration, is a portrayal of the civic piracy made possible anywhere by a slumbering civic conscience, says the Ottawa Citizen. New York is paying the price of the indifference of the average citizen in years gone by regarding the character of those seeking preferment. Honest laws, honestly administrated are only possible by the exercise of civic patriotism that holds the ballot inviolable. The hope of regeneration lies in the arousing to the sense of his duty of the private citizen. Short of this all efforts at reform must fail.

BOXING.

Big Offer Was No Joke.

Ottawa, August 28.— Despite the fact that there is a clause in the Criminal Code making the holding of a prize fight in Canada an indictable offence, Silver Country sports are evidently sincere in their efforts to have Jack Johnson and Jim Jeffries wage their battle at Elk Lake for the heavy weight championship of the world. That the offer which Mayor Jack Munroe, of Elk Lake, made for the fight is no bluff, is quite evident from the fact that the necessary purse of $100,000 has already been subscribed in addition to $20,000 for expenses.

A resident of Elk Lake, who takes a prominent part in sporting matters was in Ottawa to-day. He said that their offer for the big mill was as genuine as could possibly be.

"We had a big meeting last week," said he, "presided over by Jack Munroe, at which it was decided to negotiate for the fight between the coon and James J. We thought the matter over carefully and decided that if we made any kind of an offer we would put in one well worthy of consideration. So we fixed $100,000 as the purse and immediately started canvassing for subscriptions. John Hammil, of Elk Lake, offered his twenty-acre field for the erection af the grand stand and the ring, and subscriptions were made payable in cash nine months from date. The offer was made by wire to Bob Edgren, of New York, and as soon as we hear from the fighters we will act. We have also followed our telegram with a letter asking for immediate consideration."

While the chances are that Johnson and Jeffries will never be permitted to pull off their battle in Canada, the Elk Lake sports hope to overcome the obstacle in the code by billing the big fight as a "boxing exhibition." Jack Munroe, who is said to be "rolling" in wealth, is claimed to have subscribed $20,000 for the fight. Elk Lake is eighteen miles from the nearest railroad, but the residents claim to have the assurance that the line will be extended to their town within a year or eighteen months.

Elk Lake sports are also going in for hockey, and have asked for options on the services of Stuart, Lake and Kerr, of the Ottawas, Stanley Cup holders, also Walter Smaill, Art. Ross and Jimmy Gardner. They count on Herb Clarke also.

SPORTING NOTES

Duck shooting becomes legal tomorrow.

The dispute in the Prince Edward League, between the Wellington and Bloomfield teams has been settled. The arbitrator awarded the championship cup to Bloomfield for 1909.

Ben Simpson, the star half-back of the Hamilton Tigers, is not very anxious to get into the game this year, but they'll probably refuse to let him go. New blood is all right, but the old war horses bring home the bacon.

Old Jimmy Reynolds will start on another stunt to-morrow. Jimmy has bet $150 to $300 that he will walk from Toronto to Port Hope, 66 miles, in 141-2 hours, and push a cart ahead of him. He is 58 years of age, but feels young enough to make the trip.

An evangelist preaching a sermon to seven thousand people at a Sunday baseball game is one of the latest items of news from Minneapolis. The name of the preacher is the Rev. G. L. Morrill. The crowd is reported to have been greatly pleased by "the nature and brevity of his remarks. One of his "remarks" is said to be "the only sin of Sunday baseball is for the home team to lose, so I say to the Minneapolis boys, 'Go in and climb a notch toward the flag.'"

This has been a tough season for teams which last year won the pennants in the major and class A leagues. There does not seem to be much chance for the Chicago Cubs to shatter a National League tradition and cop four pennants in a row, and the Tigers certainly are having their own troubles. Conditions in the camps of the 1908 flag winners of the American Association and Eastern League are worse. The Indianapolis team is running seventh in the sprint for the honors of the O'Brien organization, and looks to be hopelessly anchored in the second division. In the Eastern League the Orioles will have to hustle like demons in order to escape the disgrace of finishing last.

The Next Session Of Parliament.

Everything appears to indicate that the Government intends to convene Parliament at an early day, possibly on the first Thursday, in November. The Ministers are returning, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier — who really does about all the work, anyhow — is at his desk. There is no reason why the Departments should not be ready, as the last fiscal year ended five months ago and the House prorogued in May. November sessions in the past have been unsatisfactory. The House has not been assembled until the last week in November, with the Christmas holidays close at hand. The result has been that nothing was done until January beyond disposing of the debate upon the address. If the House meets early in November, however, there is no reason why it should not settle down to business at once, and the Christmas holidays need make no more disturbance than would the Easter holidays at a later date.

The Government has plenty to bring before Parliament, and it will have some serious problems to confront. The debate upon naval defence and Imperial contributions will undoubtedly command the attention of the country. Allied with these, are the questions relating to the all-red cable and the all-red steamship route. Again, the recently passed American Tariff Bill has presented difficulties to the Customs and Finance Departments and even to some of the Provincial Governments, and it will not be surprising if a part of the session should be devoted to supplementary tariff legislation. This is the more likely because the Government is anxious to back out of the ridiculous trap in which it caught itself while attempting to play horse with Germany. It looks very much as though the German surtax would be abolished and the British preference virtually extended to Germany. The fact that the farmers in this country are excluded from the second largest market in the world cannot much longer escape attention.

The Grand Trunk Pacific project will be up again for consideration. Mr. Lumsden's resignation as Chief Engineer, under all the circumstances, may well call for an enquiry by Parliament. Lumsden made a great mistake in not supporting Major Hodgins when the latter made his charges about over-classification and secured a committee from the House to investigate them. No one now disputes that he was telling the exact truth, and if Lumsden and the Grand Trunk engineers had come forward and supported him he would have made a case which would have cleared the atmosphere and saved the country a vast amount of money. Mr. Lumsden, however, gave Hodgins no assistance, and the Major was brow-beaten into dismissing the case. Before long it dawned upon Lumsden that the abuses pointed out by Major Hodgins were so extensive and far-reaching that they could no longer be tolerated. Then he attempted to interfere and got sacked for his interference. The Government would not have dared to fire him had he come out boldly and told the public at the time of the Hodgins' enquiry what he will tell the public on the witness stand at the next session.

A BLAZE OF LIGHT

NIGHT SCENE AT CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION ONE TO LIVE IN MEMORY.

The "Electric City" will be a fitting name for the Canadian National Exhibition grounds at Toronto this year. All the big buildings are being fitted with exterior decorations of electric light and they will turn the Exhibition nights into the whitest kind of days. This brilliancy added to the martial music, the movements of troops and all the panoply of display should make the night scene at the Canadian National one never to be forgotten.

THE GARDEN OF ARMIDA.

dent friends of his, who, like all the young recipients of a late and painfully attained liberty, would run riot in destroying every vestige of the past. But he was necessarily very much alone. It is not exactly an original type, this, to-day; there are so many with soft hearts and quick brains who hold fast with one hand to the crumbling substance of that which was good in its own time, and a necessary phase of development though no longer a help, but a hindrance, and reach forward with the other for a clue to the future, so strangely widened in these times, so vast, so trackless so desolate in the absence of obstructive landmarks. It is well these should be gone, lest we mistake tokens of the past for indications of the future. We would not have them back, nor be misled for the sake of a guide. But where shall we turn our footsteps now?

That was what Di Loria felt and thought, though he did not mourn over broken faiths nor become embittered by their absence, in the Northern fashion, nor did he wish to keep back the truth. He only wished to be silent before those who were not ready for it; there may be a hint of Jesuitical training in this, but so it was. Perhaps his only claim to, originality lay in the fact that his was an almost absolutely lovable character. There are few such in the world, brightening every life that their own touches and accomplishing thus an active good that the very breadth and sweetness of their natures cause them to fail in organising into definite form. His failings all lay on the side of that desire to temper justice with mercy by which he lost time in the consideration of every question, and a certain unconquerable constitutional incapacity to regard any faulty person or principle with consistent severity.

It would be difficult to say just what Rhoda represented to such a man; she came from the country, the very name which suggested a realised ideal to Di Loria; she was as different as possible from the languid, black-eyed, slowly smiling ladies of his own city, consummate women of the world as they were when they chose to wake out of their trance-like calm, yet there was none of that crystal hardness which had repelled his admiration of the English and American women whom he had met. They were so well able to take care of themselves, these clear-eyed and positive persons, and he had an instinctive consciousness that Rhoda needed looking after. He saw, without precisely understanding it, the utter absence of trans-Atlantic shrewdness, the guilelessness which his own simplicity matched—but do not think for a moment that he reasoned thus about it; he did not consider that the fact needed any explanation. He never told himself that Rhoda "understood" him; the immense modern need for comprehension, which of course—for you and me at least—means admiration, had never possessed him. He did not even say that she would aid and abet that work among the poor of Naples with which he endeavored to atone for that want of wider purpose which remained in lack of definite prompting or that she would adorn "la societa" of which, Italian-like, he was very fond. He was simply madly in love with her, and if he could persuade her to marry him—well, she would be the angel of that Paradise of his which would be no more Paradise without her. If not —che sara, sara. It was a terrible possibility, probability even, thought Di Loria with the passionate humility of a true lover, but there was no need to smart before the blow fell.

But, patient and courteous as he was, Di Loria can hardly be expected to have remained pondering on that marble bench during this too long digression. After an unsuccessful attempt to appreciate the clear-eyed poet he had abandoned the book to Leo's guardianship and gone strolling up and down the leafy paths, impatiently awaiting the time when he might dress and order himself to be driven up to Capo di Monte where he had arranged to meet his lady and her friends.

He found them amid the relics of Bourbon splendors wandering through the beautiful rooms of the stately palace under the guidance of a custodian who had discerned their nationality with his first glimpse of their shadows cast on the shining pavement, and, after one smiling burst of welcome "Spik Ingles!" had relapsed hopelessly into the Neapolitan patois in which he described to them the glories and fortunes of the place. Di Loria rescued them, laughing, and dismissed the man from active service witha buono mano which he received with passionate gratitude. Had one of the Inglesi bestowed it, he would have lamented loud and long. He was truly grieved at this unexpected appearance of a compatriot on the scene, but did not resent it; it was the will of God. He followed the party at a distance, strangers not being permitted to roam unaccompanied through those treasure-laden rooms, and, at last, seeing the marchese engrossed with the younger lady, drew nearer to the others, hope springing eternal in the human breast indicating a possibility of seeing the young signor Americano alone.

There is in the palace of Capo di Monte a most beautiful little room in which walls, ceiling, and chandeliers, and ornaments are all of the precious porcelain. It is hard to conceive of anything more charming than this delightful apartment, with its polished surfaces and delicate hues and ornate, formal grace. Di Loria and Rhoda entered it just as Mrs. Winter and Regy were piloted forward by the eager attendant.

"This would be a good background for the sort of love-making that we find on a painted fan," said Rhoda, looking about her.

Di Loria did not answer, but looked at her intently. It was one of the few times that he found himself alone with her, and it was of another sort

LADIES' TUCKED SHIRTWAIST.

Paris Pattern No. 2849

All Seams Allowed.

A simple style for a shirtwaist of Persian or Victoria lawn, Italian linen, madras, batiste, nainsook or China silk is here shown. The rather tight-fitting sleeves are made with groups of tucks at regular intervals; the lower edge being finished in a point, and trimmed with insertion and lace edging. ADELAIDE LANDER.

This Nifty Woman is a Leader of Male Musicians.

Those who doubt that a woman may become the leader of men meet an agreeable surprise in Miss Adelaide Lander, who has come into note in the world of music as the head of a fine band of 125 musicians, which plays at a New York race track daily.

At the death of her father, John M. Lander, two years ago, with the grit characteristic of the American girl, Miss Lander entered into the management of this noted company of musicians and has displayed executive ability hardly credited to her sex. The organization is one of the largest and most important in New York. Miss Lander is tall, strikingly handsome and makes a strictly tailored gown her professional garb.

Are You Old?

Are you old? If you are, why so? Perhaps you want to be. Then it's nobody's business.

Ada Cambridge, writing in a recent issue of a monthly magazine, says something about the subject that every woman who finds herself resenting the number of approaching birthdays ought to read.

"That time, sixty o'clock, let us say, is far from being the dreary time that I shudderingly anticipated when I was young," she writes. "I used to look upon those who then appeared so aged and marvel at their fortitude.

"The mystery was to find the whole body of them more or less serene in the contemplation of their common calamity.

"Since I am now sixty the mystery is cleared up.

"In the first place, given health and fair play, one is not old at sixty. Certainly not.

"We find ourselves in many respects younger than our married daughters, who are so seriously absorbed in the stern struggle from which we have emerged, more buoyant, more pleasure loving, more alive to the charm of life and the beauty of the world, far more simple in our tastes and free and easy in our opinions and, oh, infinitely less hard to satisfy!"

Words like these from one who herself has had enough birthdays not to mind them is reassuring. Why, it is not so bad to have lived a goodly number of years. They help rather than hinder one's enjoyment of things. Listen again to this woman who openly claims sixty of them.

"Let me repeat once more," she writes, "as life wanes the interest of life does not necessarily wane with it despite traditional theories to the contrary. Given fair play, as I said before, the materials of enjoyment are as rich at sixty as at sixteen or twenty-six, in some ways richer.

"The fullness of experience—what wealth that is! Now that we have time to think of things, now that we can sleep o' nights (while other women are agonizing with broken hearts or ailing infants), now that we can give ourselves unreservedly to a fine book and a holiday outing, those simple but uplifting joys which really recreate jaded spirits and flesh; now that we are upon the cushions, as it were, out of the sawdust and smother, we can see life steadily and see it whole."

And so here is one woman at least that finds compensation in being sixty or more. It was very thoughtful of her to have called back to some of the others who aren't quite there, but who are wondering how odious it will be when they arrive, telling them that it really isn't bad, after all.

A Word to the Office Girl.

If you feel that you have any cause for complaint make it in the morning, not at night, when every one is tired and in a hurry. Be careful to make it to the right person, and make it at once, in which case you will find that it will have the right effect.

If there are other girls than yourself concerned you can tell them that you have spoken or are going to speak to the manager and hope to have things better regulated; but, oh, do not engage in one of those long, heated discussions in which it is unanimously agreed that it is the hardest place in which you have ever worked. This causes a loss of respect and dignity and does not do a particle of good.

Canadian National Exhibition

TORONTO

HORSES AT THE FAIR.

Everything Points to an Immense Exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Horse entries are coming in so fast at the office of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, that the success of that department promises to be more pronounced than ever before.

The prizes given for speeding in the ring aggregate $4,000, and that in itself is a guarantee that the fastest harness horses in Canada will again be found in the races on the afternoon of August 30th and 31st and Sept. 1st and 2nd.

In Clydesdales everything points to an entry that will exceed last year's show, when they were there in numbers and quality that cannot be equalled anywhere on the continent. Hackneys are growing better year by year and the show of them is excellent, while Toronto is a centre for hunters and jumpers of the very highest class; the competitions in this line excite almost world-wide interest.

In harness horses there is always a great exhibit, while the pony classes have been enlarged and extended in keeping with the growing popularity of the children's pets.

TREASURES IN ART.

Will be a Feature of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

Famous pictures from the leading art galleries of Europe will again be a feature of the Canadian National Exhibition. The permanent agent cables that he has secured many of the leading pictures of the year, and that the list is coming by mail. In addition to this there will be an exhibit of art photography by the leading art photographers of England, Germany, France and Italy, and a graphic art exhibit by the leading illustrators of New York, including such men as Frederick Remington, Maxfield Parish and Charles Dana Gibson.

GOODS WHILE YOU WAIT.

Process of manufacture an interesting feature of Canadian National Exhibition.

The process of manufacture department is always one of the most interesting features of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and this year it promises to be far more extensive than ever before. In all there will be about forty industries at work showing just how shoes, silk, cotton goods, prints, and many other of the articles you use every day are made. It is impossible here to name more than a few of the exhibitors, but here are some well worth looking up.

The United Shoe Manufacturing Co., Montreal, manufacturing ladies' and gents' boots and shoes, showing the different stages from the cutting out of the leather to the finished shoe.

Merchants Rubber Co., of Berlin, demonstrating the manufacture of rubber shoes, showing every process from the crude rubber to the finished boot.

Davis & Henderson, manufacturing and printing envelopes.

The Canadian Silk Co. weaving silk and badges with photos on them.

Gundy, Clapperton, cutting glass, showing the process in which the fine quality of cut glass is produced.

Shredded Wheat, showing process in which their products are prepared and made portable and palatable.

Dominion Textile Co., Montreal, showing process of manufacture of fine cotton goods, prints, etc.

SHEEP AND SWINE.

Sheep and swine come in for a large share of attention at the Canadia National Exhibition. The best in York shires, Berkshires and Tamworths fill the pig pens at the big Fair, while in the sheep pens are Shropshires, Cotswolds, Leicesters, Oxford Downs of the first quality. All the best that Canada and the United States can produce are found in this department. That the exhibit is a large one is shown by the fact that permanent pens have been built on the grounds for 700 sheep and 600 pigs. Then there is poultry and pet stock enough to fill a building 220 ft. by 60 ft.

The Department of Agriculture is putting on a display of wholesome and diseased meats at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, and will send two lecturers from Ottawa to tell the people how to discern the good from diseased meats. This should be of interest to cattle men, as well as meat producers.

EXPLODING SUBMARINE MINES.

Ships to be blown up on the Waterfront at Exhibition Grounds.

The submarine mine which plays such an important part in naval warfare will be part of the military display at the Canadian National Exhibition. These hidden guardians of every port in war time will be laid in front of the Exhibition grounds and every day at 5 o'clock a ship will be blown up by one of them. There is nothing more spectacular than what happens to a ship when it runs on to one of these hidden dangers of the deep.

EXHIBIT.

of specially selected plants and seed taken from seed plots of members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, Toronto Industrial Exhibition, Aug. 30 to Sept. 13, and Canada Central Exhibition, Ottawa, Sept. 10 to 18 inclusive. With a view to giving greater publicity to the work which is being done in Canada by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association in the improving of cultivated plants, and in order that a medium may be provided through which the officers of the Association may come in touch with a greater number of those who are specially interested in the problem of crop improvement, arrangements have been made to place a special educational exhibit of selected plants and seed in the Agricultural building of each of the above mentioned Fairs. The exhibit will be in charge of the Secretary or some other officer qualified to discuss the general work of the Association. It is to be hoped that a large number will take advantage of this opportunity to learn more of this important movement.—L. H. NEWMAN, Sec. C.S.G.A.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITS.

All the provinces will be in line with exhibits in the Provinces building at Canadian National Exhibition this year. Each Provincial Government is at work on a display that will do justice to its territory, and the gold and fruit of British Columbia, the golden grain of the prairies from Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba, the various products and minerals of Ontario, right down to the best coal and farm products of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, will form one of the many features that makes the Fair truly National in character.

CORPS VS. CORPS.

Real Live Competitions in the Military Competitions at the Canadian National.

The Military Display and Tournament at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, will have more features of real interest this year than anything of the kind previously attempted in Canada. In such competitions as the Victoria Cross and wrestling on horseback, corps will be arrayed against corps, the Royal Canadian Dragoons stationed at Toronto, against the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery stationed at Kingston. The rivalry between these corps is very keen, so much so that the men are also anxious to mix things up a bit with a single stick in the Balaclava Melee, if the permission of the officers can be obtained. However, the officers have not yet decided. Some think a few hard knocks would not hurt the men, while others are inclined to think that the competition would resolve itself into something too much like actual warfare.

COMEDY IN FIREWORKS.

Some Funny Things Pictured in Lines of Fire.

"The Battle of the North Sea" and "The Siege of Kandahar" are the features but by no means the whole of the fireworks display at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. In addition there are 62 distinct numbers on the fireworks programme and they include everything that can be imagined in pyrotechnics. And in these numbers comedy has its place. For instance a Punch and Judy show is one of the numbers. Another number pictures a boy fishing. A big policeman comes along and orders him away. Another boy seeing this brings on a giant firecracker, sets it behind the policeman and fires it off—result a big policeman kicking on the ground and boys disappearing around the corner.

IMMENSE BANKS OF FLOWERS.

The decorative floral display will again be a feature of the Floriculture department of the Canadian National Exhibition. These immense banks of flowers which cover 500 square feet of floor space make one of the beauty spots of the entire Fair. The premiums for this exhibit alone total $1,110.00, a sum that guarantees plenty of competitors.

DAIRY EDUCATION.

Proper Care of Milk to be Demonstrated at the Canadian National.

The educational features in connection with the Dairy department of the Canadian National Exhbiition, Toronto, promise, to be of unusual interest this year, not only to farmers, but to consumers of milk in cities and towns as well. The demonstration work and lectures in the Dairy amphitheatre will be under the immediate charge of Mr. Geo. A. Putnam, director of dairy instructions for the Province, and the Dominion Department will also furnish a man to give some definite instruction along the cow-testing line.

The proper care and handling of milk will be one of the subjects dealt with, and it will be accompanied by demonstrations of milk testing as well as charts showing the value of cow-testing associations.

The Model Military Camp at the Canadian National Exhibition will be fitted with hospital tents for men and women and all casualties on the Exhibition grounds will be handled by the Army Medical Corps which will form part of the permanent corps in the Model Militia Camp.

ONE PLUS ONE EQUALS—WHAT?

A Little Problem in Mental Arithmetic That Alice Solved.

By FRANK CHESWICK.

"Girls, what do you think? Professor Storm proposed to me last night. So silly! Why, I never met him until the institute opened. We were coming home from the concert, and he"—

Miss Lingard's laughing accents reached the door of the cloakroom just as Miss Waters and Miss Burrows went out.

"Silly! She is the silly one—the most conceited girl I ever knew!" exclaimed Nellie Waters, snapping a rubber band about her notebook.

Alice Burrows stooped for an imaginary raveling in her skirt binding, and her friend did not see her quivering lips. When she stood erect once more they were joined by other teachers and passed down the corridor.

The first hour was given over to a lecture on chalk work in geography, but Alice was deaf to pedagogic suggestions, blind to the vivid drawings of the faddist who held forth before the teachers of Tucson county, assembled for the annual institute. Above the voice of the speaker rang insistently the words of Hattie Lingard—"Professor Storm proposed to me last night."

Well, why shouldn't he? thought Alice despairingly. Miss Lingard was noted beyond the confines of the county as a beauty and a coquette, just the sort of young woman who would attract a studious, earnest man like Mr. Storm. Yes, why shouldn't he? What did he owe quiet, gentle Alice Burrows? He had spoken no word of love to her, and yet— Her cheeks flushed crimson, and she bent her face closer to the notebook, whose pages were still unwritten. It had all been a mistake. She had misinterpreted the actions of this grave young professor who for two years had conducted the classes in mathematics at the institute. Perhaps it had even been unmaidenly for her to read the clear depths of his hazel eyes.

The morning dragged wearily. At noon her appetite failed. By the opening of the afternoon session a maddening headache possessed her. During the last period of the day her section must report to Professor Storm. She would have excused herself and gone home only that every one knew she must only sit in the depot during the hot August afternoon. Mervale, her home, was but a thirty minute ride from the county seat, and to please her invalid mother Alice made the trip each day, thus depriving herself of the small social functions arranged for the evenings in honor of the visiting teachers, a humorous lecture, several receptions and the concert.

Professor Storm had asked her to attend the concert with him, but she had been forced to decline. Now she thought, with increasing bitterness, that he had quickly consoled himself in her absence. Perhaps if, like the other teachers, she had boarded in town—

"If any of you failed to grasp the method used in that last problem I will be glad to remain a short time and go over it again."

What problem? Alice pressed her hand to her forehead and glanced hurriedly at her notebook. Blindly she clutched at her pencil. Half a dozen teachers remained, and Professor Storm was stepping down from the platform. He reached her side.

"What is the trouble? Are you ill?"

He glanced curiously from the clean page of her book to her flushed face. For a few seconds speech was denied her. Then she replied calmly, almost coldly:

"I fear my mind wandered. I missed the explanation entirely."

Storm looked at the clock.

"You have forty minutes before train time. Come up to my desk, and I will go over it with you."

Mechanically she followed his work, wondering if the ordeal would ever end. But her voice did not quiver as she rose.

"Thank you. It is quite simple now—as simple as one plus one equaling two."

She told the fib unflinchingly, but her eyes did not meet his. The other teachers had gathered in a remote corner to discuss the absorbing question as to whether hats should be worn at the reception to be given that night by the local woman's club. Storm laid a cool, shapely hand over her feverish one.

"I wish," he said softly, "that you would let me teach you that one plus one equals—just one. May I—Alice?"

It had not been her mistake, after all. He had meant—

"Girls, are you ever coming?"

It was Miss Lingard's voice, just outside the door. Then Alice remembered and drew away her hand.

"Really, Professor Storm, if you advance such propositions as that I shall lose faith in your knowledge of mathematics."

And, with a metallic laugh, she hurried toward the cloakroom. Storm looked after her with eyes first puzzled, then hurt. He had never pictured her as a willful flirt. And she had led him on. Yes, she had! He repeated the words again and again as if to smooth his ruffled feelings.

The next morning Miss Waters was waiting on the depot platform for her friend.

"Oh, Alice, you ought to have been at the reception last night," she commented as they walked toward the high school, where the institute was held. "Such larks! That little braggart, Hattie Lingard, was the laughingstock. It seems she wants to marry Fred Baker, whose father owns nearly all the stock in the Tucson bank. She hoped to rouse his jealousy by flirting with Professor Storm. That is why she started the story that he had proposed to her, and they say she even asked him to take her to the concert. Well, she did succeed admirably in rousing Fred's jealousy, and he positively refused to take her to the reception last night, and she had such a dream of a dress too. She had to go with a couple of girls. Imagine Hattie Lingard doomed to the society of girls on a long walk home under the trees! Not even Professor Storm appeared on the scene to console her. I believe he saw through her trick because he was so cool to her last night at supper. We sit at the same table. I don't believe he ever had any idea of proposing to her."

Miss Waters rattled on of the evening's pleasures, but Alice heard nothing. She could only think that perhaps the idle boast of a pretty, vapid girl had come between her and lifelong happiness. A mad longing to shriek in her misery, to strike the girl who caused it all, suddenly possessed her, and she walked like one in a dream to the institute doors.

The period just before the noon recess was given over to mathematics. Professor Storm was quiet, collected, authoritative as ever during the lecture hour, at the close of which the teachers, rejoicing in their freedom, hurried toward the various exits. Alice was almost at the foot of the line. Miss Waters called from the doorway:

"Alice, dear, will you please bring my algebra? I left it on my desk."

With downcast eyes Alice reached for the forgotten book. It lay on a desk just in front of Professor Storm. A faint flush tinged her cheek, and her hand trembled.

He stepped to her side, and the chattering voices of the outgoing teachers almost drowned his words.

"I hope you are feeling better today. No headache?"

For an instant Alice hesitated, then raised her eyes to his, and courage to make right the wrong came to her.

"I have been solving a little problem in mental arithmetic, and with the solution comes relief."

"Yes?" he said eagerly. "Why didn't you let me help you?"

The room was empty now. She leaned forward just a trifle; her glance met his, wavered and fell.

"It was so simple—just that one plus one—equals"—

"One!" he exclaimed triumphantly. "I felt sure you would find that answer if I were patient."

A Profitable Verse.

Victor Hugo was even more successful than Tennyson as regards money matters and left over £200,000 at his death. A large proportion of this was derived from fiction, for "Les Miserables" alone brought him in £16,000, but even allowing for this it seems probable that his poems and plays were more remunerative than those of his great English contemporary. Neither Tennyson nor Hugo, however, can equal the record of James Smith of "Rejected Addresses" fame, who was better paid for a trifling effort of verse than any poet since the world began. At dinner one evening he met Strachan, the king's printer, who, although crippled with age and gout, proved excellent company. The next morning Smith wrote to him:

Your lower limbs seemed far from stout
  When last I saw you walk.
The cause I presently found out
  When you began to talk.
The power that props the body's length,
  In due proportion spread,
In you mounts upward, and the strength
  All settles in the head.

Strachan was so delighted with the compliment that he immediately added a codicil to his will leaving the author £3,000. Smith was therefore paid for his poem at the rate of £375 a line.—London Chronicle.

Momentous Trifles.

The greatest events are often drawn by hairs. Rome was saved by the cackling of some sacred geese. The life of Napoleon was saved from the "infernal machine" because General Rapp detained Josephine a minute or two to arrange her shawl. A jest of the French king was the death of William the Conqueror. The destruction of Athens was brought about by a jest on Sulla. Some witty Athenian, struck with his blotched face, called him a "mulberry pudding." A spark from a candle falling on a cottage floor was the cause of the fire that destroyed London. Lafitte, the great banker, was a pauper. He attributed his rise in life to his picking up a pin in the streets of Paris. The invention of glass is ascribed to some Phoenician merchants lighting a fire on the sands of the seashore. Vulcanized rubber was discovered by the accidental mixing of crude rubber and sulphur on a cook stove. The dog Diamond by upsetting a lamp destroyed papers of Sir Isaac Newton that had been the toil of his life.

September Weather. According to Hicks.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 3rd, 4th and 5th. The moon is on the celestial equator on the 2nd, within a few hours of perigee, hence decided barometric fluctuations, with probable thunderstorms will appear in many cases as early as the 2nd. During the 3rd, 4th and 5th, these disturbances will pass eastwardly over most parts of the country. Rising barometer and clearing cooler weather will follow this period for several days. A regular storm period is central on the 10th, but we have calculated that the new moon or moon's conjunction with earth and sun on the 14th, would retard the final culmination of this period. The magnetic crisis, occurring annually from about the 8th to the 15th of September, falls in this period. High temperature and low barometer may be expected by the 10th, and storms of notable character will organize and take up their eastward march. These conditions will grow in magnitude and force during the 11th, 12th and possibly up to the 14th. If higher barometer and change to cooler follow immediately behind storms about the 10th, 11th and 12th, the new moon on the 14th will lend its perturbing power to the reactionary period immediately following. On and about the 11th, the earth passes a point in its orbit where earth currents, auroral perturbations, and volcanic unrest, as a rule, appear in maximum intensity. This period, of course, is nearing the full force of the autumnal equinox, and storms peculiar to this season should not be allowed to surprise and overwhelm those who are naturally most exposed to their violence. A reactionary storm period is central on the 15th. 16th and 17th Should the storms of the preceding period not subside before the new moon on the 14th. threatening to stormy conditions will continue during the 15th to 17th, culminating on and touching the 16th in very positive and forceful disturbances. Within two or three days of sunset on the 14th, seismic shakes will be most natural, and maximum tidal waves will visit many parts of the globe, especially in regions down toward and beyond the equator. A marked change to high barometer and cooler may reasonably be expected from about the 16th to the 19th. Frosts in northern extremes should not surprise readers of these forecasts at this time. A regular storm period is central on the 21st, the central day of the autumnal equinox. This period will bring prompt changes of temperature and barometric pressure as early as the 19th in western parts of the country. By the 21st these conditions will bring on storms of rain, wind and thunder, and during the 21st to 23rd these storms will touch most parts of the country in their eastward sweep to the Atlantic. If the barometer is greatly depressed, attended by high temperature, much humidity and fitful, southerly winds will be severe in many localities. All we have said concerning the possibility of West India storms in the south may reasonably be applied at this period. No reckless outlays, or neglect of ordinary business plans should be allowed and no foolish forebodings should be indulged; but rational care should be taken if indications should point to approaching equinoctial storms at this, and all other storm periods throughout this equinoctial season. High barometer, stiff gales from the northwest, and change to very cool nights will most probably follow storms of this period, bringing frosts to numerous localities in states to the northward. A reactionary storm period is central on the 26th, 27th and 28th. This period leads into the mercury disturbance, which begins about the 27th and runs into October. The moon is in perigee and on the celestial equator on the 29th, and in opposition with earth and sun on the 30th. This period promises some of the most decided equinoctial disturbances of this autumnal season. The moon being nearest the earth, on the equator and at full moon, so near the time when the sun is centrally on the equator, in the nature of the case we may expect violent perturbations of the atmosphere, as well as great swells and tidal waves along the coasts and open seas. The crisis of this period promises to be retarded so as to fall on and touching the 29th to 30th. A very low reading of the barometer at this time, especially in all the regions adjacent to the Gulf and South Atlantic Coasts, will be positive warning of violence and danger. Marked storm conditions will prevail over most sections of the country at this time, with promise of prolonged disturbances into the first few days of October. This really promises to be the turning period, when summer conditions will give place to autumnal, and when tropical storms will make a last battle with boreal influences and be immediately followed by change to much cooler weather and frosts over much of the country to the northward.

Rumor says that the G.T.R. is contemplating changes which may prove of considerable interest and benefit to this city. DAREDEVIL DRIVERS AT AUTO MEET WHERE SEVEN ARE KILLED IN ONE WEEK.

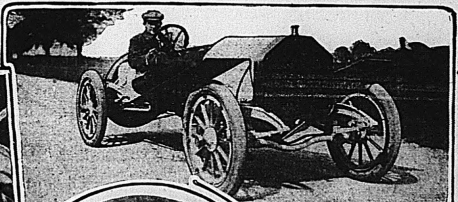
Len Zengle, Chadwick



Louis Strang in Buick

Here is a trio of motor maniacs who were performing at the big meet at Indianapolis. The one in the centre is Barney Oldfield; the man in the car is Strang, while the man with the stern features whose picture is in the top corner rejoices in the name of Zenghel. Every time these men mount a car to race they take their lives in their fingers. During the first week of the Indianapolis meet seven people, some drivers and some spectators, were killed in various accidents.

SOME INCIDENTS.

Louis Cole, mechanician of the Stearns car in the 24-hour automobile race, was killed, and the driver Laurent Gross, was fatally injured in a collision with the Acme car.

Patcheke and Maynard, the crew of the Acme car, were only slightly injured. Both cars were wrecked.

Cole was almost instantly killed Gross' spine was broken, and he cannot recover.

The race was resumed in ten minutes. The accident came just as the spectators had settled down after witnessing a less serious mishap. About 11.15 o'clock the Fiat car, driven by Ralph De Palma and E. H. Parker was struck by the Allen Kingston, manned by Hugh Hughes and Egibi The latter car had thrown a tire on the home stretch. The gasoline in the tank of the overturned Allen Kingston caught fire and blazed up brightly. Hughes' clothes were burned off his back.

The officials blew the whistle to stop the race, and the ambulances took both men to the track hospital. It was reported that Cole was badly injured and would probably die. A few minutes later his death was reported

Bogus Employment Agents in Montreal.

Montreal, August 30. — Bogus employent agents at the wharf are continuing to reap a golden harvest by holding out promises of work to immigrants who arrive on these shores. Day after day men are fleeced and then they proceed to the Magistrate's court office to air their complaints. However, they usually wend their way into the open a little sick at heart to know that a warrant costs money, and that the employment agent had taken all theirs from them.

Nine Hebrews, recent arrivals in Canada, took out a warrant yesterday against one of their own race, charging him with obtaining money from them and then not procuring work as promised.

Seven Englishmen sat in the Arraignment Court yesterday afternoon, and one of them related that they had been duped by an employment agent, who promised them jobs as firemen on boats leaving Montreal. The agent appeared in court and said that he had acted for the best, and to show his good intentions he returned the money the men had paid him.

One bogus employment agent had been condemned this year, and Judge Choquet, in passing sentence, said he would be very severe on future offenders brought before him.

The School Management Committee reported as follows:

That Miss Maud G. Cazie resigned her position as a teacher and Miss E. Styles was recommended in her stead.

That an assistant teacher be secured for the Market School, and if no qualified teacher makes application that the Inspector make an application to the Department for a special permit for Miss Mills to be appointed on the teaching staff.

The Sites, Building and Repair Committee made the following recommendations:

That Geo. Madden's tender of $10 for oiling the steps and floor of Grier street school be accepted.

That the tender of Mr. Joshua Lanz for slate blackboards for Pinnacle st. school be accepted at 26 cents per foot.

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

Board went into Committee of the Whole on reports, Mr. Wallace in the chair.

The Finance Committee's report was adopted without discussion.

The recommendation of the School Management Committee that Miss E. Styles be engaged as a teacher in place of Miss Cazie, who resigned, was adopted.

Some discussion took place as to the furnishing of the extra room at the Pinnacle street school.

Mr. Bennett stated that it would be two or three weeks before the slate blackboard would be in position, and there were no seats available.

Mr. Reid stated that a number of parents had intimated that they would not send their children to that school.

Col. Ponton spoke strongly in support of the room being properly fitted up, so as to be ready for occupancy in case of necessity.

Mr. Wills said that when the schools were opened on Wednesday the Board would be in a position to know where the overcrowding, if any, was, and the number of scholars that would be sent to the Market school.

The matter of procuring seats was left in the hands of the Chairman of the Board, and Chairmen of the Finance, School Management, Printing and Supplies, and Sites, Building and Repairs Committees.

HIGH SCHOOL CHANGES.

Mr. W. S. Morden, gave a verbal report as to contemplated changes to be made in the science room of the High School. It was necessary to make some changes as to equipment, etc., if not to secure a larger room. He said there was another room upstairs in the High School part which could be utilized as a science room. Mr. McLaurin, the newly-appointed science teacher had given some ideas as to the equipment necessary.

Mr. Bennett was of the opinion that, including plumbing, additional apparatus, tables, etc., the cost would be about $300.

Mr. Morden said it was practically impossible to accommodate 40 pupils in the present science room. Another necessary adjunct was apparatus for demonstrating electricity, which we have not at present.

After some further discussion the matter was referred to the Sites, Building and Repairs Committee to take action upon.

AS TO INSPECTORATES.

In answer to an enquiry, the Chairman of the Board stated that he had written the Deputy Minister of Education in reference to contemplated changes of Inspectorates by the Department, but at present nothing definite was obtainable, as the Government would not make a change until next year at least.

LUKE SHAW, AN ENGLISHMAN, GAVE EXCITING EXHIBITION

JUMPED FROM FOOTBRIDGE AND TRIED TO DROWN HIMSELF LAST EVENING — ALLEGED TO BE CRAZED WITH INTOXICANTS — RESISTED ATTEMPTS AT RESCUE —FREE SHOW WHICH ATTRACTED HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE.

Alleged to be crazed by intoxicants, Luke Shaw, an Englishman, yesterday afternoon caused considerable excitement by performing an act which he would no doubt never have undertaken had he been in his right senses. Divesting himself of his coat and hat, Shaw jumped off the footbridge into the river below. The sudden stoppage and immersion evidently had the effect of temporarily restoring him to his senses, and he emerged from the river and climbed up upon the bank, just north of the footbridge.

After resting upon the bank for a few minutes, Shaw again dove into the river and partially swam and floated on down stream.

By this time his peculiar actions had attracted the attention of many spectators and the police were also communicated with. When Shaw had passed down to just below the lower bridge Joseph Bolster jumped into the river and was soon beside the unfortunate man. After some difficulty he succeeded in getting a rope around Shaw's body and was in the act of towing him to shore when Shaw, with a large pocket knife, which he carried, severed the rope and again struck out down stream. Shaw, also made an effort to use the knife upon Bolster but the alertness of the latter prevented him from doing so.

At the first culvert at the entrance to Victoria Park, by the aid of Bolster and others, Shaw was taken from the water and landed upon terra firma. He was somewhat exhausted and blood was flowing freely from a nasty flesh wound upon his right hand and also from a wound on the side of his head, made either by striking a rock when he dove into the river or by the knife.

Shaw was taken in charge by the police and escorted to the police station, whilst hundreds of men, women and children followed.

At the station Shaw was very demonstrative, but was placed in a cell where his desire for felo de se might be cooled off. Later on dry clothing was procured for him, and he was induced to put the same on.

Shaw is unmarried, and had been living in the city for about a year. He is reported to be a hard working and industrious man, not at all addicted to strong drink. He had been working at Point Ann of late. Yesterday he evidently met friends with whom he was celebrating, and, becoming irrational, made the attempt to end his existence.

Later in the evening Dr. McCullough was called in to see Shaw and his wounds were dressed, that on the right hand being so serious that four stitches had to be put in it.

This morning Shaw was brought up before Magistrate Masson and the circumstances of the affair explained to His Worship. As Shaw appeared to be perfectly rational and extremely penitent for what he had done, he was allowed to go after paying $2 to Bolster and $3 as court costs.

SCIENTISTS TALK CROPS.

Gathering at Winnipeg Discusses the Wheat Yield.

Winnipeg, Aug. 31.—Three sections of the British Association for the Advancement of Science—chemistry, agriculture and botany—yesterday combined their forces to discuss scientific problems of supreme importance to the wheat industry.

A. E. Humphries, one of the largest English millers and president of the British Millers' Association, said the British public demanded a flour that will make a large shapely loaf of good color. Manitoba hardly filled the bill. Much yet remained to be done by the chemists in co-relating chemical qualities and baking qualities.

Prof. Hardy, who was deputed by Cambridge University to investigate the question of the strength of wheat, said that discussions on wheat strength always reminded him of a hunt for the holy grail. Wheat strength was made up of a large number of qualities, and what they were in search of was not the holy grail, but an array of archangels.

The economic section developed an animated discussion on the trade relations of the Empire. Prof. A. B. Clark, the new incumbent of the chair of political economy at Manitoba University, read a paper on "The Policy of Preferential Duties." He described the policy as economically unsound, impractical and unlikely to be ever adopted.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association was soundly taken to task by the free trade members present. Rev. Mr. Bland declared that the policy was the embodiment of selfishness and did not represent the people of Canada.

Fears Death; Kills Herself.

Buffalo, Aug. 31.—Mrs. Anna Wilson, who with her husband, John Wilson, came from Toronto two months ago, shot herself in the abdomen at her home, No. 44 Elm street, yesterday.

The police are holding the husband, but the woman in her ante-mortem statement said she shot herself fearing that she was about to die from heart failure.

The Wilsons, who were married in Toronto eight years ago, came to this city two months ago.

HE HAS MANY VISITORS

Scores Anxious to Meet Lord Charles Beresford.

Hero of Alexandria Has a Busy Time of It In Toronto Making Calls and Receiving and Avoiding Callers—Is Keeping Silent Regarding Navy, But Will Probably Make a Statement To-day.

Toronto, Aug. 31.—Despite the efforts of his more intimate friends to prevent him from being pestered by eager Toronto citizens anxious to shake him by the hand and have a brief chat with him, Lord Charles Beresford had a busy time of it yesterday in making calls and receiving callers, to say nothing of the public and semi-public functions he attended during the day.

And a strenuous time he is likely to have during the whole of his visit. So many people desire to have the privilege of grasping him by the hand and exchanging a few words with him, that if he acceded to all the requests of this character he would have no time to himself. Consequently many who wish to make the personal acquaintance of the hero of Alexandria will be disappointed. Lord Charles has a suite of rooms at the King Edward Hotel, which will be his headquarters until he leaves the city next Monday, and here a book is provided in which are entered all the names of visitors who call upon the gallant admiral.

Among the few callers Lord Beresford received in his suite at the King Edward yesterday morning, were Capt. Melville, Mayor Oliver and W. K. George.

Those who are acting as his "guides, philosophers and friends," during his stay in the city are having a busy time too, one of their chief and most difficult tasks being to keep forever on the alert to guard his lordship from the attacks of enthusiastic reporters who are to be found lurking in all manner of unlikely places ready to pounce upon him at any moment he may be left unguarded, and secure a coveted interview. But Lord Charles is "mum," as far as private chats with newspaper men are concerned. He firmly, but courteously refuses to say anything to the press which is of any news value. He is reserving what he has to say regarding his views on the British naval policy for his public utterances. So carefully is everything arranged to prevent anything like a forecast of what he may have to say upon this subject that his private secretary, Hon. Dudley Carleton, is practically as inaccessible to the reporters as Lord Charles himself.

However at the official opening of the exhibition this afternoon, it is expected that his lordship may unburden his mind of some reflections he has stored up during his voyage across the Atlantic, and during his short sojourn in Canada, so that those who are privileged to be present at the ceremony are likely to hear him express some views of worldwide importance.

At the luncheon at the Canadian Club on Thursday, and at the dinner at the National Club the same night, Lord Charles is expected to touch upon Imperial questions.

They Are Liable to Become Hardened In Old Age.

"A man is as old as his arteries," was said some time ago by a French physician, and the saying, like so many others of the phrase loving French, has a good deal of truth in it and not a little error.

There is many a man, old in years, but young in spirit, whose arteries are like pipestems. So brittle do they seem, indeed, that the physician hardly dares feel the pulse lest he crush the friable artery under his finger, yet these old people are active in mind and body and seem often much younger than men of but two-thirds their years.

Again, one meets old and feeble folk, whose lives seem to flicker dangerously, like a candle flame in a draft, whose arteries are as soft and compressible as those of a child.

In general, however, the saying is true, and especially in premature old age it will usually be found that the arteries are hard, with fibrous thickening, if not already more or less calcified. Hardening of the blood vessel—arteriosclerosis is the accepted medical term—consists in a fibrous overgrowth of the walls of the arteries, usually following more or less degeneration of the normal tissues of the vessels. As to just how this comes about physicians are not entirely agreed. It is probable that the change occurs first in the very minute vessels, those that run through the walls of the larger vessels supplying them with blood for their nourishment. When these are hardened by the deposit of fibrous tissue they carry less blood and carry it more slowly, and so the nutrition of the walls of the larger vessels is reduced. This leads to softening, and then nature tries to repair the damage by the only new tissue at her hand—namely, fibrous tissue.

Later these fibrous and thickened walls of the larger arteries may be hardened still more by a deposit of lime salts from the blood.

The arteriosclerosis so common in old age is the result of "wear and tear." An elastic tube dilated by hydraulic pressure and then contracting 10,000 times a day will have done much work by the end of seventy years. In younger life arteriosclerosis is most commonly caused by intemperance—not in drinking only, but in eating, especially meat eating, without enough exercise to consume the excess of nutrient material. Overwork, worry and chronic poisoning, such as lead poisoning, are also factors.

The best thing for arteriosclerosis is not to get it, and the best way not to get it is to be moderate in everything. People growing old should be examined medically every six months, and then incipient arterioclerosis may be detected and perhaps arrested by proper diet, drugs and regimen.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Aug. 30.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Aug. 28 were 2150 cattle, 1475 sheep and lambs, 2000 hogs and 500 calves. The supply on the market this morning consisted of 1150 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 900 hogs and 250 calves. The easy feeling of the past three weeks still continues, and prices showed a further decline of fully ¼c per lb. since this day week, attributed to continued liberal supplies. There was a large attendance of buyers, and an active trade was done. Cable advices from Liverpool noted an advance of ¼c to ⅜c per lb. There was some demand from exporters here for top quality steers, and several lots were bought to complete shipments with. Choice steers sold at 4¾c to 5c; good at 4¼c to 4½c; fair at 3¾c to 4c; medium at 3¼c to 3½c; common at 2¾c to 3c, and inferior at 2c to 2½c per lb. Supplies of hogs were small, and higher prices were demanded for shipments to be made later in the week. The demand was keen for what stock was on the market to-day, and sales of selected lots were made at $8.60 to $8.75 cwt., weighed off cars. Cable advices from all the leading foreign markets on Canadian bacon last week noted an advance of 1s to 3s per cwt., on account of light supplies and a good demand. The market for small meats was steady. Sheep sold at 3½c to 4c, and lambs at 6c per lb. Calves were somewhat scarce at prices ranging from $3 to $12 each, as to size and quality.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market, receipts for week ending Aug. 28 were 4088 cattle and 140 sheep for export account; 1500 cattle, 1850 sheep and lambs, 325 hogs and 650 calves for local consumption. The offerings this morning were 450 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 200 hogs and 70 calves.
